JOHNSON'S NRA LABOR FIGURES ARE QUESTIONED

Fail to Agree with Miss Perkins'.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, is now under fire from two fresh quarters.

The senate has adopted a resolution demanding information on the extent to which the NRA under his administration is being dominated by big business.

Secretary of Labor Perkins has issued a report on reëmployment which raises the question of the accuracy of Gen. Johnson's claims of the number of jobs the NRA has provided.

About the first of the year the NRA estimated "that some 4 million workers have been restored to gainful employment" as a result of the adoption of the codes of fair competition and of the President's reëmployment agreement. By the end of January Gen Johnson had shaded the claim to 3 million men.

But now comes Miss Perkins with her January report on employment, in which she estimates only 2 million more persons employed in industry than last March, not to mention last July, when the NRA was established.

The defense of Gen. Johnson is that his reports are more comprehensive than Miss Perkins', that his figures of 3 millions reëmployed are based on the returns from the questionnaires sent to 800,000 employers.

Miss Perkins' report shows that more than two-thirds of those reëmployed got their jobs directly or indirectly from the government. Of 6,555,000 persons returned to work, only 2 million were employed by private industry.

Figures on Employment.

Civil works	3,800,000
Private industry	2,000,000
Civilian conservation corps	330,000
Public works	285,000
State road projects	160,000

Both employment and pay roll totals declined in January, though not as much as usual at this season, Miss Perkins says.

"Factory employment decreased by 1.1 per cent and factory pay rolls declined by .8 per cent in January," Secretary Perkins said. "The employment index fell from 70.1 per cent of the 1926 average to 69.3 in January. The pay roll index fell from 49.8 to 49.4. These decreases, it is estimated, represent a release of 70,000 employés from gainful employment in manufacturing industries, and a falling off of $883,000 in weekly pay rolls.

"Marked Seasonal Declines."

"Employment in the nonmanufacturing industries was characterized by marked seasonal declines. Despite a significant increase in anthracite mining and gains in the hotel, telephone and telegraph, power and light, and laundry industries, the large decrease in quarrying, nonmetallic mining, and building construction, coupled with an expected decrease in the retail trade group, reflecting the release of employés engaged for the Christmas trade, resulted in the total employment in the nonmanufacturing fields falling off considerably. The combined decline in employment in the manufacturing and nonmanufacturing industries is estimated to have aggregated approximately 500,000 wage earners and the combined fall in weekly pay rolls approximately $5,400,000.

"The January decline is smaller than is usual at this time of the year, when shutdowns for inventories and repairs are customary. The average decrease in factory employment in January over the last ten years has been 1.4 per cent. The pay roll decline over the same period has averaged 4.6 per cent."

Claims Are Punctured.

Miss Perkins' statistics punctured Gen. Johnson's claim that the decline of employment which began in October would be found to have been reversed in January.

Gen. Johnson claims that the NRA has restored 3 billion dollars of purchasing power. Miss Perkins says that weekly pay roll totals in industry have gained 55 millions since March. Since July, however, when the NRA was established weekly pay roll totals have gone up only 21 millions, indicating an increased purchasing power of 630 millions, a little

FAIR BILLS PASS; READY TO BEGIN 5 MILLION BOOM

Jobs to Be Provided for Thousands.

BY EARL MULLIN.

Preparations for the expansion and perfection of this year's greater World's Fair swung to full speed ahead yesterday following word from Springfield of the unanimous passage by the house of enabling legislation for the 1934 A Century of Progress. The legislation now needs only Gov Horner's signature to become law and signal the launching of a substantial boom on the lake front.

Within a week, once the governor has signed the bills, the Fair grounds, silent and almost deserted since last November when the 1933 Exposition closed its gates, will become a scene of widespread activity, with 7,500 men working on projects involving the expenditure of more than $5,000,000.

Jobs for Additional Thousands.

Additional thousands will be provided with employment outside of Chicago in manufacturing pursuits and construction projects traceable directly to rehabilitation and expansion of the Fair. It is estimated that for each man employed on Fair projects in Chicago an additional 10 to 15 men will be employed elsewhere.

Rufus C. Dawes, president of the Exposition, and Maj. Lenox R. Lohr, general manager, were in Nashville on their way back to Chicago to take immediate charge of activities after a vacation in the south. Both expressed gratification at the rapid favorable action of the legislature, and promised a thorough, high speed campaign assuring that the 1934 Fair will be complete in the most minute detail when the gates open on June 1.

Lohr Thanks Legislature.

"The legislators are to be commended," Maj. Lohr said, "on the speed with which they passed the enabling acts. I can now promise that the Exposition officials will, in turn, do their part in carrying on in the same speedy manner in the preparation of the Fair. We have more or less rested during the winter, but that is past. We will give Chicago a real Exposition."

Work on contracts totaling $5,200,000, all of which have been contingent on the passing of the legislation, can now get under way. Pending exhibition contracts total $3,200,000 and concessions contracts amount to $2,000,000. At present the Exposition, which unofficial observers last year described as the most international in character of all world fairs, shapes up as a $40,000,000 show. Last year the estimated cost of the production amounted to $37,000,000.

Building Space All Used.

There now is no more space available for additional buildings. All has been contracted for or covered by existing buildings. Approximately 15 per cent of the space in exhibit buildings remains unrented, but several hundred applications are pending. Within a week, Fair officials said yesterday, all of this space will be sold.

Not only does the start of new activity at the Fair presage one of the largest single steps toward economic rejuvenation in Chicago, Fair officials pointed out, but it means a large item in national recovery.

Construction will especially benefit workers in other parts of the country. Large industrial exhibits will need fabricated steel and lumber, shipping service will entail increased employment, and skilled craftsmen will be put at work preparing buildings and exhibitions. The increased employment will be felt throughout the country.

$1,000,000 Ford Exhibit.

Typical of the industrial exhibits which will be important contributing factors in this economic rise is the Ford exhibit and building. This exhibit, on which work will be started within a week, is situated on the old site of Camp Whistler. One hundred tons of steel for the framework already have been contracted for. The estimated cost of the building is $1,000,000.

The General Motors exhibit, contracted for last week, calls for the expenditure of another $1,000,000 for redecorating, landscaping, and the installation of working models. This year's appropriation makes a total of $3,000,000 which the company has spent for participation in A Century of Progress Exposition.

THE FELLOW WHO STARTED ALL OUR TROUBLES

BLAZE DAMAGES CONVENT HOME OF HOSPITAL NUNS

First last night attacked the convent next door to the John B. Murphy hospital, 620 Belmont avenue, in which Catholic nuns who serve as nurses in the hospital reside. An overwarm heating boiler exploded and sent flames and smoke shooting up through the three floors of the building, which is at 628 Belmont avenue.

Six sisters, including Sister Julia, head of the convent, were asleep. They hurriedly dressed and ran to the hospital to quiet the patients there.

Damage of approximately $2,000 was caused by the flames, which burned a quantity of medical supplies and linens. The fire was confined chiefly to the basement, but some damage was also done to rooms on the first floor.

EATS $5 BILL OFFERED HIM IN NEW DEAL TALK

Denver, Colo., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Deloss Walker, speaker for the national recovery crusade, was explaining to high school pupils here that money doesn't do you any good unless you spend it.

"I'll give this to anybody who'll eat it," he cried.

"I'll eat it!" Harlan Stone, 16, a student, cried right back, and he did.

Walker, somewhat surprised, then explained that if Stone had spent the money for fried chicken it would have been better for his stomach, and in addition would have helped to relieve an overburdened poultry market.

Mallorca to Send 4 Yanks Into "Exile" for 4 Months

MADRID, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Four Americans who were pardoned early this month, after being sentenced to jail for assaulting a civil guard, will be banished from Mallorca for four months only, it was learned tonight in official circles. The four—Mr. and Mrs. Clinton B. Lockwood of West Springfield, Mass.; Roger F. Meade of New York, and Edmund A. Blodgett of Stamford, Conn.—planned to leave Mallorca as soon as their bail has been refunded and to remain in France until the termination of their exile period. The pardons were issued on condition that they leave the Balearics.

Pu-Yi Declines to Have More than One Wife

HSINKING [Changchun], Manchukuo, Feb. 22.—(AP)—When Henry Pu-yi drops his civil title of "Mr. Chief Executive" March 1 and becomes emperor of the new Manchurian empire, his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Pu-yi, will automatically be raised from the position of a commoner to full queenhood.

She is the daughter of a Manchu business man named Jung Yuang, now head of a Manchukuo investment concern here. Little is known to the outside world about her, for it is the tradition and practice in the orient for women in the ruling circles to stay discreetly in the background.

Described as "Manchu Beauty."

Ten years after his dethronement as emperor of all China, Pu-yi selected the present Mrs. Pu-yi as his bride from a group of photographs of "marriageable young ladies" submitted to him by his advisers. She was then described as a "Manchu beauty."

Later, in accordance with Chinese imperial custom, the youthful Manchu nobleman acquired two additional "unofficial wives" or concubines. In the course of time he got rid of these extra wives, largely at the instance of his "No. 1 wife."

It was announced today that when Pu-yi becomes emperor he will lead a "strictly monogamous life," even dispensing with the time honored eunuchs, who have always been employed in all Chinese imperial households to protect the women of the ruler.

Leads Secluded Life.

In her earlier days in Peiping Mrs. Pu-yi received part of her education from two American women, Miss Mirian Ingram and Miss Isabel Ingram, daughters of a Congregational missionary of Philadelphia, from whom she learned English, history, and something about western life. She was described then as modern in her ideas and tastes.

Mrs. Pu-yi has never been seen in public since her husband became chief executive. She leads a secluded, lonely life. The authorities declare that she is in delicate health, never receives visitors, and never appears in public.

In any case, she will not participate in the ceremony March 1.

No Heir to Throne.

The fact that Mr. and Mrs. Pu-yi have no children—especially no male children—has given Manchukuo and Japanese authorities considerable anxiety. When asked how the question of succession would be settled, they told questioners:

"Constitutional means will be found for providing an heir in case the emperor's present wife does not present him with one."

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

MUKDEN, Feb. 22.—Forty Chinese and Russians have been arrested at Harbin accused of plotting to blow up the Sungari river bridge of the Chinese Eastern railway and commit other outrages on March 1 to bring discredit on the Manchukuo government on the day of Henry Pu-yi's enthronement. Official hints make it plain that soviet instigation is suspected.

Fearing other plots engineered from Nanking and Moscow may interfere with the enthronement program, the police and military are taking strict precautions throughout the country. In the new capital their forces have been tripled and strangers are investigated. Even resident newspaper men who are to attend the ceremony have been questioned as to their intentions and attitude.

Prince George Gets Title of "Hail, Mighty Elephant"

KING WILLIAM'S TOWN, South Africa, Feb. 22.—(AP)—To his other titles Prince George tonight was able to add that conferred today by representatives of 600,000 natives in this territory—"Ngangedlovu," or "Hail, Mighty Elephant." Three thousand natives flocked into town as the prince, in the course of his South African tour, attended his first important native gathering.

GANG LEADER MADE ILL, PALS SHAKEN BY VERDICT

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

Ninety-nine years in the penitentiary was the penalty meted out by a jury early this morning for each of three Touhy gangsters charged with the kidnaping last July 1 of John Factor, wealthy speculator.

Roger Touhy, noted as the merciless leader of the Touhy gang, became ill when the verdict of the jury was read at 12:30 a. m. Gagging and coughing, his handkerchief held to his face, the gangster who once defied the Capone syndicate was assisted from the courtroom of Judge Michael Feinberg.

Jurors Watch Exit.

Solemnly the twelve jurors watched him and his co-defendants, Albert Kator and Gus Schaefer, make their exit. Schaefer was white faced. Kator, known as a cold-blooded gunman and killer, managed a last scornful grimace as he followed his companions.

Less than four hours had been required by the jury to decide upon the guilt of the gangsters. The remainder of the six hours they were in their jury room was occupied by deliberation over the proper penalty. Six of the jurors wished to send the defendants to the electric chair. The 99 year sentence was a compromise.

Write Finis for Gang.

The jury had written finis to the so-called terrible Touhys of the northwest side. Of the once mighty gang which controled all the territory north of Irving Park boulevard in Cook county only two remain at liberty. They are Charles (Ice Wagon) Connors and Ludwig Schmidt.

Hopeless and despairing were the three gangsters in their cells after the verdict had been read. The curly haired Roger Touhy lay stretched on a cot, groaning. Kator and Schaefer snarled feebly at reporters.

Encouraged by Delay.

The returning of the verdict came dramatically. Reports had spread early through the courtroom that the jury had decided upon a guilty verdict, but as the hours sped on with no message from the jury room, William Scott Stewart, defense attorney, and his clients took heart.

A crowd gathered. The courtroom swarmed with the curious. Fifteen squads of police mobilized for action. The fifth floor of the Criminal court building, upon which Judge Feinberg's courtroom is located, was cut off by police from the rest of the building. The judge ordered that the defendants be manacled to their guards. There was an air of tense expectancy.

Stewart Is Downcast.

Prosecutor Wilbert F. Crowley, who headed the prosecution; Marshall Kearney, his assistant, and State's Attorney Courtney gathered in the judge's chambers. Outside in the corridor Defense Attorney Stewart talked disconsolately with friends of the Touhy family.

Hope lingered in Stewart despite all the reports from the jury room until at 11:45 p. m. the jurors sent the following significant message to the judge:

"Is 99 years the strongest sentence which can be imposed be-

HERE'S RECORD OF GRIM FATE OF KIDNAPERS

Police and court records show that death or prison has been the lot of kidnapers in more than 90 per cent of the major abduction cases since 1931. Here are the names of these kidnapers and what happened to them:

Charles Y. Abernathy, Negro. Sentenced to 10 years in prison at St. Louis in 1931 for kidnaping Adolphus Busch Orthwein, 13 years old, of the famous family of brewers.

Martin Depew and William Werner, sentenced to life, and Charles Mele, sentenced to 35 years early in 1932 at Kansas City for kidnaping the then Mrs. Nell Q. Donnelly, now the wife of former United States Senator James A. Reed.

James W. Betson, Claude Evans, Arlos Stoops, and Cecil Menninger, 25 years each; Raymond Stoops, 15 years; Dwight Bartlett, 7 years, and Joseph H. Pursifull and Homer Massey, 5 years each, at Peoria, for kidnaping Dr. James W. Parker.

Walter McGee, sentenced to electric chair, and his brother, George McGee, sentenced to life imprisonment, at Kansas City, in July, 1933, for kidnaping Miss Mary McElroy and collecting $30,000 ransom.

Henry Jennings, shot to death in San Francisco last August while kidnaping William F. Wood, cousin of late President Taft.

Randolph E. Norvell, Percy Fitzgerald, and Mrs. Lillian Chessen, life terms; Michael Musila, 20 years, and Charles Chessen and Christ Gitcho, 5 years each, at Edwardsville, Ill., in October, 1933, for kidnaping August Luer, Alton banker.

Harvey Bailey, Albert Bates, George [Machine Gun] Kelly and Kelly's wife, Kathryn, and Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Shannon; sentenced to life terms at Oklahoma City in October, 1933, for kidnaping Charles F. Urschel.

John M. Holmes and Thomas H. Thurmond, lynched and hanged at San Jose last Nov. 26 by mob for kidnaping and murder of Brooke L. Hart.

side the death penalty? What is the possibility of parole under the above sentence?"

Under the law Judge Feinberg was not privileged to reply to this communication. Bailiff Louis Greene advised the jurors of this legal restriction and their debate continued for another half hour.

The six jurors voting for the death penalty decided to compromise at this point, it was reported. The first ballot had been unanimously in favor of the guilt of the defendants. The second had found the jurors split evenly for the electric chair and for life imprisonment. The 99 year sentence was decided upon at the third ballot.

It was learned, incidentally, that the defendants will be eligible for parole under the 99 year sentence after 33 years. Touhy and Schaefer are 36 years old and Kator 37 years old. All will be near the three score and ten mark before being eligible for parole.

Jury Reports It's Ready.

Shortly before 12:30 a. m. there came the long awaited knocking on the jury room door. Judge Feinberg ascended the bench. He gazed sternly at the crowd. Outside could be heard the excited arguments of more persons seeking admission.

"I warn those in this court," said the judge, "that any attempt at a demonstration will be dealt with severely."

A breathless silence followed this warning.

"Bring in the defendants," ordered the court.

In came Touhy, Kator, and Schaefer, each handcuffed to a guard. Twenty police gathered around them. Not to be forgotten were the many rumors that a rescue might be attempted for these men, doomed to spend the main part of their lives behind bars. Two guards and a bailiff stood near the judge.

A small army of photographers and motion picture cameramen made ready for action. The judge warned them not to take pictures until after the verdict had been read.

Defendants Slump in Chairs.

Defense Attorney Stewart whispered to each of the three defendants. They nodded and slumped in their chairs. Spectators at the former trial—which ended in a disagreement of the jury—recalled the boisterous attitude which the Touhys showed upon that occasion when informed that the jury had been unable to agree.

The jury filed in. Observers at criminal trials are wont to remark upon the lamentable lack of intelligence displayed upon the features of juries selected in important cases. This jury has provoked different comment. A grave dignity sat upon them as they faced the judge.

"Gentlemen, have you reached a verdict?" the court asked.

"We have," the foreman, L. W. Curtis, 3742 North Hermitage avenue, replied quietly.

"Hand it to the clerk," the judge directed.

Reads Verdict on Touhy.

"We, the jury," he read, "find the defendant, Roger Touhy, guilty in manner and form as charged in the indictment and we fix his punishment at 99 years in the penitentiary."

There was a gasp from the crowd and a queer, muffled sound from Touhy. He fumbled quickly with his free hand for his handkerchief and pressed it to his mouth.

Quickly the clerk read the similar verdicts for Kator and Schaefer.

Obedient to the court's orders, the crowd remained silent, but the uproar in the corridor outside grew louder.

"Is that your verdict, gentlemen?" inquired the judge.

Voices Thanks to Jurors.

"The court takes this occasion to express its appreciation to the jurors for the attitude which they have displayed throughout this trial," the judge remarked. "Each of you has shown a great devotion to duty and the court is grateful."

Judge Feinberg paused, then added impressively with a significance not lost on those present:

"I trust you will have no occasion to regret doing what you have conceived as your duty."

The defendants were hustled out, the jurors filed after them. Flashlights flared and the cameramen began grinding. Well-wishers flocked around State's Attorney Courtney and Assistant Prosecutor Crowley. Amidst the hubbub, Defense Attorney Stewart made the usual motion for a new trial. The judge remarked that he would waste no time, and set the motion for hearing tomorrow.

State's Attorney Courtney was elated.

"This verdict should prove very beneficial to the citizens of the middle west," he said. "I wish to congratulate my assistants, Crowley and Kearney and Capt. Daniel Gilbert, my chief investigator, and the rest of my staff who worked unceasingly for eight months to build up this case.

"We feel pleased that our efforts have met with success. I admire the courage and intelligence of the twelve men on this jury who did their duty like good citizens. The members of this jury merit the admiration of the entire citizenship of Cook county."

"Well Pleased," Crowley Says.

"I feel as wilted as my collar," Prosecutor Crowley declared after the verdict had been announced.

Without attempting, however, to hide his elation the earnest young prosecutor continued:

"Naturally I'm extremely well pleased with the verdict. It's about time the state got a break. The sentence is about what I expected and felt confident of. Just now I feel pretty much 'let down' after all the excitement, but I'm highly elated."

Attorney Stewart, for the defense, declined to comment on the verdict. "I've nothing to say now," he declared.

Factor Also Gratified.

Factor, who was present at the reading of the verdict with his wife, Rella, and son, Jerome, also a kidnaping victim, expressed gratification at the jury's decision.

"This result is what a kidnaping victim may expect when he cooperates fully with the authorities," he said seriously. "If every person kidnaped joined fully with the police as I have done in bringing the criminals to justice there would be no kidnaping menace today."

The swiftness with which the guilty verdict was reached was in contrast to the mistrial of less than a month ago. At that trial Factor's identification of three defendants was unsupported. At this hearing the evidence of two Touhy gangsters, Isaac Costner and William [Buck] Henrichsen, directly implicated the Touhys in the crime.

Trial Finished with Speed.

The closing stages of the second trial came yesterday with dramatic suddenness. Defense Attorney Stewart completed his presentation of evidence in midafternoon and he and Prosecutor Crowley made their closing arguments as brief as possible.

Judge Feinberg was also brief in his instructions to the jury. He defined various points of law.

"Henrichsen, Costner, and Banghart [Basil Banghart, a Touhy gangster who was one of the defense witnesses yesterday] are defined by the law as accomplices," he instructed the jurors. "As such their testimony is liable to grave suspicion and should be acted upon with great caution. However, if the testimony of such an accomplice carries conviction, it should be treated as the testimony of any other witness."

The forms of verdict as presented to the jury by Judge Feinberg were: Death; life in the penitentiary; any numbers of years in the penitentiary, but not less than five; or not guilty.

Crowley's Closing Argument.

In his closing argument Prosecutor Crowley declared that the state had built up a "monumental" case against the defendants.

"This is a mighty serious piece of business," Crowley said. "And the state has proved its charge of kidnaping for ransom by as complete and full a case as has ever been presented in the Criminal court of Cook county. I challenge Mr. Stewart to state that he has presented any sort of a defense to the evidence here."

Prosecutor Crowley asked for the death penalty in his opening statement, but qualified his remarks by telling the jury they had the right to disagree with the demand of the state for this punishment. He told the jurors that any punishment less than 99 years in the penitentiary would be a "gift" to the defendants. He harped on the 99 year penalty until the courtroom spectators came to the conclusion that this was the penalty the prosecutor was angling for rather than the extreme punishment of death.

"The state has proved a kidnaping for ransom case beyond all reasonable doubt," said the prosecutor. "Now that we have proved such a case no intelligent man can do otherwise than write a guilty verdict. The only defense here is that of the testimony of the thief Banghart."

Stewart Begins His Plea.

Prosecutor Crowley finished the first portion of his statement at 4:45 p. m. and Defense Attorney Stewart began his plea to the jury by an attack upon Factor.

"I agreed upon this jury," Stewart said, "because it appeared to be made up of intelligent men and I believed that Factor would insult the intelligence of any man and the higher the intelligence the greater the insult.

"I am not attempting to justify the crime of kidnaping but I might suggest to you that you consider the fact that the victim of a kidnaping is usually a gambler, a hoodlum, some one off color. Kidnaping is a terrible crime, but the conviction of an innocent man is a worse crime and I hope you keep that fact in mind."

Story of Desperate Man.

"You will notice," he said, "that the defense lawyer has not discussed the evidence. He has chosen to make a personal attack upon Factor instead of talking about the testimony. He hopes to arouse prejudice in your minds against Factor. It is the old story of a desperate man trying to instill hatred in your minds in an endeavor to keep you off the real subject matter.

"We have been forced in this case to reach into gangland itself for evidence to fix the guilt of these men. That is the only manner in which a charge of kidnaping against gangsters can ever be proved. I will leave it to you to judge whether the state's witnesses are not more to be believed than the fiction put forward by Banghart, who had nothing to lose."

Touhy Gangster Tells Wild Story of Crime as Defense's Last Witness in Kidnap Trial

The defense offered for the Touhy gang by Attorney William Scott Stewart yesterday was as unusual as it was unexpected. It consisted chiefly of the evidence of Basil [The Owl] Banghart, Touhy gunman, who shot his way out of two prisons. He told a wildly extravagant tale which furnished a fitting climax to the sensational trial.

Banghart first asserted that Isaac Costner, Touhy gangster who turned state's evidence, did not come to Chicago until July 19, a week after Factor's release. Costner had testified that he came here late in June, 1933, at the invitation of the Touhy gang, and that he took part in the kidnaping of John Factor July 1, and served as one of his guards during the ensuing twelve days of Factor's captivity.

Spins Fantastic Tale.

Under cross-examination Banghart spun a fantastic story in which he pictured Factor as the instigator of his own kidnaping and the willing donor of a second ransom in order to convince government investigators that he had actually been kidnaped. This investigation was presumably in connection with Great Britain's extradition action against Factor.

The courtroom crowd tittered, the jury smiled and even Defense Attorney Stewart, in his closing argument, admitted there were imaginative elements in the gangster's testimony.

Banghart asserted that the Touhys knew nothing of the kidnaping but that Costner was the leader in the attempt to get a second ransom payment of $50,000 from Factor.

"Costner came to me in my apartment at 304 Center street, Park Ridge on July 19," said the gunman. "He said he had something good for me. He said he had been contacting Factor and he believed he could get more money from him. He wanted me to come in on it with him.

"I told him it was too dangerous and he then offered to make an appointment for me to meet Factor. We had some telephone conversations with Factor and finally the appointment was made."

Tells of the Meeting.

"Factor told us the government didn't believe he had actually been kidnaped," the witness declared. "He said he wanted it to appear as if he had been kidnaped and was willing to pay a second ransom of $50,000 to make it look all right. He paid us $5,000 then as 'earnest money.' Costner and I split that between us."

"I agreed then to collect the $50,000 from Factor," Banghart continued. "Costner had to go to New York, but on Aug. 15, as directed by Factor, Charles [Ice Wagon] Connors and I went out to meet a Checker cab near Western Springs. Factor told us there would be two government men in the cab, one driving and one disguised as a messenger boy, but that they were in the plot and would not harm us."

Ruefully the witness described how he and Connors accepted a decoy package containing $500 from the messenger boy and then were forced to shoot their way out of the trap. They abandoned their automobile in the woods and Banghart escaped, he said, by enlisting the aid of a farmer, John Landall, who drove him to Oak Park. Connors is still a fugitive.

"Although this was supposed to be a plot, you carried guns, didn't you?" asked Prosecutor Crowley.

The Rule in Chicago.

"As a rule we do," replied Banghart bitterly. "If you don't do it in Chicago a policeman will shoot you in the head."

"The state's attorney's office is happy that Chicago has that reputation," commented Crowley.

Questioned closely about the date Costner was supposed to have arrived in Chicago, the witness became confused and on one occasion said Costner had been here July 1.

Banghart admitted calmly from the stand that his business was thievery; that he had served in penitentiaries, and had twice escaped.

Another defense witness was Policeman Bernard F. Gerard of River Forest. He testified that he saw Factor the night of his release and that Factor's clothes, shirt, and tie had been clean and unwrinkled, his hands clean, and his nails manicured. Factor had testified he had slept in his clothes while a captive and had not been given an opportunity to bathe.

Gerard, under cross-examination, asserted that he had not talked to any representative of the defense. Recalled later, he admitted he had ridden to the Criminal Courts building with a brother-in-law of Attorney Stewart. He was taken into custody and a perjury charge may be made against him.

Repeats Alibi Testimony.

Miss Emily Ivans, 210 South Kilbourn avenue, repeated the same alibi testimony she had given for Roger Touhy at the first trial. She is a friend of Touhy's wife. She asserted that she and Mr. and Mrs. Touhy sat on the front porch of the Touhy home from 11 p. m. on June 30 to 4 a. m. July 1 talking. The kidnaping of Factor took place at 1 a. m. that morning.

Mrs. A. F. Kiefer, who lives at Wolf road and 22d street, testified that she saw the delivery of the $70,000 ransom in a suitcase by Dr. Herman M. Soloway, Factor's physician, to two men on July 12. Banghart, Costner, W. A. [Buck] Henrichsen, another Touhy gangster who testified for the state, and the three defendants were paraded before her and she said that the men who collected the ransom did not appear to be any of them. On cross-examination she admitted she had been 150 feet away and did not get a good look at the men.

Then came Edward [Father Tom] McFadden, a member of the Touhy gang who was a defendant at the first trial until the case against him was not pressed by the state because of insufficient evidence. He testified that he never saw Costner with the Touhy gang.

Costner and Factor were recalled to the stand as rebuttal witnesses for the state. Costner made a complete denial of Banghart's testimony, as did Factor. The latter was emphatic in his assertion that the Banghart tale was pure fiction.

TWO U. S. ENVOYS IN PANAMA HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

PANAMA, Feb. 22.—(AP)—William C. Burdett and Sheldon T. Mills, first and third secretaries of the American legation, were injured in an automobile accident today at La Venta, in the interior of Panama. They were brought to Albrook air field by a United States army airplane and rushed to a hospital at 7 p. m.

Burdett was the more seriously injured. Physicians said they would have to operate. He had lacerations of the face affecting one of his eyes, and was suffering from shock.

Mills suffered contusions and lacerations. He was discharged from the hospital after treatment.

KIDNAP VERDICT SMASHES POWER OF TOUHY GANG

Rises to Affluence After Capone's Conviction.

The complete fall of the Touhy gang was written early today with the conviction of Roger Touhy, Al Kator, and Gloomy Gus Schaefer for the kidnaping of John Factor. The decline of the gang started last July when Touhy, the leader, and three of his henchmen were arrested by a country policeman in Elkhorn, Wis. Until then the history of the Touhy mob had been one of rising power and despotism.

Only a scattered minority is now left of the once powerful syndicate. Several of the Touhy gangsters are now dead. Some are in prisons, and some are in jails awaiting trial. Others have fled to more congenial regions. In the eyes of police all that was needed to end the menace of the Touhy gang was the conviction of its leader. That has happened.

Rise of Touhy Gang.

The rise of the Touhy gang can be said to coincide with the decline of the Al Capone gang, although even long before that it was a mob of considerable strength and organization. For years the two groups had a working agreement—a sort of treaty—which prevented territorial conflicts. Toward the end there was an open breach, with resultant bloodshed.

The Touhy gang ruled in the northwest suburbs and reigned in the northwest counties as well. Although existing principally on violations of the prohibition law, the Touhys did jobs on the side, such as kidnaping, safe blowing, and robbery. The hoodlums were well trained for these various enterprises, many of them having been convicted rapists, robbers, and general all around bad men.

Roger Touhy, according to the records, built his gang on a natural foundation. Son of a policeman, he was one of six brothers, some of whom as youths were always in jams with the law—so much so that the sorrowing father, tired of interceding for them, finally commanded his brother policemen to "do what you please with my boys." Individually and as a group the Touhys were tough boys.

First Brother Is Slain.

They were clannish, too, and this unity provided the basis for the formation of the ultimate Touhy gang. The first break in the brother chain occurred in 1917 when James Touhy was killed during a robbery. In 1927 another brother, John Touhy, was killed by the Capones, and two years later a third brother, Joseph, was erased by the same mob. The Touhys killed some of the Capones in retaliation but the murder of the two brothers led to a gang truce. The war was getting too close to home.

With three brothers dead by bullets, Roger and two other brothers—Edward and Thomas—were left. Edward disappeared soon afterward, reputedly to lead a decent life in another state. Tommy, too, disappeared, and is said to be dying of an incurable disease. This left only Roger on the active list, but his days of activity were soon ended.

Operating alone, Roger Touhy carried on to even greater power. He surrounded himself with desperate men, killers and robbers, who had nothing to lose—even if killed. All were handy with guns. Their racial complexion was basically Irish. They hijacked beer trucks and they murdered when necessary, sometimes when not necessary. They sneered at the country cops and pushed opposition out of the way. They controlled beer production and sales and bossed gambling and complementary enterprises.

Turn Spotlight on Roger.

During these profitable years—from 1926 to 1931—the spotlight was focused on the activities of the Capone gang, and the Touhys benefited accordingly by their own comparative obscurity. When the Capone ring was smashed, with the gang leader's conviction for income tax evasion, the spotlight turned on the Touhys, and it was about that time that Touhy told the remnants of the Capone gang to "Stay out of my territory."

The full rise of the Touhys then began, and the boys became more arrogant. They turned a bit more to kidnaping, specializing in "snatching" gamblers and others of similar profession who could not readily complain to police. This went on for nearly two years, during which time the gang suffered from the depression even like legitimate enterprises. The legalization of beer, the coming of repeal, depleted the gang treasury. Kidnaping then became a principal business.

Kidnaping of Factor.

On July 1, last year, the Touhys kidnaped Factor shortly after he, his wife, Rella, his son, Jerome, and friends, including A. L. Epstein, had left the Dells roadhouse in Morton Grove. Two carloads of hoodlums stopped the party. Factor and Epstein were put into a car and driven away. Epstein was released.

The kidnapers at first demanded $500,000, then shaved the ransom to $200,000, and then finally to $70,000, but with the tentative stipulation of getting $50,000 more. They kept Factor in a house in Glenview for a day, then removed him to another house. He was held for twelve days. On July 12 W. A. [Buck] Henrichsen, former motorcycle policeman who had turned gangster, met Dr. Herman M. Soloway, Factor's physician, and received from the doctor a ransom of $70,000. That night Factor was freed in La Grange.

Touhy Is Arrested.

Six days later the breakdown of the Touhy gang started, the result of the alertness of a country policeman, Harry Ward. On the night of July 19 Touhy, Gus Schaefer, Willie Sharkey, and Eddie McFadden were driving near Elkhorn. Their car hit a pole. Policeman Ward seized Touhy, and helped arrest the others. The hoodlums were thrown into cells.

With their arrest, federal and state law officers got busy. The four were taken to St. Paul, after a long fight, to stand trial for the kidnaping of William Hamm Jr., wealthy brewer. Before the trial Factor went to St. Paul and identified them as his kidnapers. Later he also identified Albert Kator, a Touhy hoodlum, who, in the meantime, had been arrested here on a robbery charge, but was not implicated in the Hamm case.

The Hamm trial ended in an acquittal for Touhy, Sharkey, Schaefer, and McFadden, but Sharkey a few days later committed suicide in his cell by hanging himself. After a short time the three remaining defendants were brought to Chicago for the Factor trial.

Retrial Is Ordered.

The first trial was held last month. Factor identified Touhy, Kator, and Schaefer. His testimony was uncorroborated except by certain circumstantial facts. The jury disagreed and a retrial was ordered. It was this trial that ended early today in the trio's conviction. McFadden was not a defendant in the second trial because at the first trial the charge in his case was not pressed.

However, McFadden is not yet free. He is being held for extradition to Elkhorn to face trial on a charge of gun toting, a charge growing out of his arrest with Touhy and the others last July 19.

Police say that few of the Touhys are left that amount to anything. Basil [The Owl] Banghart, who told a fantastic story in the trial yesterday, is one of them, but is a prisoner. Isaac Costner, confessed member of the mob, is another. His story was largely responsible for the conviction. Charles "Ice Wagon" Connors, another, is still at large, but most of the important ones are gone—including James Tribble, who was killed in a union fight last September.

MEMBERS OF JURY THAT FOUND TOUHY GANGSTERS GUILTY

JESSE E. WILLIAMS, 45 years old, 18004 Hermitage avenue, Homewood, grocery clerk.

SWINDLES WOMAN OF TAX MONEY IN COUNTY BUILDING

A man who represented himself as a county employé assisting taxpayers in paying their bills yesterday swindled Mrs. Stefney Bolechowski, 5152 Justine avenue, out of $45 in the lobby of the county building. The policing of the lobby is under the supervision of Sheriff William D. Meyering.

The man was without hat or coat and jingled a ring of keys purporting to be to rooms in the county treasurer's office when he approached Mrs. Bolechowski as she entered the building at the Clark street entrance. She had gone there to pay a special assessment of $42.50. The man said he would save her time and trouble by paying the bill for her, so she gave him $45.

She waited an hour for her receipt and the $2.50 change, but the man did not return. Then she appealed to Policeman Charles Bennett, who is stationed in the city hall section of the building. He took her to the office of Police Commissioner Allman, where she made a report.

PLOT TO KIDNAP BANKER BALKED; THREE SEIZED

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—A plot to kidnap Elmer Kerr, president of the Atlas State bank at Union City and hold him for ransom was thwarted today through a series of arrests, it was announced tonight by Capt. Matt Leach, head of the state police.

Leach announced that the roundup of the kidnapers was completed with arrest of the last of three Indianapolis negroes said to have been in the employ of James P. Goodrich, banker and former governor of Indiana. Mr. Goodrich has homes in Indianapolis and at Winchester, which is near Union City.

Two of the three were arrested Wednesday by detectives from the state police department. Those first arrested were John Copeland and Mrs Herschel Cee, wife of the former governor's chauffeur. Cee was arrested tonight. Leach said a complete confession had been obtained from Mrs. Cee.

Mr. Goodrich assisted in the investigation.

FORMER PASTOR HELD IN MYSTERY MURDER OF GIRL

Child Found Slain Near Church in New York.

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The mystery of the murder of Mary Ellen O'Connor, 15, near Massapequa, L. I., a year ago was reopened today when the Nassau county police undertook the questioning of William Henry du Bois, a postoffice clerk and former preacher, who was arrested at Jamaica on another charge.

Until Jan. 19 of this year, when he left the ministry while charges against him were being investigated, Du Bois preached at Christ Apostolic Episcopal church at North Bellmore, about three miles from the spot where the battered body of the schoolgirl was found on Feb. 2, 1932.

Arraigned on Another Charge.

Du Bois was arraigned in Magistrate's court in Jamaica today on the charge of impairing the morals of a minor, and paroled for a hearing on March 2. He was immediately arrested by Nassau county authorities for questioning at the district attorney's office in Mineola about the O'Connor case. Du Bois denied any connection with that affair.

The ex-minister is 32 years old and said he lived in Jamaica with his mother. She was not at home today. Detectives gathered a large bundle of letters and other papers at the house for examination in connection with their investigation.

During the night detectives revealed they had compelled him to don clerical garb found at his mother's home and go before Edwin J. Majerbom, a baggage clerk at the Jamaica station of the Long Island railroad, who had seen the O'Connor girl talking to a man in clerical clothing the day before she disappeared.

Identifies Du Bois.

Majerbom was positive Du Bois was the man he saw talking to the O'Connor girl. Inasmuch as he previously had made erroneous identifications of two men arrested during the investigation, detectives obtained from the clerk an explicit statement that Du Bois looked more like the man in question than any one he had seen since that occasion.

Du Bois was arrested last night by Patrolman Small of the Queens village precinct, who said his 14 year old nephew, a newsboy, had told him Du Bois asked him to come to a room at the Y. M. C. A. during the evening.

Robbery Victim Shoots and Captures One Bandit

William Bernatzke, 2317 South Spaulding avenue, last night shot and captured one of two young bandits who held him up near his home and robbed him of $1. The wounded robber is Frank Kasper, 18 years old, 1618 West 55th street. He was shot in the left leg. His companion escaped. After the robbery Bernatzke procured his revolver from his home and followed them. A block away the bandits stopped to count the proceeds of the robbery. Bernatzke immediately opened fire and dropped Kasper.

KIDNAPER ENDS LIFE IN CELL; PAL CONFESSES

The daring attempt of two novice kidnapers to abduct E. P. Adler, wealthy Davenport, Ia., banker and publisher, from a loop hotel Wednesday was speedily solved by the authorities yesterday. One of the kidnapers committed suicide in his jail cell shortly after confessing his guilt, and his companion was seized and confessed to his part in the bold plot.

Using his muffler as a noose, Charles W. Mayo, 28 years old, of Birmingham, Ala., who asserted that he was not a hoodlum and that the attempted kidnaping was his first crime, took his own life in his cell at the Marquette police station. Several hours earlier he had confessed that he had participated in the attempt to kidnap Mr. Adler from a corridor outside his room in the Morrison hotel.

Seized After Hotel Battle.

Mayo was seized in the hotel a few moments after Mr. Adler had fought a thrilling battle against his two assailants, who were armed with blackjacks. He named his companion as James Lacy, alias Jack Wyman, 34 years old, and the latter was arrested in his hotel room on the south side. After several hours of questioning Lacy also confessed.

Mayo's spirit seemed broken by his arrest and he began talking shortly after his arrest. When policemen assured him that he didn't appear to be of the hardened criminal type he broke down and confessed the entire plot. After his confession he kept repeating that the crime was his first offense.

Other prisoners in the jail said Mayo paced restlessly all the while he was in his cell. About 10 minutes before his body was found George Vasco, the lockup keeper, visited his cell among others, and had given all the prisoners a cup of coffee. Mayo accepted the coffee and talked a few minutes with the policeman.

Found Hanged in Cell.

A few minutes later the turnkey went to the cell to take Mayo to the state's attorney's office for more questioning. He found Mayo's body hanging in a corner. His belt and necktie had been removed with his other possessions before he was placed in the cell, but police had permitted him to keep his overcoat because of the cold. The muffler was in his overcoat pocket.

One end of the scarf was tied around his neck and the other was fastened to the bars at the top of his cell, which was 10 feet high. He apparently had stood on the wooden cell bench while he fashioned the noose and then had stepped off.

Word of Mayo's suicide was kept from Lacy as police questioned the latter after his arrest in a room at the Stanley hotel, 715 East 63d street. He had tried to evade police after he read newspaper accounts of Mayo's confession, and it was feared that if he knew his companion was dead he would refuse to talk at all.

Captive Confesses Plot.

But within about an hour after word of Mayo's death had been received at the state's attorney's office, where the questioning was being conducted, Lacy confessed the whole plot, admitting his part and confirming the story told by Mayo.

He had been reluctant to talk until he was identified by David Swesnik, a pawnbroker at 612 South State street, as one of the two men who purchased a large trunk in his store on the day preceding the attempted abduction.

Lacy, who according to the police was once sentenced to prison in North Dakota, then confessed that he and Mayo had purchased the trunk and had planned to drug Mr. Adler and place him, unconscious, in the trunk and have it hauled to an apartment he said they had rented on East 67th street. There they planned to hold the Iowan until they had been paid $40,000 ransom. The trunk, with air vents drilled in the side, was found in the room in the Morrison hotel which Mayo and Lacy had rented. This room adjoined that of Adler.

His Story of Kidnap Plot.

"If it hadn't been for Mayo getting cold feet we would each have had $20,000 and be free right now," Lacy said. "I didn't like the trunk idea at all, but he was all for it. With that and bungling the job of slugging Adler the whole thing went wrong.

"We had been planning on this job for about a month. I met Mayo at the Y. M. C. A. hotel on Wabash avenue and we got to talking about making easy money and how the Bremer kidnapers had got away with their job tray of law books on the top. I didn't and had made $200,000. We decided that if we just asked a small amount it would be still easier.

"We both knew Adler, Mayo having worked in Davenport in a shoe store, and we knew he was wealthy. He seemed to us to be a good victim, so we worked on the plans for quite a while and decided to snatch him last Thursday. We drove to Davenport to get him and bring him back here, but Mayo got cold feet. He was afraid of Adler's chauffeur.

Watch Trains for Victim.

"We stayed in Davenport until Sunday and, not seeing Adler around, we telephoned his home. When we said we were business men from Chicago and had to see him on important business we were told that Adler had gone to St. Paul but would be in Chicago. Then we returned here and watched all the trains until we spotted him.

"It was Mayo's plan to slug him, drag him into our room and drug him and then place him in the trunk. He said we could pack pillows in around him so he wouldn't move when the trunk was carried and we could put a tray of law books on the top. I didn't like the idea any of the time; I wanted to hold him until night and then march him right out of the hotel with a revolver at his back."

Injured Resisting Auto Thieves

Pushed from Car

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Constance Cummings, movie actress, was thrown from the running board of her own automobile, sustaining an injured hip, bruises, and scratches, when she pluckily leaped onto her car in an effort to prevent it being stolen today. One of three young men pushed her into the street and the trio sped away, but the car was later recovered when the youths, finding themselves pursued by other motorists, jumped out and fled afoot.

U. S. SOCIETY GIRL RETURNS FROM ORIENT IN CREW

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Miss Florence La Bau, an alumna of Goucher college and Columbia university, a young woman of wealth and social position in Ridgewood, N. J., was doing a fourth mate's job on the freighter Wichita when the ship plodded into port today with a cargo of human hair from China, tea from Formosa, silk from Japan, sugar from the Philippines.

Miss La Bau, who is 22, sailed as a passenger on the freighter last October because she fancied that a vagabond voyage might be lazily pleasant, a relief from boredom. She took along trunks of smart clothes and all the other impediments of a socially correct young woman.

Miss La Bau was standing on the chill fo'c'sle head as the Wichita came up the river today. Her smart clothes were packed away somewhere below. She wore blue trousers, a white sweater, and a seaman's greatcoat, with the collar turned up around her neck.

It was when the ship reached Shanghai Miss La Bau put aside her feminine finery. She was studying navigation and Capt. Holth was surprised to find that she had "a knowledge of astronomy, a good knowledge for a woman."

FORMER TELLER SEIZED ON CHECK FRAUD CHARGES

Maurice W. Lane, 46 years old, 1447 Thome avenue, a former teller of the closed City National Bank of Evanston, was arrested by Evanston police yesterday on warrants charging him with issuing fraudulent checks and obtaining money under false pretenses. He is alleged to have cashed two checks, one for $75 and another for $5, at the First National Bank of Evanston. The warrants were signed by J. N. Hauger, 2317 Ridge avenue, Evanston, whose name Lane signed to the checks, and by John A. Stewart, teller of the First National bank. Lane was released on bond of $5,000.

Constable and Girl Found Shot to Death in a Hotel

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Deputy Constable Jesse Baird, 38, and Miss Ernestine Perryman, 17, were found fatally shot in a hotel room late today. Detectives who investigated said it was either a suicide pact or a case of murder and suicide. The girl's mother had reported to police that she had been missing from home since Monday. Baird was married and had two children.

SANDINO KILLED; NICARAGUA IN STATE OF SIEGE

Rebel Leader Is Shot by National Guardsmen.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Feb. 22.—(AP)—A state of siege was declared throughout Nicaragua today by the government following upon the slaying by National Guardsmen of the marine-baiting rebel and patriot, Gen. Augusto Sandino.

To cope with what the government called an "abnormal situation," President Sacasa was empowered with special authority late today to maintain order.

Sandino, 40, who for more than five years fought against "an imperialistic United States foreign policy," was slain last night on the outskirts of Managua by a group of his bitterest enemies, the National Guard, who the government claimed acted "in spite of strict instructions to extend complete guarantees to the Sandino element."

Brother, 2 Aides Slain.

Also slain were Sandino's brother, Socrates, and his two aides, Gens. Umanzor and Estrada.

Sandino's father, Senator Gregorio Sandino, interviewed tonight at the presidential palace, described his version of the manner in which Sandino was killed.

"Myself and my two sons, Cesar Augusto and Socrates, were riding in the automobile of Minister of Agriculture Sofonias Salvatierra. We were accompanied by the minister and Gens. Umanzor and Estrada and a chauffeur en route to the Salvatierra home.

"We arrived at our destination and after having supped visited with the president. On departing we passed the main gate, Campo Marte, and were stopped by guardsmen. Salvatierra, myself and the chauffeur were requested to get out of the machine.

Kin of Minister Killed.

"The rest were driven to the east side of town. I am told that upon passing the Salvatierra home the guardsmen attempted to find and apprehend another of my son's aides, Gen. Ferreti, who was also housed there. During the commotion a son-in-law of Salvatierra was killed.

"I do not know whether Ferreti was taken or whether he escaped.

"Sandino and the party were then driven southward to a village called La Reynaga on the eastern outskirts of the city. Shortly afterward shots were heard and it was believed that my sons and their companions were shot and buried there."

The elder Sandino, in answer to a suggestion that his sons were merely prisoners and had not been killed, said he was sure they had met death.

"No, I feel in my heart that they have gone beyond," he said.

Dr. Leonardo Arguello, Nicaraguan foreign minister, issued a statement in which he said President Sacasa had received constant manifestations of loyalty from all parts of the country "and trusts that he can very quickly dominate an abnormal situation and restore respect to the authorities."

Explains Sandino's Background.

"Sandino for six years headed a small army formed by himself and, guerrilla style, fought against armed United States intervention. This struggle gained great popularity, both outside and inside Nicaragua, and in many cases won him much sympathy and praise.

"On Feb. 2, 1933, President Sacasa popularly and freely was elected Nicaragua's president. Inspired by patriotic sentiments and seeking pacification of the country, he established a peace pact with Sandino under which ample mutual agreement was backed by national opinion.

"Since then Sandino, with many of his old soldiers and aided by the moral and economic help of the country, formed an agricultural colony in northern Nicaragua, which colony was on the road to prosperity.

"Sandino had come to Managua to arrange with President Sacasa ways and means to reach a solution on how to terminate conflicts that had arisen between his men and the national guard, which solution had been reached through the president's efforts.

Gen. Sandino's last letter written to President Sacasa, dated Feb. 19, was published in last night's newspapers.

Among other things, the letter stated that the national guard was unconstitutional. It was signed by the ex-guerrilla chief under his motto, which reads "Ever Forward."

It has not been divulged yet whether any reaction against the government has developed on account of Sandino's death, or what is the attitude of his followers situated in the northern Rio Coco colony.

Sandino's impetuous character and his frank and bold manner in stating that the National Guard was unconstitutional was reported to have caused friction in recent contacts with guardsmen and officers.

An earlier government statement said:

"The government officially states that the action of the Guarda Nacional in killing Sandino was contrary to the instructions of President Sacasa to guarantee the lives of Sandino and his followers while they were in Managua. The president severely reproves these acts of some individual guardsmen and has ordered an immediate investigation."

ENEMY OF "DEVIL DOGS."

Gen. Augusto Cesar Sandino was one of the most famed and perhaps the most difficult individual enemy Uncle Sam's "Devil Dogs" have ever known.

This "most killed" soldier—he was reported "killed" a score of times—was a world figure for several years and was one of the great military leaders who have by shot and sword written their exploits in blood across the exciting pages of Latin-American history.

Sandino's short career was filled with tumult and hatred, campaigns against "Yankee imperialism," and efforts to "free Latin-America from Yankee domination," struggles for a "Spanish communistic republic," and uprisings against "government collapse," revolts against his former friends, sacking of cities, killings of natives and foreigners.

Escapes U. S. Marines.

A dozen times he campaigned against the "Devil Dogs" and each time fled back to the jungle or mountain regions to escape their efforts to exterminate him and his followers.

Airplanes bombed his forts and camps. They couldn't "get" him. He was wounded many times. Sandino probably lost about 4,000 men in his years of battling against his fellow countrymen and the marines. Official statistics showed the United States forces lost 133 men killed in action or dying of wounds between 1926 and February, 1933. Marines served in 1912 as legation guards and in 1927 some 5,000 marines and sailors were landed there.

Married Girl Spy.

Sandino had a wonderfully organized intelligence service, and one of his chief aids was "Blanca, my girl." Blanca was a telegraph operator and gave him government messages coming over her wire. They later were married.

No wedding march played for Augustino and Blanca. Organ music was all right for some folks, but "give me the music I know best, the music of my guns," he said. And so they were married while guns of all caliber rattled and boomed and filled the air for miles with Sandino's "wedding music." His beloved Blanca died last year at childbirth.

SPANISH PARTIES OF LEFT PREPARE FOR REVOLUTION

BY HAROLD ETTLINGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Feb. 22.—[By telephone to Paris to avoid censor.]—The formation of a government by conservative parties of the right within a week "to meet the Red menace," was predicted in official circles here today. At the same time the several shades of Reds in question pushed their plans for action.

With a shift in government toward the right now regarded as a certainty, the Socialists, who have been openly preparing for revolution for weeks, have moved to complete their project of a united front with the Syndicalists.

A council of war has been arranged between Socialist leaders and Syndicalists who have already tried one revolt in Spain and who are giving daily reminders of their existence through bombings and the like, especially in Barcelona.

Catalans Get Allies.

In addition, Julio Just, leader of the left group in Valencia—the Autonomist party—went into a huddle with President Luis Companys of Catalonia and other Barcelona chiefs. This conference, it is reliably reported, resulted in an agreement by Valencia radicals to join the Catalans in flatly refusing to be governed by the right and in taking appropriate action.

Companys already has informed President Alcala Zamora of Spain that his forces will act if a right government is formed. The two districts might go as far as to proclaim their independence from a government they consider undemocratic.

Expect Action by Wednesday.

Barring last minute postponements it is predicted the changes in government will be effected by Wednesday. Alejandro Lerroux may remain as premier, but the cabinet would include a member of Gil Robles' Catholic party if not the leader himself, and the agrarians. Both of these groups have been supporting Lerroux without being represented in the cabinet, but they have served notice they will not continue to do so.

BLAST AND FIRE DAMAGE SALOON.

An explosion tore a hole in the wall of the Century tavern, 1617 East 71st street, during a small fire of undetermined origin early yesterday. Police expressed the belief that the explosion was caused by the action of heat on an air pump.

Policeman to Tell How He Found Rheta Wynekoop Slain

Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop was reported to be in good spirits yesterday as she rested in the county jail preparatory to the resumption today of her second trial for the murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta. The trial was recessed yesterday by Judge Harry B. Miller in observance of Washington's birthday.

Warden David Moneypenny of the county jail said the 63 year old defendant withstood the ordeal of Wednesday, the first day of testimony in the second trial, without serious consequences. Her health, jail guards said, is better than during the first trial, which was halted after Dr. Wynekoop had suffered a series of heart attacks.

Policeman to Testify Again.

Policeman Arthur March, one of the first policemen to reach the Wynekoop home at 3406 Monroe street on Nov. 21, the night of the murder, will resume his testimony at the opening of court today. He will point out the position of the victim on the basement operating table on which her body was found by the police.

His testimony will center on the operating table, which was wheeled into the courtroom Wednesday and left in front of the jury box, despite the defense objections.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles Dougherty said yesterday that the state's case, during the next day or two, would follow closely the pattern of the first hearing. March will be followed on the stand today by other policemen who investigated the murder.

Rheta's Father to Testify.

After the police testimony, probably today, Burdine H. Gardner, father of the slain Rheta, will be called as a state witness. At the first trial Gardner was examined briefly concerning conversations he had with Dr. Wynekoop when he came to Chicago after his daughter's death.

Questioned by the prosecution he said at that time that Dr. Wynekoop had requested him not "to say much about Rheta's health except that her mother died of tuberculosis." He also testified that the defendant had said that she wished to talk to him privately concerning Rheta's death.

Gardner's answer to one of two questions asked him by the defense was stricken from the record on the objection of the state. He had stated, in answer to the question of Attorney Milton Smith, that Rheta's mother died of tuberculosis. Answering the next question he said that Rheta's mother had died in an insane asylum. This answer was stricken and he was dismissed from the witness stand.

Killed by Motor Fumes While Working on Auto

Edward Handschu, 41 years old, an employé in the personnel department of the Illinois Bell Telephone company, was asphyxiated yesterday by carbon monoxide fumes from his automobile while working on the car in his garage at the rear of his home at 915 North Hayes avenue, Oak Park. An inhalator squad tried for half an hour to revive him, but without success. The body was found by a neighbor, William Bruhl.

WALTER BROWN FIGHTS BACK AT SENATE INQUIRY

Always Within Law, He Tells Questioners.

BY JOHN HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Former Postmaster General Walter F. Brown and the Republican party had their day in court today as the Democratic majority of the senate air mail committee temporarily finished their questioning of the former Hoover cabinet member and turned him over to friendly Republican members.

Under the interrogation of Senator Warren R. Austin [Rep., Vt.] the black of the picture the Democrats have been painting for the last three days turned pure white. Mr. Brown, the conspirator in the Democratic scenario, became the hero of American commercial aviation, and Democratic Postmaster General Farley its destroyer.

Obeyed Law, He Says.

Mr. Brown, acting according to the law as he saw it, in all his air mail dealings, including the conference of operators in May and June, 1930, which the Democrats have denounced as an illegal conspiracy to divide up air mail routes among favored companies, Mr. Brown had no interest which would sway his judgment in postoffice matters. Mr. Brown should be credited as the creator of the system of combined air mail and passenger operation which marked the start of real progress in commercial aviation in the United States.

That was Mr. Brown's story, as he answered with pleased celerity the cues tossed him by the Vermont Republican. The experience of being at last in friendly hands was doubtless satisfying, for it followed another round of hostile probing by Committee Chairman Hugo L. Black [Dem., Ala.] into the former postmaster general's personal financial transactions while in office.

Fights Back at Black.

The change of air also proved invigorating to the witness, because for the first time he fought back when Senator Black questioned him concerning his relations with Joseph Bagley, with whom he had a joint stock account in 1928 and 1929—an account in which Mr. Bagley, a seeker of government contracts, put up the money and Mr. Brown was supposed to share the profits.

"I had assumed," snapped Mr. Brown, "that the real issue was whether in my postal administration I followed the policies prepared by congress in respect to postal matters, also whether I observed legal requirements. I can understand, when no evidence discreditable to my postal administration has been produced, it might be found desirable to obscure the issue by dragging in my old friend Bagley and my personal affairs."

Austin Questions Brown.

With pompous respect for the duty to party and the record which he was about to perform, Senator Austin took up the questioning of the witness.

"As a cabinet officer responsible for the policy and practice of the postoffice department," he declaimed, "did you act in accordance with your interpetation of the law?"

"Always in accordance with it," replied Mr. Brown, "and I acted with the approval of the President."

Pinching it between a scornful thumb and forefinger, the senator pulled out a document which turned out to be a copy of Postmaster General Farley's letter to Chairman Black of Feb. 14, in which he raked over all the alleged sins of the former administration in alloting mail contracts.

Attacks Farley's Assertion.

"This excuse for breaking up the fine organization created during your administration," the senator characterized the document as he placed it before him and asked what Mr. Brown had to reply to Mr. Farley's assertion that the contracts had been let by illegal agreements.

"There was no contract nor any extension ever awarded by any agreement," was Mr. Brown's not unexpected answer.

He explained that six months extensions questioned by Mr. Farley had been granted so that contracts under an earlier law might not run out until passage of the Watres' act with its provision for what he considered a fairer method paying the carriers.

"The extensions were perfectly legal and were made under section 1808 of the postal laws," said Mr. Brown as he triumphantly flipped the pages of a black bound volume to the section in question.

Denies Any Favoritism.

"Mr. Farley alleges all this was part of a conspiracy," Senator Austin went on. "Do you know of any agreements in which there was any intention to favor certain companies, excluding other companies?"

"There were no such agreements made or discussed," was the prompt answer.

Chairman Black by this time was picturing complete indifference behind the pages of a sheaf of letters. Senator Wallace White of Maine, the other Republican committee member, was solicitiously attentive. And Senator Simeon D. Fess [Rep., Ohio] beamed through his specs at his friend Walter Brown and fairly chuckled with delight at this Republican and Ohioan showing the Democrats where they got off.

"You wanted the transcontinental routes let by competitive bidding, in other words, you didn't agree with the operators regarding those routes, and they didn't agree with you—is that right?" queried Senator Austin.

Asserts They Disagreed.

"I didn't agree with them at all," answered the witness, "and they were very far from agreeing with me."

"Can you reconcile that situation with the idea that a conspiracy existed?" the senator asked.

Mr. Brown turned on an acid smile. "That wasn't the type of conspiracy I was taught about in law school," was his reply.

Senator Austin's ruddy face was buttered with satisfaction as he opened a volume of hearings by the house appropriations committee on this year's postoffice supply bill and turned to the testimony of William W. Howes, Mr. Farley's second assistant postmaster general in charge of air mail. On page 251, he announced, would be found Mr. Howe's testimony concerning a meeting of air mail operators at which it was decided how cuts in their subsidies should be split up.

Denies Any Difference.

"Is there any difference in principle," boomed the senator, "between meetings held by a Democratic postmaster general and one held by a Republican postmaster general?"

"I don't know of any," was Mr. Brown's answer. "Such meetings are the only practicable and fair way to develop the air mail service."

"You wouldn't charge that that meeting was a conspiracy?" inquired the senator.

"I wouldn't charge that any transaction was a conspiracy unless I had proof," the witness came back.

"In my judgment," said Mr. Brown of the Farley letter, "somebody who didn't know anything about it wrote it for the postmaster general and he signed it."

Makes Lengthy Answer.

It has been contended that the Republican administration was seeking to rule out all but the big air mail operators when a specification was added in 1930 requiring bidders on the longer air routes to have had at least six months of night flying over a route 250 miles long. To answer that, said Mr. Brown, would require a lengthy explanation—which he proceeded to make.

"I could think of no other way to make the aviation industry self-sustaining except to make the air mail operators carry passengers," he said. "They didn't want to. They didn't want the responsibility or expense. They were flying little open cockpit ships. They weren't developing the art of flying. I wanted the industry to live on its own without a subsidy, so I decided to take the step. Since I intended a continuous operation from coast to coast, naturally they had to fly at night."

Tells of First Flights.

Mr. Brown told a long story of his voyages on the first flights of the new service, of near accidents, of learning of Knute Rockne's death just as he was about to laud the safety of air travel in a speech at Savannah. "I wondered whether I had been premature sometimes," he remarked. "I did everything possible to make air travel safe. But it was a responsibility. I could understand how the officer felt who ordered the army boys out the other day."

"Didn't the advance in speed of operation and safety begin with your inauguration of transcontinental service?" asked Senator Austin.

Mr. Brown paused for a modest moment, then replied, "I think it did."

"And didn't the impetus given to aviation by Mr. Brown's administration help the whole air industry through the depression?" Senator Austin wanted to know.

Remarks on Industry's Growth.

"It is the only industry that has grown consistently during the depression," replied President Hoover's postmaster general. Then again he paused, this time to glance in Senator Black's direction before adding: "The only industry that has grown more rapidly, that I know of, is the CWA."

"The committee will adjourn until tomorrow morning," snapped Chairman Black, popping up from behind his screen of papers.

9 ESKIMO DOGS HAUL FOOD TO CONNECTICUT SNOWBOUND FAMILY

Westport, Conn., Feb. 22.—(AP)—A dogsled, drawn by nine Eskimo dogs, carried food and fuel tonight to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mayer-Oakes, isolated by the snow far out on the Saugatuck shores of Long Island sound.

Two drivers brought their sled and dogs to Westport by train from New York, where they had participated in races. They started from the center of the town at 10 p. m. on their four mile trip.

On their return the drivers plan to remain in Westport to bring relief to any others of the numerous residents who have been trapped on their estates since the blizzard Monday.

Volunteers on skis and snowshoes carried provisions to wealthy residents of Westport who had gone without fresh food or milk since the blizzard started Monday night piling up drifts from three to fifteen feet high about their estates.

Although food was brought in thus and telephonic communication was maintained, the exclusive Charcoal Hill section still was isolated as Westport town workers strove to clear the roads.

Rain fell over a large area of the state tonight, eating into the snow barriers on the highways and aiding in the work of freeing some sections isolated by drifts.

ARMY AVIATOR KILLED FLYING MAIL IN STORM

Several Forced Down; 2 Injured, 1 Seriously.

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—One army pilot was killed, a second critically hurt and a third slightly injured today while attempting to push the mail through bad weather. Several others landed at emergency fields.

Lieut. Durward O. Lowry, attached to First Pursuit group at Selfridge field, Michigan, crashed to his death in sparsely wooded country about 30 miles south of Toledo early in the morning while flying from Chicago to Cleveland with a mail load. His plane was demolished and the mail bags were scattered for some distance behind the spot at which the wrecked machine came to rest.

Rushed to Hospital.

With black skies, rain and miserable flying conditions to hamper him, Lieut. Harold Dietz of Easton, Pa., flying from Newark to Richmond, crashed into a pasture near Marion Station, Maryland, about 6 o'clock tonight. He was rushed to the McCready hospital at Crisfield, suffering with a fractured skull and internal injuries. Dietz left Newark airport at 4 o'clock after flying to the west had been suspended for several hours because of hazardous weather over the mountains and increasing storm conditions from the west.

Near Uniontown, Pa., Lieut. Charles P. Hollstein, on his way to Washington from Cleveland with the night mail, crashed in making a forced landing. He suffered superficial face injuries, but, after reporting at Uniontown, he walked back into the hills to his plane and returned with his mail to send it on by train. Hollstein attributed his accident to faulty radio.

A Lieut. Schlater, flying mail from Cleveland to Chicago, brought his plane down to a safe landing at Goshen, Ind., airport in a blinding snowstorm and sent the mail on by train.

Lieut. James McCoy, flying the mail west, was forced down near Kylertown, Pa., in the fog bound Alleghenies today. He escaped injury. Officials at the Kylertown airport said the engine burned out. He took off from Newark about noon.

Born in Chicago.

When Lieut. Lowry crashed he was fifty miles off his course. He was the first army pilot to be killed while carrying air mail. Three other pilots were killed in the west while practicing for the army mail carrying mission. Lieut Lowry was born in Chicago in 1903 and attended the Northwestern Military and Naval academy in Geneva, Wis. He graduated from the University of Michigan in 1927 and was commissioned in the regular army in 1929.

Lieut. Lowry lived at 615 Monroe street, Ann Arbor, Mich., but his wife was staying with her parents in East Windsor, Ont., since he reported for the army air mail duty at Cleveland. His mother, Mrs. Dorothy Lowry Reisdorf of Detroit, learned of the death of her son by reading a newspaper in another passenger's hands on a bus there.

"Who was the one that was killed?" she asked the holder of the paper.

"Lieut. Durward O. Lowry," he read.

"O, my God! That's my son," she cried.

"My son, my son; why did they do it?" she moaned.

"They shouldn't have had to fly at night through winter storms, through the night, over unfamiliar courses that it took months for commercial pilots to learn."

Blames Faulty Radio.

Unreliable radio equipment was responsible for Lowry's death, according to Capt. Fred Nelson of Selfridge field. Capt. Nelson is in charge of the investigation.

"Any commercial flyer would have been killed had he been up against the same combination of circumstances Lowry faced," he said.

Another army pilot was killed today but he was not engaged in mail flying. Lieut. Frederick I. Patrick lost his life near Denison, Tex., his home, when his plane spun into the ground from an altitude of 200 feet. Patrick had been assigned to Barksedale field at Shreveport, La. He had been flying since 1918.

Aviator Burned to Death as Plane Crashes; 2 Hurt

Brunswick, Md., Feb. 22.—(AP)—W. T. Henley, Washington aviator, was burned to death when his airplane turned over in a forced landing near here this afternoon. Two men were painfully burned in an attempt to rescue him. Henley's motor balked soon after he took off from a farm field, according to Sergt. Douglas Kendall, airplane mechanic at Bolling field, Washington, who saw the crash. Kendall and Joseph Carey of Brunswick, suffered burns around their hands and arms in a futile effort to get Henley out of the burning ship.

EIGHT NAVY FLYERS SAVED WHEN ENSIGN BRAVES SEA TO SHORE

Oceanside, Cal., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Eight navy aviators, forced down in the fog shrouded, surging seas off here last night, owed their rescue to the daring of Ensign Victor H. Soucek, who dived from his plane and swam to the shore to send out a call for help.

As the planes which went down were converted land planes, not meant to ride long on ocean waters, being equipped only with one light float apiece, it is doubtful if they could have weathered the night.

After Soucek's phone call was radioed to sea from the San Pedro fleet broadcast headquarters, navy craft hurried to the waters west of Oceanside and picked up the wrecked personnel.

Ensign Soucek is the younger brother of Lieuts. Zeus and Apollo Soucek, noted for speed and altitude flights.

House Naval Group to Hear Charles F. Adams Tomorrow

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Charles Francis Adams, Hoover secretary of the navy, and two of his former aides were summoned today to testify before the house naval affairs subcommittee now conducting an investigation of alleged profiteering by private plane and engine companies under navy contracts.

Mr. Adams will appear before the committee on Saturday, it was announced. Tomorrow, David S. Ingalls, his former assistant secretary for air, will take the stand, and on Monday the committee will hear Edward P. Warner, who also served as an assistant navy secretary for aeronautics under Mr. Adms.

Committee Hears Smith.

Continuing its examination of private plane company officials today, the committee heard J. A. B. Smith, president of the Curtiss Airplane and Motor company of Buffalo, a subsidiary of the Curtiss-Wright corporation, declare that his company had made a net profit of only .023 per cent on five and a half million dollars worth of planes built for the navy since 1928.

The house military affairs committee, which is conducting a similar inquiry into profits on army airplanes and engines, was in recess today. It is understood, however, that the committee will summon Maj. Gen. Benjamin Foulois, army chief of aeronautics, and other high officials of the army air corps to the stand when it resumes its investigation.

1928 Records Burned.

Mr. Smith told the naval affairs subcommittee that his company has been furnishing airplanes and flying boats to the navy since 1916. He was unable to produce profit figures for years prior to 1928, he said, explaining that the records had been burned. But he furnished the committee with the following list of profits and losses since that year:

In 1928, 34.4 per cent; 1929, 16.79 per cent; 1930, a loss of .03 per cent; 1931, profit of 2 per cent; 1932, loss of 20 per cent; 1933, loss of 25.6 per cent.

In 1930, Mr. Smith told the committee, his company was taken over by the Curtis-Wright holding company. Chairman Delaney of the investigating committee asked whether this had anything to do with the slump in profits noticeable after that year.

"Three weeks of this inquiry," said the chairman, "would seem to indicate that whenever a holding company takes over a producing company, profits disappear."

The witness replied that he was certain the chairman's observation did not apply in the case of his company.

MAIL PLANE FROM WEST ARRIVES; ANOTHER HALTED

One army plane carrying mail from the west arrived at the Chicago airport on schedule last night, and another that was due to arrive at 2:05 this morning stayed over at Omaha on account of bad weather. An east bound plane hopped off on time from the airport shortly before 3, carrying a heavy load of mail.

The ship that arrived landed at 10:45 p. m., bringing more than 500 pounds of mail, part of a lot at Salt Lake City that had accumulated on account of stormy weather. The second plane, from Cheyenne, landed at Omaha. The Omaha-Chicago flight was canceled because of the weather, and the pilot instructed to take off at 8 a. m.

Yesterday 400 pounds of mail were flown into Chicago from the east by army flyers and transferred into west bound planes. One hundred pounds of mail was flown out of the city to the southwest. Flying weather in the east and west was reported to be clearing up somewhat late last night.

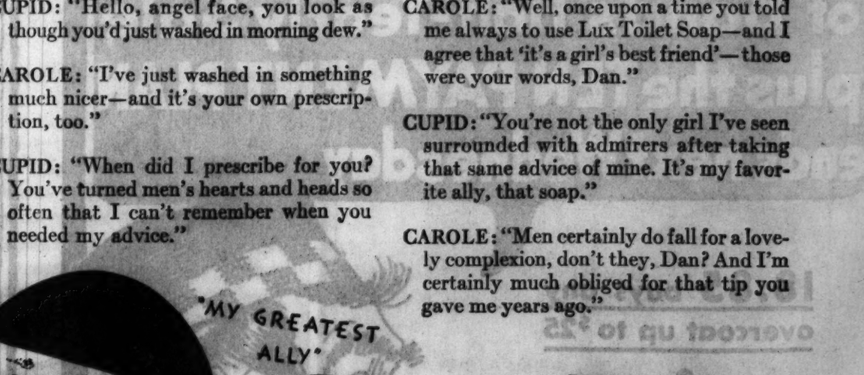
CAROLE LOMBARD AGREES WITH Cupid

PARAMOUNT STAR



CUPID: "Hello, angel face, you look as though you'd just washed in morning dew."

CAROLE: "Well, once upon a time you told me always to use Lux Toilet Soap—and I agree that 'it's a girl's best friend'—those were your words, Dan."

CUPID: "You're not the only girl I've seen surrounded with admirers after taking that same advice of mine. It's my favorite ally, that soap."

CUPID: "When did I prescribe for you? You've turned men's hearts and heads so often that I can't remember when you needed my advice."

CAROLE: "Men certainly do fall for a lovely complexion, don't they, Dan? And I'm certainly much obliged for that tip you gave me years ago."

And how angelically smooth and fresh is your skin? If your complexion doesn't make hearts flutter, why not do what 9 out of 10 screen stars do—use fragrant, white Lux Toilet Soap? Cupid's prescription will work for you, too—give you a romantically lovely skin, and the love that goes with it.

CWA VOIDS DIRT CONTRACTS FOR PARK PROJECTS

Investigator to Make U.S. Report on Deal.

A. M. Crain, Illinois purchasing agent for the Civil Works administration, yesterday announced that the CWA on Jan. 26 had canceled its half of the contracts awarded to John P. Moriarty for 85,000 cubic yards of black dirt to be used on south park CWA projects.

The south park board, which holds the other half of the contracts, has stopped further payments to Moriarty. The board already has paid approximately 60 per cent of its share, while the government has not paid a cent of the $22,612.63 which it has been billed for its half of the 26,000 cubic yards of black dirt already delivered.

Green to Get Report.

S. Norman Moe, chief of the Chicago division of investigation for the CWA, is examining charges upon which the cancelation action was based. He will present a full report to United States District Attorney Dwight H. Green within a few days. Mr. Green refrained from comment until he has had an opportunity to study the report.

It was reported that the investigation would reveal evidence warranting presentation to a grand jury. There were rumors that collusion in bidding, with resultant unreasonable prices, would be revealed. Noncompliance with federal regulations, a condition covering a multitude of points, was the only reason given for cancellation, however.

Moriarty was reported last night to have offered a reduction of 50 cents a yard from the contract price of $1.75 in order to avoid prosecution by the federal government.

Park Official Upholds Price.

The contract price, however, was upheld by George T. Donoghue, south park superintendent.

"I still think it was a fair price, considering the quality of the soil and the time of the year," said Mr. Donoghue. "Figures naturally are higher during the winter. If the CWA can buy dirt more cheaply elsewhere more power to them. If that is the case they might have done so sooner. As it is orders were approved four or five times by them on various contracts. We never placed an order before it was approved by the CWA.

"What mystifies me is why the prices were approved over a 30 day period if they were thought to be too high."

Mr. Donoghue said that the $1.75 figure was consistent with a price of $1.60 a yard paid recently by the west parks for similar work and with a $1.33 price paid by the Lincoln park board on a summer contract.

Details of Transaction.

The bids were taken by the park board and sent to the CWA for official sanction. They received approval from William J. Pallowick, deputy purchasing agent for the CWA. Harry Camit, materials engineer of the CWA for south park projects, certified the dirt as suitable. Bills were sent out separately, half to each party in the contract.

"At that time," explained Mr. Crain, "we had to accept bids on good faith if we were to put 200,000 men to work immediately in Illinois. Hundreds of orders were signed in a single day. It would have been impossible to investigate them then. The matter was handled by the south parks because we did not have our own forms then, and could not take bids directly as we do now."

Investigation began early in January. Mr. Crain expressed confidence in the integrity of Mr. Camit and Mr. Pallowick.

$500,000 Cancellations.

The right of cancellation is contained in all CWA contracts, and the "vendor's certificate" includes a guarantee that the amount of the bill presented is "correct and just." In all, more than $500,000 in contracts have been voided, Mr. Crain said.

There were unsubstantiated reports that Moriarty had filled out and mailed in allegedly collusive bids for all companies submitting bids and that the work then was divided. Another report was that the dirt was taken from public property.

Asked about reports that the contracts may be investigated by the Cook county grand jury, John J. Anton, 6513 Harvard avenue, foreman of the jury, would say nothing except:

"The grand jury has no statement to make."

Bandits Rob Messenger; Seize U. S. Postal Pouch

A United States mail pouch containing 19 special delivery letters was taken from a messenger of the Englewood postoffice last night by two gunmen. The messenger, Charles McGahan, 6316 South Carpenter street, was seized when he returned to his parked car after delivering a letter at the home of Police Captain Matthew Zimmer, who is near death in his home at 8132 South Sangamon street. The bandits displayed revolvers and forced him to drive to 78th street and Parnell avenue, where they ejected him.

Aldermen Ready to Risk Jail to Cut Municipal Court Pay

Members of the city council finance committee announced last evening that they would go the limit to force the reluctant Municipal court judges to join the economy parade of other Chicago city employes.

"We are willing to go to jail if it is necessary to do this," the committeemen announced through their chairman, Ald. John S. Clark [30th].

The judges, who took slight salary cuts in 1932 and 1933, have refused to accept reductions in their 1934 pay, and have gained court orders directing the city to repay to them the amounts deducted from their pay envelopes for the two previous years. They recently transmitted an order to the committee calling not only for full pay but for an addition of $521,482 for court expenses for 1934 over the amount appropriated in last year's budget.

Ignore Pay Cut Agreement.

The open breach between the judicial and the legislative departments of the city's government is the culmination of a two year campaign by the judges. Most of their number, including Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby, who now leads the fight against the council's economy plans, once agreed to accept the salary cuts. In their current demands, however, the judges ignore these agreements.

They also ignore, the aldermen pointed out last evening, that all other city employes have accepted far more substantial pay cuts than the judges have ever taken. In the budget for 1933, the pay of judges, clerks, and bailiffs of the court was cut by 48 days' wages, while all other city employes accepted a reduction of 78 days' pay from their annual pay checks.

Plan 52 Days' Pay Cut.

"We plan to appropriate enough money to pay the judges' salaries on the basis of a 52 day pay cut in the 1934 budget," Ald. Clark said last evening. "All the rest of the city's help, including other officials whose salaries are fixed by statute, will take a 78 day pay cut.

"If the little clerk who gets $120 a month can take a cut like that the judges, who get $10,000 a year, can surely take a 21 per cent reduction which the 52 days' pay would lop off their checks.

"The judges are the only ones who are not going along with the city's efforts to cut expenses. They are the only poor sports. They have been grumbling for two years and now they want to get all deductions back in full and also get full pay for 1934."

Aldermen Defy Court Order.

The council committee, which is trying to draw up a preliminary city budget within the $44,000,000 estimate of revenue for 1934, also announced that it would defy the court order of Superior Judge Denis E. Sullivan, who issued a writ of mandamus directing the city to pay $336,000 to the judges. This sum represents the 48 days' pay cuts imposed in 1932 and 1933. The mandamus order would compel the council to include an appropriation for this amount in the 1934 budget. This order has been appealed by city attorneys, however.

Yesterday the aldermen learned that Judge Sullivan has indicated that he will issue a similar writ on behalf of the court clerks and bailiffs who took the same pay cuts as the judges for 1932 and 1933. This order would call for $650,000 in back pay.

Opposes Economy Efforts.

The Municipal court has been alone among city departments in opposing the economy efforts deemed essential to cure the city's financial ailments. In 1932, Chief Justice Sonsteby made the first move by increasing the staff of assistants in his own office. The council compromised by allowing some increases after cutting certain demands.

When the 1933 budget was under consideration the judges all rebelled against accepting the 48 day salary cut which had been imposed on them in the previous year. Many of the judges asserted that they would accept the cuts if Judge Sonsteby reduced the mounting expenses of his personal office staff.

Over the strenuous protests of all the judges the council made appropriations which included the 48 day cut in the 1933 budget, but Judge Sonsteby's staff remained untouched. During the year, however, the clerks and bailiffs of the court, heartened by the rebellion of their judges, also made protests.

Judge John H. Lyle obtained an injunction order from Superior Judge Peter H. Schwaba, restraining city officials from making monthly deductions on the basis of the annual pay cut from judges' salaries. The injunction included an order to pay judges up to date, although other city employes' salaries were months in arrears. After this order was issued the judges made a rush for their pay checks and depleted city funds which had been accumulated for a general pay day. Judge Lyle then filed the mandamus suit in the Superior court upon which Judge Sullivan made his recent ruling.

FIND PROSPERITY, NOT NEED, BREEDS THE MOST CRIME

Environment's Effects on Child Told.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

Prosperity, not unemployment, was blamed yesterday for increase in crime by Ray Mars Simpson, psychologist attached to the Illinois State reformatory at Pontiac. With statistics and charts Mr. Simpson demonstraed to members of the American Orthopsychiatric society, in its eleventh annual meeting in the Palmer house, that crime reaches its most flourishing peak when both money and jobs are plentiful.

"The old adage that money is the root of all evil can be no more aptly applied than here," Mr. Simpson said. "Our studies reveal evidence that boom times are more fertile fields for crime than depression, although many people blame depression with its attendant unemployment for crime."

Shows Trends by Chart.

By means of a chart Mr. Simpson showed that employment trends and crime matched each other closely in Illinois. Beginning in 1925 there was a rise in employment and crime lasting until 1928, when there was a drop [a period of unemployment], then a rise to 1929, and another sagging with the depression.

The chart for Chicago showed 211,000 arrests in 1926, 161,000 in 1927, 150,000 in 1928, 194,000 in 1929, 183,000 in 1930, and 150,000 in 1931.

A similarity in the rating of the relative importance of the ten commandments by a group of 200 prisoners and a group of 200 university students was the finding in another study described by Mr. Simpson. Both groups placed "Thou shalt not kill" and "Honor thy father and thy mother" as the first and second in order of importance. Both placed last the commandment to keep holy the Sabbath.

Reports on Crime Genesis.

In the morning session of the society's meeting Dr. Baruch Silverman of the Mental Hygiene institute, Montreal expressed the opinion that normal homes produce as many delinquent or mentally maladjusted children as broken homes. This is a revision of the old idea that criminality, drinking of parents, and cruelty are the chief causes contributing to delinquent children, he said. Dr. Silverman's study was made among 138 children who had been taken from their homes by a child placing agency because of bad home conditions, not because they presented behavior difficulties.

"We feel that the subtler forms of parental misbehavior have much more to do with delinquency among boys and girls than do excesses in drinking and immorality," Dr. Silverman declared, "although we previously had thought these factors would have the worst possible effect on the child. Our study shows that there is apparently no direct relationship between such behavior in parent and child and a far greater influence is attributable to the subtler emotional relationships within the family."

Cites an Example.

As an example Dr. Silverman described a family where the father wished to punish a child, but didn't strike him because of "modern" ideas on child care. Instead he carried the feeling of enmity in his mind, a manifestation of "civilized ways," which, Dr. Silverman said, was more harmful in its result than if the father had given vent to his feelings.

"I am not advocating that parents should beat their children," Dr. Silverman added, "but in addition to having a civilized attitude they must overcome their own inner feelings of hatred, disgust, jealousy, disappointment, or frustration. The effect on children of such parental lack of balance will destroy their sense of security and undermine their emotional and mental foundation."

LUTHERANS BACK PRESS LABELS ON CHURCH GROUPS

Want Modernists Set Apart.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Pastors representing more than 100,000 Lutherans of Chicago yesterday attacked the request made by Congregationalist pastors that the public press abolish the labels of fundamentalists, modernists, and liberals. The Congregational ministers unanimously adopted a resolution to this effect at their regular weekly meeting last Monday. The resolution grew out of a controversy which followed the announcement of the findings of a questionnaire sent out by Prof. George H. Betts of Northwestern university to ascertain the beliefs of Chicago Protestant pastors.

The Congregational proposal was attacked at the joint conference of Evangelical Lutheran Missouri synod pastors and teachers in session yesterday at Concordia Teachers' college in River Forest. The Lutheran resolution, unanimously adopted, pointed out that such labels as "fundamentalist" and "modernist" are to be deplored, but are necessary "because of the departure of groups from the divinely inspired scriptures."

Lutherans Cite Scripture.

The Lutheran conference cited scripture upholding such separation. It quoted St. Paul, who urged Christians to "mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned, and avoid them, for they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly, and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple."

The Lutheran ministers pledged themselves "to impress upon our people and the children of our schools more thoroughly than ever before the basic differences between the churches which have left the principal tenets of the inspired word of God, including such great truths as the creation of the world, the atoning and vicarious death of Jesus, the divine redeemer, and the work of the holy spirit through the word."

"We ask the press," the resolution continues, "to employ not only such terms as have been in vogue heretofore but to increase, wherever possible, its classification of the churches, so that the reading public may be able by such expert and careful editing to distinguish the various groups even more clearly than at present."

Largest Lutheran Group Here.

The Missouri synod is the largest of the three general Lutheran groups in Chicago and is the largest church group here with the exception of the Catholics. During the last few years, according to statistics of the Chicago Church federation, the Missouri synod has grown more rapidly than any other of the church groups on which the federation makes reports. Contrary to the findings of Prof. Betts' questionnaire among other churches, which show strong trends away from belief in hell, a personal devil, and angels, the Missouri synod leaders affirm their unanimous adherence to such belief.

INDIAN, TIED TO STAKE AT OWN WISH TO AVOID HARMING FAMILY, DIES

WINNIPEG, Feb. 23. — (AP) — The story of how an Indian, subject to fits of insanity, insisted on being tied to the stake to avoid the risk of harming his family was told today by Sergt. Percy Rose of the mounted police.

Rose was sent into north Saskatchewan to investigate rumors a demented Indian had been tied to his sled and left to die a "witchcraft" death.

Instead, he found the Indian, Gasgana, at his own request was tied to his sleigh and later to two stakes. His brother tribesmen slept by his side and brought him food and drink. Despite careful attention, Sergt. Rose found, the Indian died of natural causes within a few days.

Pursuing Policeman Fires on Two Bandits in Loop

Policeman Daniel Marsh, in a commandeered car, pursued three bandits in North Wells street last night after two of them had stolen $35 in a robbery of the B. G. Sandwich shop at 174 West Randolph street. Policeman Marsh, summoned by a pedestrian, came up as the two boarded a waiting car containing a third man. They drove north in Wells street. Marsh stopped an approaching car and took up the chase. He fired several shots at the fugitives. They got away after crossing the river.

OPPOSED TO U. S. TRYING TO SPEND OUT OF SLUMP

Senator Reed Appeals to Bankers to Protest.

Easton, Pa., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—United States Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, in an address before Group 3, Pennsylvania Bankers' association, here tonight, appealed to the bankers of the country to voice their protest against the administration's "fallacy of trying to spend itself back to prosperity."

"What's ailing us," he said, "is a functional derangement, not an organic injury. All the world is coming out of this depression without resorting to the policies that our country is taking. It's your fate that is being dealt with, your country that is being pawned. We're all interested equally. I beg you to voice your protest if you think this is the wrong policy."

Points to Securities Act.

Describing the securities act as typical of the rapidity with which legislation is being passed and lack of consideration of the bankers of the country that is being shown, Senator Reed said that by common consent of congressional leaders and the administration a feature of that bill be eliminated. That feature is the personal liability of directors of an institution that takes part in the distribution of securities.

Senator Reed viewed with alarm the increase of the public debt at the rate of $25,000,000 a day.

"I'm not complaining of the relief appropriations," he said, "but I am complaining of hiring men on public works who are leaving their jobs in private industry."

Tells of Irrigation Projects.

"That is not relieving suffering," he added; "that is demoralizing the life of the community.

"Part of the money that is being spent so freely is being spent on costly irrigation projects that are opening up a million acres of farm land while the government is plowing under the crops of other farm lands.

"I am concerned about the trend of things—the destroying of crops, the slaughtering of live stock, the plowing under of cotton. It just doesn't make sense."

The spending of the government is increasing with velocity with every month that passes, he said.

Voices Inflation Fears.

Declaring that he was of the opinion that the courts will not sustain the transaction which took away the gold from banks and individuals, Senator Reed said the government sooner or later will come to the end of its borrowing power.

"Then," he said, "will come the other inflationary powers given the executive under the Thomas amendment—free coinage of silver, issuance of federal reserve notes against the purchase of government securities, and unlimited issuance of printing press money."

MOTOR LICENSES ISSUED TO 7,000 MORE AUTOISTS

The office closed yesterday at 4:30 o'clock, and those arriving after that hour were not served, but it is expected that the office will be kept open tonight until add those seeking licenses are cared for. On Wednesday, when the office remained open until late in the evening, about 10,000 licenses were issued.

Only two days more are left of the period of grace granted by Mayor Kelly on Wednesday, after 7,000 motorists were arrested for failure to purchase 1934 state and city licenses. The drive will be resumed on Monday and will be continued until all the cars in the city have been equipped with new state plates and city stickers, it was said.

PASTOR RECALLS SERVING CHICAGO CHURCH IN 1880

An echo of the reunion of old time members of historic St. James Episcopal church, Wabash avenue and Huron street, which was held on Monday evening, was heard from Julesberg, Colo., yesterday. The Rev. Dr. Andrew C. Murphy of St. Anthony's church in Julesberg telegraphed his congratulations upon the reunion to the rectory of the church here.

The telegram said: "I learned of the reunion after reading a copy of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. I served at the altar in St. James' church for seven years, beginning in 1880."

The Rev. Dr. Duncan H. Browne, present pastor of St. James' church, explained last evening that the present church structure was built in 1880. The church was founded in 1834, one year after Chicago was incorporated as a village.

Johnson Testifies at Hearing on Thirty Hour Week

Fail to Agree with Miss Perkins'.

The resolution unanimously adopted by the senate calls for the names of all persons who have been or are now employed by the NRA in Washington and their compensation; the present and past business connections of such persons; the codes with the formulation of which each such person has been connected; the positions now held by former employés, particularly positions in code authorities, and the names of members of code authorities with their business connections.

Ecort to Block It Fails.

When the resolution which was introduced by Senator Gerald P. Nye [Rep., N. D.] was brought before the senate Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, sought to block it on the ground that Gen. Johnson thought it was intended to put certain NRA administrators "on the spot."

"While I do not exactly like that language," said Senator Nye, "the facts are that the adoption of the resolution will most assuredly put a large number of men who are employed by NRA 'on the spot.' The contention has been made and repeated many times that NRA is chock full of representatives and spokesmen of big business institutions, and that through their activity and their control, codes are being adopted and codes are being enforced which are very injurious to the smaller units of business throughout the country.

"I cannot understand why there should be objection to the facts being known as to just what are the connections of men in NRA headquarters with business institutions. I cannot understand why there should be objection to a program that calls for information from NRA that will reveal how many men have been prominent in the formulation of codes, how many of them have finally resigned from NRA and accepted places on code authorities where in effect they become not only the judge, the jury, and the arresting officer, but the executioner as well, as can be demonstrated by a large number of cases."

Couzens for Adoption.

"Is this a personal government to such an extent that we cannot find out who operates the agencies of government?" demanded Senator James Couzens [Rep., Mich.]. "It has come to the point where the senator from Arkansas himself, in making the motion, spoke about the embarrassment of adopting such resolutions. I submit that we have not yet got a dictatorship; I submit that this is not a personal government, and with all my respect and high regard and almost adoration, for the President, I do not believe that I am befriending him when I stand up and indorse the running of agencies of the government by persons of whom we have no knowledge. I object to that."

The resolution was referred to the finance committee from which Senator Robinson returned it the next day with its scope confined to persons employed by the NRA in Washington and with the report that Gen. Johnson had been before the committee and had said he had no objection to it. Thereupon it was adopted.

REFUSE PETITION FOR WRIT TO FREE BOY IN DEBT CELL

The State Supreme court at Springfield yesterday denied a petition for a writ of habeas corpus filed in a new attempt to obtain the freedom of William Weber, 17 years old, who is now serving a six months' sentence in the county jail for nonpayment of a $2,500 judgment in an automobile accident case.

For two years, since the judgment was returned, the youth has carried the matter to one court after another in an effort to evade serving the sentence imposed when a jury found him guilty of malice in connection with the case. His attorneys appealed to the County court, the Superior, the Appellate, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and the State Supreme court.

The judgment was obtained by Mrs. Lucille Saliba, 1433 South Scoville avenue Berwyn, who was injured by an automobile driven by Weber.

Fraternal Groups Discuss Proposed Laws on Debts

More than 200 representatives of 85 fraternal benefit societies affiliated with the National Fraternal congress met yesterday at the Palmer house for their annual midwinter conference. Among subjects discussed was that of legislation affecting the reserves of the societies, as the federal bill for a moratorium on debts of governmental bodies. It was estimated that more than $1,000,000,000 of municipal, state, and road bonds are held by members.

MORGENTHAU AND TWO AIDS CALL TRUCE IN ROWS

O'Connor and Robert Will Keep Their Jobs.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., has smoothed out two rows within his department which threatened to produce the resignations of a pair of high officials, it was learned today.

The two officials are Controler of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury L. W. Robert Jr. Both, it now has been arranged, will stay on in the treasury for the time being, acquiescing in new requirements laid down by Secretary Morgenthau.

Mr. O'Connor's publicity efforts on his own behalf and in the interest of his political future in California had previously irritated the secretary while Mr. Robert was under criticism from contractors because of his handling of the public building program.

Agrees To Submit Releases.

Controler O'Connor, however, has now agreed to submit his publicity to Herbert E. Gaston, Secretary Morgenthau's press contact man, before issuing it. Assistant Secretary Robert has been shifted to new duties.

Under these arrangements both men are expected to stay in the department. O'Connor may resign later on his own volition should the chances of his candidacy for governor of California improve. The primary is to be held this summer, and O'Connor is considered a compromise candidate.

Experiences New Trouble.

Having arranged his difference with Secretary Morgenthau, Controler O'Connor now, however, is experiencing trouble with the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation of which he is an ex-officio director.

Other directors privately charge O'Conner with endeavoring to place his political satellites in the corporation.

• The Tribune will announce, next Sunday, a project which should interest people everywhere. For the purpose of indicating the vast natural resources of the Mississippi Valley, the Tribune has established in Kendall County an experimental farm. Through this large field laboratory the Tribune hopes to develop many practical commercial uses for new products.

• The subject is set forth in a two-page Pictorial News-Review illustrated with 19 photographs in The GRAPHIC, the feature magazine with next Sunday's Chicago Sunday Tribune. If you are interested in the development of new agricultural products and methods, don't miss this new feature starting in next Sunday's Chicago Tribune.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

More than 770 Millions Tied Up in Them.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The dead hand, striving to run the world from the tomb, appears to be increasing its ghostly activities. Foundations are increasing in number until some 300 of various types and sizes are reported scattered over the United States. Departed millionaires, unable to take it with them, still control the power of their money beyond the grave, and the amount of capital thus sequestered from taxation is growing into staggering amounts.

In 1931 the capital funds of 108 foundations, according to one widely accepted computation, amounted to no less than $770,863,271.

Majority of Founders Dead.

The greater part of it, supposedly, is exempt from taxation as being philanthropical or educational endowments. In most instances foundations have been set apart for specific purposes by men and women no longer living, although in some cases the founder of the foundation sets it up during his lifetime.

With it has come a growing criticism that too much taxable wealth is being tied up and taken out of taxation, some of it in perpetuity, by dead men who amassed it.

Also complaint is being raised that some of the enterprises seem to be taking on the aspect of propaganda mills.

Three groups of foundations in New York, bearing the names of Andrew Carnegie, John D. Rockefeller, and Russell Sage, are perhaps the most widely known. These three have total capital funds of $453,636,969. It probably would be even more if the securities markets were higher. Carnegie, the old iron master, and Sage, a Wall street figure of years ago, from their graves are controling the work of more than a quarter billion dollars, this through foundations set up.

Three Chief Foundations.

The capital funds of these three groups, as gathered from the records, some for 1932 and some for 1931, appear as follows. They are exempt from taxation, according to officials of the foundations:

	Capital funds
Carnegie Corp. of New York	$158,124,064
Carnegie Inst. of Washington	35,413,454
Carnegie Foundation for Advancement of Teaching	31,409,589
Carnegie Endowment for International Peace	11,956,933
Carnegie Hero Fund	5,750,000
Total	$242,654,040
Rockefeller Foundation	$147,522,644
General Education Board [Rockefeller]	49,792,285
Total	$197,314,929
Russell Sage Foundation	$ 13,668,000
Grand totals	$453,636,969

The Carnegie specialty is education: Rockefeller, public health and advancement of knowledge; Sage, social and living conditions.

As to accusations of propaganda, the Carnegie people, as part of their peace enterprises, are charged with seeking to develop the "international mind," instead of nationalism. The Endowment for International Peace leaves footprints at the league of nations and in resolutions has urged upon the United States ratification of adherence to the world court of the league. Its year book says it has helped financially the efforts of the national world court committee. This committee has been propagandizing for favorable action on the world court.

League Committee Aided.

Also the report says that the American Committee of the League of Nations association in Geneva is almost entirely dependent on the subvention made by the Carnegie endowment. It also made a special appropriation to aid the League of Nations association to carry on its "educational program," especially on disarmament. Likewise, it helped grubstake the Washington office of the League of Nations association and aided in financing its house organ, the League of Nations Chronicle.

The peace endowment was established in 1910, Andrew Carnegie's contribution being $10,000,000 of 5 per cent mortgage bonds, the revenue to be used in hastening the abolition of international war. Four years later the great war broke out. Appropriations for the year 1933 were $687,848, and for this year the estimates of expenses run $717,820.

The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching was established in 1905 under trustees chosen by Mr. Carnegie to whom he committed an endowment of 10 million dollars, with a second gift of 5 millions in 1908, the entire amount being in United States Steel bonds.

Income for Pensions.

The income was to be used in providing pensions for college teachers in the United States, Canada, and Newfoundland. An additional $12,000,000 was given by the Carnegie corporation in 1918. A summary in the 1933 report analyzes the distribution of $25,370,122 in 166 colleges and universities. Last year the amount spent was $1,717,300.

In 1913 Mr. Carnegie added a division of educational inquiry, for which he gave $1,250,000, to conduct studies of colleges and universities and to investigate problems of education.

The foundation is perhaps best known to the world by this division, which is making a specialty of rebuking the colleges for the wickedness of putting on gridiron contests for the public. In 1929 it issued a report on American college athletics which created a furor by charging that one athlete out of every six or seven in intercollegiate athletics was subsidized, almost to the point of professionalism.

Established in 1911.

The Carnegie corporation, largest of this group, was established by Andrew Carnegie in 1911 for the advancement of knowledge. Its endowment was 135 million dollars, of which ten million is applicable elsewhere than in the United States. Until the time of his death Mr. Carnegie was head of the corporation.

The income only is subject to the disposal of the trustees. In this it is unlike the foundations set up by John D. Rockefeller, where principal as well as income may be expended. In some funds, like that set up in 1917 by the late Julius Rosenwald, there is a condition that both interest and principal must be expended within 25 years of the death of the founder. The Rosenwald fund was for the "well being of mankind," and it called for an extensive Negro rural school program in the south.

The corporation, since its inception has acted not as an operating agency, but rather to further the work of established colleges, educational organizations, and learned societies. It spreads over the United States, Canada, South Africa, Australia, and New Zealand.

23 Millions to Universities.

Of the $136,693,807 voted since the corporation was founded in 1911, $23,719,000 went to colleges and universities for endowment.

Research and publication got $8,595,000; educational organizations, learned societies took $9,849,000, and church organs cost $1,490,000. The Church Peace union was given $2,297,000, and the endowment for peace received $1,828,000. The national research council was given $5,853,000 and the American Library association $2,060,000. The list of appropriations made last year fills 20 pages of the report.

The Carnegie institution of Washington, established in 1902, is devoted to scientific research, while the hero fund, 1904, is to recognize heroic acts performed in the peaceful walks of life.

The loudest and latest cry of propaganda has been raised against the Russell Sage Foundation. Within the last week, it has put forth a report urging that socialization, or the collective ownership and operation of all natural resources is the only solution for the coal mine problem. The situation is not without its ironies, as indicating that although the dead hand may still control the power of money from the grave and keep it from the tax collector, the propaganda itself may head off in strange directions.

Soviet Russia Praised.

Sage had a reputation for being as hard bit as they come in Wall street in the olden days, and here a fund named after him and composed of dollars he wrenched out of railroads and markets, issues a report cheering soviet Russia and declaring that the NRA and the New Deal are all wrong in calling for a truce on the right to strike. The stock comment was enough to make him turn in his tomb. The report, likewise, throws a brickbat at the Rockefeller company union plan which was put into effect in Colorado nearly two decades ago, a plan worked out by McKenzie King, later premier of Canada.

The foundation was created by Mrs. Russell Sage as a memorial to her husband. The initial endowment was $10,000,000, to which $5,000,000 was added by her will. It was incorporated in New York in 1907, "for the improvement of social and living conditions in the United States." Its revenue last year was $750,000.

A massive stone building around the corner from Gramercy park is the home of the foundation, and its doors of bronze and glass, made by Tiffany, give it the air of an old Florentine or Venetian palace. The foundation goes in for charity organization, industrial studies, family welfare, remedial loans, statistics, surveys, and exhibits and similar things, and among its accomplishments was a regional survey of New York embracing a radius of 50 miles.

Publishes Many Books.

It has published about 100 books and 400 pamphlets and it maintains consultation service in delinquency and penology. It aided the Hoover commission on recent social trends, in which other foundations also assisted, and it has made detailed studies of Cleveland, Pittsburgh, and other cities on request of the authorities.

It has made unemployment studies, the director saying its aim has been to present the facts of what the various state and federal governments are doing in relief. It has many angles of contact with social and charitable agencies, which cluster in the neighborhood. Incidentally, the great growth of governmental bureaucracy in the direction of so-called "welfare" work might be measurably attributed to the activities of various foundations in getting publicity for "new stuff" as fast as it can be thought out by social workers, which by many, is deemed propaganda. In fact, one of the Sage activities has been to promote the matter of publicity for social work, and to brighten up the "handouts," or canned goods.

As to the coal report, which said it was possible to envisage for the United States a system similar to that of soviet Russia, the foundation says its department directors have freedom to voice their conclusions and theories just as a professor in a university.

Samples of Propaganda.

"Scientific management is possible in one industry only as part of a total planned economy, and this is impossible for capitalism. It requires social ownership and administration as the logical and inevitable next step in the evolution of the economic system."

"Realism demands recognition of the fact that the struggle for the market makes such industry-wide planning under profit making ownership impossible."

"With private, profit making ownership, the unified control which is necessary for a planned economy is lacking."

The report assails the leadership of the United Mine Workers and the policy of the NRA in respect to strikes, holding that it placed labor at a disadvantage.

INSULL HEARING IS WOUND UP BY SURPRISE MOVE

Ettelson Calls McCulloch as Only Witness.

The Insull "town meeting" before Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley was suddenly concluded yesterday afternoon when Attorney Samuel A. Ettelson, who brought charges of collusion and fraud in the Middle West Utilities and other Insull receiverships, produced a surprise by calling only one of 17 witnesses he had subpenaed.

Only Charles A. McCulloch, receiver of Middle West, was placed on the stand by Mr. Ettelson after Attorney Henry I. Green, special counsel appointed by the court, had concluded his presentation of evidence. Judge Lindley said he would hear oral arguments and then accept briefs or permit the case to be submitted on briefs alone, but that he preferred the latter course. After a conference of counsel this was agreed upon. The briefs will be filed on March 9 and the answers on March 16.

Draws Objections from Opponents.

Mr. Ettelson drew an outburst of objections from the opposing lawyers, who had been accusing him all the morning of going far afield and wanting "to make a speech" when he asked Receiver McCulloch whether he wished to resign. To the objections Ettelson replied that his lawsuit sought the removal of Mr. McCulloch and his counsel among other things, and that one of his objects would be accomplished if Mr. McCulloch resigned.

"Your honor would have that much less to decide," Mr. Ettelson added.

Further objections were sustained by the court when Mr. Ettelson asked Mr. McCulloch whether he had not recently said he wished to resign.

Won't Resign, Says McCulloch.

"Your honor, may I make a statement?" said Mr. McCulloch. Having received permission, he proceeded vehemently:

"There is not a lawyer nor a banker in this courtroom who doesn't know that at one time I wanted to resign. I made a statement here the other day to the court that I would be glad to get out at any time that he said so. I want to say now that I am in that same position today. What I have gone through here the last two or three weeks—more damage has been done to the morale of Middle West by the delay and the keeping of my organization here than anything since Martin Insull left.

"But right now I am under fire, so to speak, and I am not going to resign, your honor, at this time. What I would do after this inquiry is over is up to me, but at the present time I do not intend to resign."

Ettelson's Surprise Move.

Mr. Ettelson then announced that he had no more witnesses, to the manifest astonishment of those present, who had been mystified when he subpenaed 17 bankers, lawyers and safe deposit managers, most of whom had already testified.

When Judge Lindley expressed the opinion that the briefs should be prepared with all possible dispatch Ettelson walked up to the bench with a ponderous document and said: "Your honor, here is mine now." The opposing counsel glared as if this were some sinister trick and later insisted that all briefs be filed on the same day, because of the "psychological and publicity advantages" of being first. The judge did not accept Mr. Ettelson's purported brief.

Lawyer Cross-Examined.

The morning session was occupied with the conclusion of Ettelson's cross-examination of Attorney Robert N. Golding, counsel for holders of $26,000,000 of a $40,000,000 outstanding issue of Middle West gold notes, and the testimony of Charles S. Dewey, chairman of the noteholders' committee.

Mr. Ettleson sought to show that the noteholders' committee was subject to the influence of the banks, which are secured noteholders, while the gold note holders are unsecured. He tried to show that creditors with secured claims created the noteholders' committee and that Edward Eagle Brown of the First National bank and Abner J. Stilwell of the Continental Illinois National bank suggested the employment of Kirkland, Fleming, Green & Martin as counsel for the committee.

But to all his questions regarding circumstances that would create a conflict of interests to the detriment of the unsecured note holders, Mr. Dewey replied "I have no knowledge of that," or "I never heard anything about that." The witness said the late Edward N. Hurley, co-receiver of Middle West, suggested Kirkland, Fleming, Green & Martin.

ENDS LIFE WITH CHLOROFORM.

Mrs. Augusta Lins, 69 years old, apparently despondent over ill health, committed suicide in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Rose Patton, 1417 South 4th avenue, Maywood, yesterday by inhaling chloroform.

Footsore and Weary 'Hunger Army' at Gates of London

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Hunger marchers converging on London from all parts of the British Isles are rapidly nearing their destination.

The police, who have taken elaborate precautions to prevent any disorders, got their first scare today when the report reached London that a truck had been overturned and a shop window smashed in Saint Albans, 18 miles from the metropolis.

When the report was received flying squad cars loaded with foot and of mounted police, equipped with riot helmets and long wooden staves, dashed in the direction of the marchers.

The scare was the result of a mistaken report, however, for the overturned truck smashed the shop window in what proved to be the result of an accident.

Meets Scottish Marchers.

THE TRIBUNE correspondent came upon the marchers seven miles before the scene of the accident. They were the Scottish marchers. They are 400 strong and headed by J. McGovern, one of the leaders of the Independent Labor party and a member of parliament from Shettleston, a Glasgow district.

Although footsore and weary, those on foot looked well fed. The remainder, riding bicycles, were perfectly fit and comfortable. All the marchers declared they had plenty to eat, drink, and smoke, and had received a good reception everywhere.

Behind the main body trailed about 50 marchers trudging along in small groups, too weary to keep up the pace. The men were quite orderly. They politely passed tin cans and asked for coppers to help buy food for the marchers.

McGovern said his party is scheduled to reach the outskirts of London tonight and march into the city tomorrow to prepare for Sunday's demonstration in Hyde Park. He said there was no trouble of any sort anywhere. It was intended to be a perfectly peaceful demonstration, he explained.

Women Weary of Tramping.

At Hatfield, 12 miles from London, this correspondent found 50 women marchers from Nottingham and Derby. The sturdy northern women were worn out and weary, but were determined to do what the men are doing. One looked longingly at this correspondent's automobile and remarked:

"I would give anything to finish the journey in that. My feet are like lumps of raw meat."

The correspondent offered her a seat, but the girl replied:

"No, there are only about 12 miles left. I'll finish the last stretch or die in the attempt."

A police official today said he had received no intimation there would be any trouble. He added an unruly element of London "toughs" make a point of using such demonstrations to stir up trouble.

LAUNCH 5 MILLION BUILDING BOOM AT FAIR IN WEEK

Final Work on Exhibition to Employ 7,500.

foreign villages on the site of the old Midway. The total cost of these exhibits is estimated at $1,500,000. Work on these projects also will get under way within a week or ten days.

Speed Construction.

In the matter of employment the Ford exhibit will again serve as a measuring stick. The company expects to use two hundred men on each of three daily shifts. All other exhibiting companies have indicated their intention of maintaining similar construction speed.

The Fair administration also will add to the employment figures with an increase of two or three hundred men. Changing of the location of units of the old Fair and the redecorating and refurbishing of existing buildings will take probably two months and will enable the spending of thousands of dollars.

Probably the greatest single change which is now pending is the moving of the Midway from the mainland to the Northerly island to make room for the new group of villages. At the same time, Camp Whistler on the mainland, which will be replaced by the Ford exhibit, is to be moved to the south end of the island, where the Boy Scout camp formerly was situated. These changes, coinciding with the new construction program, probably will mean that night shifts will be maintained throughout the grounds.

Augment Staff.

At present a skeleton organization of 2,000 men is employed by the Fair. This group, both in field workers and office help, will be augmented at once by several hundred employés. Two other major features will get under way, now that the legislation has passed. These are advance ticket sales and foreign participation.

Blocks of tickets for more than one hundred thousand admissions have been contracted for, but could not be sold until the legislation was passed. Chicago teachers will be among the chief beneficiaries of the advance ticket sale, Harry P. Harrison, chief of admissions, said yesterday. The advance sale is to be so arranged that teachers will be given an advantage in the advance purchase.

Foreign participation, contingent on a diplomatic invitation by President Roosevelt, has been agreed on by a score of foreign powers. However, nothing tangible in this respect could be accomplished until the invitation was extended by the national government, and that had to wait for state action. Practically all of the world powers have signified an intention to participate officially or semi-officially through commercial exhibits.

The single remaining action necessary before the Fair actually gets under way, besides the governor's signature, is passage of the south park board ordinance authorizing the Fair to use the public ground which it occupies. This action, too, could not be taken until the state legislation was passed.

Mayor Kelly Elated.

Mayor Kelly last night expressed satisfaction at the rapid action of the state legislature in passing the enabling legislation. He stated that he believed that A Century of Progress would attract more people this year than in 1933.

"I am delighted to hear that this legislation was given such active treatment," the mayor said, "and now we can go full speed ahead. When I suggested last year that the Fair be put on again in 1934, I was not certain that my suggestion would bear fruit, but now we are all in readiness.

"This year the Fair should draw a larger attendance than last year because those who came here in 1933 are convinced that Chicago is a good place to spend a vacation. They were treated courteously and found the hotel rates reasonable. The effect on business in Chicago and throughout the country will be good. The South Park board, I understand, is ready to pass the ordinance officially authorizing the Fair on its grounds and the city will sign its contract with the board shortly."

PASS FAIR BILLS, 138 to 0

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The lower house of the Illinois general assembly today passed the enabling legislation for Chicago's 1934 World's Fair, assuring completion of the giant exhibition on scheduled time and opening the way for immediate launching of a construction program that will materially benefit Chicago and the nation.

A Century of Progress acts were approved by the unanimous vote of the house, 138 to 0, and await only Gov. Horner's signature to become law. The governor is expected to arrive in Springfield Sunday from a rest in Arizona.

Simultaneously with the passage roll call it became known that the governor attempted last night to have the bills amended in two respects and that he withdrew his requests when Speaker Arthur Roe of Vandalia told him that amendments at that critical stage would endanger the quick passage of the enabling acts.

Just why the governor waited until the eve of passage was not made clear. The bills were approved by the senate last week and it was known that the governor's assistants have been informing him almost daily of legislative proceedings. But his demands came just after sponsors of the bills had been successful in rending off all other amendments and hoped that at last the bills would have clear sailing.

Would Have Brought Delay.

Had the governor persisted, it would have been necessary to send the bills back to the senate for concurrence in the amendments once the house had acted. This would have required the approval of 34 of the 50 senators and the task of bringing them back to the capitol from their homes today or tomorrow would have been difficult.

Mr. Horner told the speaker by wire yesterday afternoon that he wanted the bills amended so that Illinois would not be required to pay rentals at the Fair for state exhibits next summer. He also ordered that the bills be redrafted to force the Fair to restore to its original state the grounds it occupies on the lake front. This, Fair attorneys told him, was already provided in an ordinance passed by the south park commissioners, who control the lake front, and a one million dollar bond posted to insure that restoration will be made, buildings demolished, and the grounds returned to their former state.

State Exemption Opposed.

It was also pointed out to the governor that if Illinois was exempted from paying its exhibit rentals other states could claim the same exemption, and that state participation was an important factor in bringing crowds to the Fair. Illinois paid $62,000 in rentals last summer.

These facts brought to his attention, the governor agreed with Speaker Roe that nothing should interfere with quick passage and withdrew his objections.

Any fears entertained that not enough members would remain in Springfield today — Washington's birthday—to pass the bills were dispelled when the house convened at 9 a. m. The chamber was well filled, most of the 150 seats being occupied.

The Fair bills were a special order of business, upon motion of Representative William J. Connors [Dem., Chicago], so they were called for consideration immediately.

The motion for passage was made by Representative Benjamin S. Adamowski of Chicago, the young Democratic leader. In a brief appeal he stressed the importance of the legislation and painted a word picture of the benefits which will accrue to both Chicago and the state if the bills passed.

Then the roll call began.

Wait for Tardy Ones.

The aye votes tumbled in in quick succession and at the end of the roll 118 votes had been cast. Speaker Roe knew that many members were on their way to the statehouse who wished to vote for the bills, so he held announcement of the count until they had arrived. The tardy votes trickled in for the next hour, and when Clerk Charles P. Casey made his final count 138 members had approved the bills. The necessary vote was 102 under the two-thirds majority rule for emergency measures.

Predictions that the Fair bills would receive the necessary vote were made last Friday after THE TRIBUNE polled the membership of the house, asking if the representatives would remain over the holiday today and vote for the measure. An attempt was made to reach each member over local or long distance telephone and of those reached 106 promised to stay and vote for the bills. One who opposed them then, Grover C. Borders [Dem., East St. Louis], was in the aye column today.

Ready to Come if Needed.

Three members who told THE TRIBUNE that they would be present and vote for the bills were absent today. Roger F. Little [Rep., Champaign] and P. J. Breen [Dem., Vermilion Grove] were ill and could not attend, although Representative Little telephoned that he would hasten to the capital if his vote was needed. The third member was Jesse Hall [Rep., East Peoria].

Cook county members absent were John M. Bolton, William J. Gormley, and John R. McSweeney, all Democrats. Bolton and Gormley are ill. McSweeney is vacationing in Florida.

OFFERS BILL TO LEARN SENTIMENT TOWARD CREATING NEW STATE

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Because "the problems of Cook county and the remainder of the state are widely different and becoming more and more incompatible," Representative Clinton Searle [Rep., Rock Island] today introduced a resolution in the Illinois house asking that a committee be appointed to ascertain the sentiment of the citizens on the matter of splitting Illinois into two states.

Searle did not word his resolution so that Cook county alone would become a separate entity. But it was obvious that he felt the largest county of the state should go its own way and allow the rest of the state to proceed as it saw fit.

In part, the resolution read: "Because of the fundamental differences in governmental problems in congested metropolitan areas in comparison to governmental problems in rural areas, which is reflected in the constant turmoil and confusions at the seat of government at Springfield with the almost continuous sessions of the legislation, there is a growing public belief among citizens and the press of Illinois (but which is also evidenced in the state of New York) that these irreconcilable differences can only be solved by a changing within the state of the form of government and governmental structure."

RENEW CAMPAIGN FOR CONVENTIONS HERE DURING FAIR

Trade Group Acts to Draw 800 Gatherings.

The Association of Commerce today will renew its campaign to bring between 800 and 1,000 national conventions to Chicago this year. The announcement was made yesterday by William J. Hennessy, head of the association's convention bureau, as soon as he had heard that the Illinois legislature had enacted the enabling legislation for the World's Fair of 1934.

Chicago last year was host to more than 75 per cent of the major national conventions of the country. The total reached nearly 1,500.

Uncertainty Causes Delay.

Because Fair officials were uncertain until after the Fair closed last November whether the exposition would be continued this year, the Association of Commerce did not begin its work with 1934 convention committees until a few months ago. In the meantime a large number of the national conventions had arranged for sessions in other cities.

Mr. Hennessy said yesterday that it is too late now to get in touch with the committees of conventions which are scheduled to meet in June, July, and August. He added, however, that his bureau will endeavor to bring several hundred conventions to Chicago during the last two months of the Fair. Field representatives yesterday were talking with representatives of the committees in charge of the American Steel Treating and the Automotive Service Industries conventions, whose delegates will total 25,000 persons.

Chicago a Favored City.

"We are getting as many or more inquiries on convention facilities in Chicago as we were a year ago," said Mr. Hennessy. "During a recent tour of the United States I found good will toward Chicago and the World's Fair in every quarter."

Of the 1,478 conventions held in Chicago last year 1,286 convened during the five months of A Century of Progress. Convention delegates and members of their families accounted for upward of 1,500,000 paid admissions to the Fair. Many stayed here for several days after the close of their meetings.

Reduce Rail Rates.

The railroads in the Central Passenger association will coöperate with Fair officials by offering reduced tariffs to Chicago during the duration of the Fair, as they did last year. An official of the railroad association told Mr. Hennessy recently, he said, that the volume of business done under the low rate made the railroad passenger business show a profit.

Chicago hotels also have agreed to offer again the same low rates to Fair visitors as were prevalent during 1933, Mr. Hennessy said.

APPEAL TO U. S. FOR RELIABLE VOCATIONAL GUIDANCE FOR YOUTH

Cleveland, O., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Vocational guides from several parts of the country called upon the federal government today to furnish bewildered youth with a reliable map of the occupational trends in the nation's changing economy.

In no other way can they hope to correct the present condition in which 80 per cent of the population is being trained for 20 per cent of the jobs, they told the largest convention ever held of the National Vocational Guidance association, which is meeting here in conjunction with a half dozen other personnel and guidance organizations.

"The nation will not indefinitly permit the present prodigal waste of lives and talents," Dr. Walter V. Bingham of New York, president of the Personnel Research federation, told the evening session. Present estimates of supply and demand in specified occupations are but shrewd guesses, he held, and many are worthless or misleading. More data more quickly centralized is needed, with a fast growing science of occupational distribution.

REPORT MONDAY ON SCOUTS' WORK TO HELP NEEDY

Chicago troops' response to President Roosevelt's request to the Boy Scouts of America for a national "good turn" in the form of collecting furniture and clothing for the needy will be reported on Monday to the Chicago council of the Boy Scouts at their annual meeting in the Hotel Sherman. Reports from individual troops will be presented and later will be embodied in a report to be sent to the President. Other activities of the Scouts during the last year will be described.

Ten Beaver awards, made annually to volunteer workers who have been active in Scout work here for ten years, will be made to John R. Winterbotham, Walter S. Hubbard, M. B. Auerbach, the Rev. William S. Braddan, Robert E. Hecht, James B. Forgan, Orlando Neeven (deceased), Bishop Bernard J. Sheil, Ernest A. Schmidt, and Sydney T. Baker.

Every Lucky Strike is made from the finest tobacco and only the center leaves. Not the top leaves—because those are under-developed—not ripe. They would give a harsh smoke. Not the bottom leaves—because those are inferior in quality. They grow close to the ground, and are tough, coarse and always sandy. The center leaves are the mildest leaves, for which farmers are paid higher prices. 6 SCHOOL ACTS TO AID CHICAGO PASS IN HOUSE

BY WILLIAM FULTON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The Illinois house today passed six bills embodying the program of Mayor Kelly and the board of education for the financial rehabilitation of the Chicago school system. The bills were passed with 114 votes, thus making them emergency measures, and since they have already passed the senate will become effective upon the signature of Gov. Horner.

But the victory was not obtained without a struggle. For a time it appeared that the bills would be delayed until next week as one downstate representative after another declared that the Chicago delegation would "run out" in the future on other legislation pending for bolstering up the public schools in other sections of the state.

Passage Held Vital.

Benjamin S. Adamowski [Dem., Chicago], Chicago leader, and Elmer J. Schnackenberg [Rep., Chicago], minority leader of the house, plunged into the debate and declared that the bills must be passed immediately. They assured the downstate legislators that the Chicago delegation would be on hand when the third special session begins deliberations again next week.

As a further argument Adamowski moved that the so-called pegged levy bill, which will provide additional revenues for the school board, be set over for special order of business next Tuesday. Adamowski also pointed out that the Chicago sanitary district has six bills still pending in the house that require passage.

The Chicago school trustees have contended on numerous occasions recently that the six bills and the seventh, the pegged levy bill, are imperative if the school system is to continue functioning.

Summaries of Measures.

The keynote bill in the program, containing Mayor Kelly's plan for selling the $40,000,000 school bond issue to the federal government, was the first to be considered and passed. After the downstate opposition was ironed out the other five measures followed in rapid succession. The bills in the order in which they passed are summed up as follows:

1. Authority for the Chicago board of education to mortgage school properties unused for schools or playgrounds to the federal government as additional security on the proposed purchase of the bond issue. The board owns $30,000,000 worth of property that could be pledged as additional security on this sale.

A sale of the bond issue would not only enable the board to pay up all back salaries, estimated at $26,000,000, to teachers and other school employes, but would also aid in financing the pay rolls for 1934.

Opens Way for Aid.

2. An amendment to include school districts in the act empowering public agencies to apply to the federal public works administration for loans and grants.

3. A provision that the Chicago school board may issue refunding bonds in exchange for outstanding bonds when the proceeds of tax levies for the payment are not available when the original bond obligations fall due.

4. Authority for the board to issue bonds in exchange for outstanding tax anticipation warrants and interest where the taxes for their redemption have not been collected. Board officials have estimated that $10,000,000 worth of 1928 and 1929 warrants will be retired in this manner.

5. Provides that educational fund tax anticipation warrants shall be retired, as taxes come in, in the order of their issuance. By this legislation the school board members are attempting to stave off attempts to prorate the taxes collected to all warrant holders. Such a practice, according to school trustees, would be clerically impossible and would throw the redemption of $75,000,000 worth of outstanding warrants into chaos.

6. Similar to the preceding bill, but providing for warrants outstanding against the playground fund levy.

State-Wide Relief Urged.

The debate over passage of the Chicago bills was precipitated by Representative Louie Lewis [Dem., Sesser.]

"I feel that if the Chicago program is passed," asserted Lewis, "that the rest of the state may be left begging. The problem of financing the schools is a state-wide one. We can't be expected to support this legislation unless the whole school program moves at once."

"I don't know where the idea comes from that the Chicago members are going to take a so-called 'run out powder,'" said Adamowski. "We are asking for the bills at this time because we think there is a good chance of getting some money from Washington."

"This is an acute emergency," declared Schnackenberg. "There have been informal discussions of the school problem for the state and the result has been that the teachers' representatives will see Gov. Horner in order to reach an agreement. If these are good bills this week they will be next."

Representative Leroy M. Green [Rep., Rockford] then recalled the decision of the United States Supreme court in the lake level litigation over diversion of water from Lake Michigan at Chicago in which the state was held responsible for erecting sewage disposal plants since the sanitary district was a creature of the state.

"The Chicago school board is a creature of the state," said Green, "and if the bonds were not repaid the state might be held responsible."

"The state would be held responsible in any event," replied Adamowski. "That doesn't make any difference. It is highly important to the state of Illinois that the Chicago school board pay off its obligations. It will further the day when the city's back taxes will be paid to the state."

Schnackenberg then declared that it was most important to go to the federal government and get the money before it was all gone.

"Will you vote for the downstate program?" asked Louie Lewis.

"I don't know," said Schnackenberg, "will you vote for all the downstate school bills?"

"No, not all of them," said Lewis.

"Well, then what are you asking me this for," retorted Schnackenberg.

Roll Call Is Ordered.

After this interchange Speaker Arthur Roe [Dem., Vandalia] ordered the roll called. The house members were still milling about the rostrum and Roe banged his gavel for order. When the members were all in their seats the roll call started.

During the roll call several of the downstate members stressed the fact that they were voting for the bills only on the assurance that their Chicago colleagues would return to help pass other school measures.

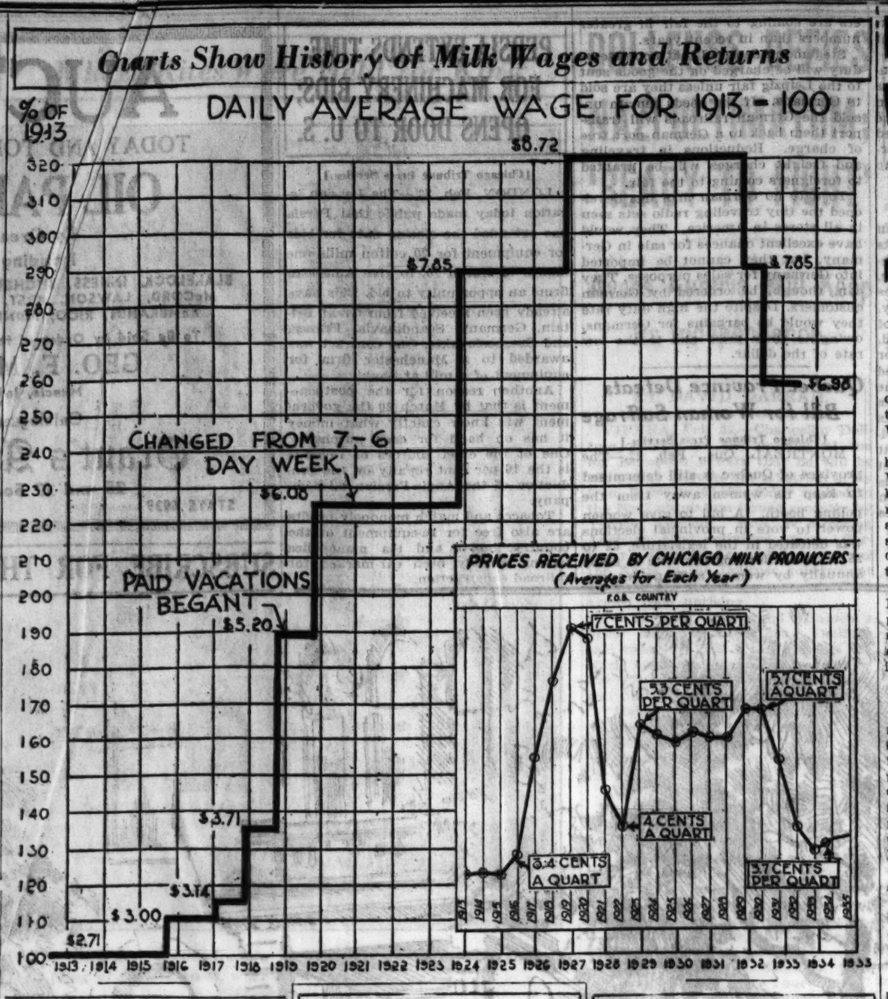
Charts Show History of Milk Wages and Returns



The Drivers' Wages

The evolution of Chicago's 6,600 milk wagon "salesmen" from the wages of "milk peddlers" working 7 days a week without vacations for $2.71 a day in 1913 to the present scale of $40 per week [$6.98 a day] on the basis of a 6 day week with two weeks' vacation paid, is shown in the above chart, prepared by the American Dairy foundation. Taking the 1913 wage scale as 100 per cent, the drivers' scale is shown to have reached 322 per cent during 1927 to 1931, and at present is 258 per cent of the 1913 wage. The wagon drivers' union officials are defending their members against a reduction to be proposed by the milk companies today at the Hotel Stevens.

Prices to Consumers

Changes in retail price per quart, delivered to homes, as compiled by American Dairy foundation:

Prices Paid Farmers

The reduction of retail milk prices this morning by Chicago dairies to 9 cents a quart, delivered to the home, leaves farmers obtaining 3.7 cents a quart under the terms of the new government milk license. The inset chart shows the ups and downs in prices received by farmers for Chicago's milk, the high point being reached in 1919, when retail prices were 16 cents a quart, of which farmers obtained 7 cents.

Since 1930, when farmers were paid 5.7 cents a quart, and the retail milk price was 13 cents a quart, the retail price has dropped 4 cents, 2 cents of the drop coming from farmers and the other 2 cents from cuts in union labor and milk companies' returns.

SHOWDOWN DUE TODAY ON WAGES OF MILK DRIVERS

Talk of Strike in Pay Cut Fight.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Negotiations between Chicago's organized milk companies and officials of the Milk Wagon Drivers' union for a new wage scale, which have been under way intermittently for several months, are expected to reach the showdown stage today. A wage conference between the employers and employes' representatives is to be held this afternoon at the Stevens hotel. Talk of a drivers' strike was heard in several quarters last night. The negotiations involve the wages of about 6,600 workers.

The wage controversy, which started nearly a year ago when the contract between the dairies and drivers expired, has been brought to a head by the reduction in the retail price of delivered milk throughout Chicago and suburbs. Under the reduction order, which becomes effective this morning, the delivered price of milk is cut from 10 to 9 cents a quart and from 7 to 6 cents a pint. Reductions of one-half to 1 cent a quart in store prices also are involved.

Terms of Federal Order.

The federal licensing order, issued by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace on Feb. 5, requires that all milk companies in the Chicago area pay farmers a flat price of at least $1.75 a hundred pounds [3.7 cents per quart] for milk to be sold as such. Previously, when milk sold for 9 cents a quart in Chicago a year ago, the farmers were paid only $1.70 a hundred pounds [3.6 cents a quart] and were paid much less for milk from which cream was extracted than is required by the federal order now in force. The effect of today's retail price reduction is to force a "squeeze" upon the distributors and labor.

A survey made this week in Chicago indicates that the sales of cut rate milk have taken from 15 to 25 per cent of the business from the big companies which deliver milk to the consumers. According to H. Stanley Wanzer, president of the Milk Council Inc., there has arisen a condition in which "an entire industry and its system of doing business is on trial."

Drivers Oppose Pay Cut.

Two recent efforts of the dairies to persuade the drivers to accept a wage cut were turned down by the union, and its officers indicated last night that they were still holding out against a reduction. They maintain that drivers have accepted a 22 per cent reduction in pay since the peak scale of $50 a week in force from 1927 to 1931. The drivers are now paid a minimum of $40 a week for delivering 1,333 units of sale [quart of milk, 2 pints of milk or a dozen eggs, etc.].

According to data gathered by the American Dairy foundation in a recent study of the Chicago milk industry, the cost of labor in delivering milk is now 158 per cent higher than the cost in 1913, when milk sold for 8 cents a quart retail. The price to farmers is now 10 per cent higher than at that time.

Farmers' Revenue Reduced.

The reduction in sales of delivered milk has reacted upon the farmers. It was disclosed yesterday. While the companies are required by the government to pay 3.7 cents a quart for fluid milk, the drop in sales has brought the average payment to farmers, on 86 per cent of their "base," or quota of sales, to $1.59 a hundred weight [3.4 cents a quart]. Some of it, being sold as "surplus" for butter, brings them only 1¾ cents a quart.

Chicago's milk supply soon will be largely "sunlight" milk, irradiated to increase its vitamin D content, before many weeks, it was predicted yesterday. The Chicago Milk Dealers' association and the Milk Council, Inc., have approved such milk, and application is to be made to the Chicago board of health for new regulations which will permit it to be sold here.

ROOSEVELT LAYS WREATH ON TOMB OF WASHINGTON

Motors to Mount Vernon in Heavy Rain.

The President drove through a heavy rain from Washington to Mount Vernon, where, bareheaded, he left his official car to walk through the rain and lay a wreath on the sarcophagus in the red brick tomb which since 1831 has housed the bodies of George Washington, Martha Washington, and many of their relatives.

As this was a legal holiday in the District of Columbia all executive departments were closed, but congress met as usual, and the national recovery administration forged ahead with its program.

Read Farewell Address.

The senate and the house each marked the anniversary in their customary way with the reading of Washington's farewell address. This was read in the senate by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, who took the place of Senator King, originally designated for that honor, but who was unable to be present, and in the house by Representative Smith of Virginia.

Secretary Dern in effect voiced the administration's tribute to George Washington in a speech before a meeting of patriotic societies in which he said the policies initiated in the past year represent a closer approach to Washington's ideals of liberty.

The President was accompanied on his pilgrimage to Mount Vernon only by an intimate group from the White House. With him in his car were Mrs. Roosevelt, Col. Edwin M. Watson, his military aid, and Capt. Walter N. Vernou, U. S. N., his naval aid.

Drives in 10 Feet of Tomb.

Mr. Roosevelt's car was driven to within ten feet of the tomb, the last 100 yards over a brick walk. Despite the downpour of rain he left the car and, escorted by his aids with Mrs. Roosevelt following, walked to and into the small structure, within which are the sarcophagi occupied by George and Martha Washington. Numerous wreaths already were heaped there, having been left by numerous patriotic organizations earlier in the day.

The President deposited his wreath, stood for almost a minute in silence and then returned to his car to begin the trip back to Washington, a drive of about 20 miles.

CITY PAYS TRIBUTE TO WASHINGTON ON BIRTH ANNIVERSARY

The 202d anniversary of the birth of George Washington was celebrated yesterday by patriotic societies and civic organizations in Chicago. A citywide holiday in schools and public offices brought throngs downtown and to museums to view Washington relics.

Boy Scouts of Troop 214 visited the Art institute with their scoutmaster, Peter Brunl, and placed a wreath at the statue of Washington. The troop is sponsored by the St. John's Presbyterian Institutional church, 608 South Hoyne avenue.

The Washington room of the Chicago Historical society building in Lincoln park was crowded all day with visitors who inspected Washington's medicine chest with its sixteen original bottles, a Valley Forge camp lamp, his razor, compass, dress spurs, and other mementoes.

Kiwanis clubs held a luncheon at the Hamilton club, at which Ninian Welsh, attorney and former assistant probate judge, spoke. The Illinois society of the Sons of the American Revolution held a dinner-dance last night at the Great Northern hotel. The day was observed by the American Legion and by churches. Episcopal organizations held a communion service at St. James' church, under the leadership of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

LATVIA 'SOLD' ON U. S. GOODS; NO CHANCE TO BUY

Letts Praise Products from America.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Feb. 22.—The population of Latvia is 2,000,000, of which more than 60 per cent is engaged in farming. The Letts are farmers, not peasants, and their standard of living is high.

They buy American agricultural machinery. They would buy American dairy machinery if prices were competitive with Sweden and Germany and if it were permitted to be imported. Gifts of the American Red Cross cultivated a taste for American tobacco. If they could find a market for their dairy produce they would increase their pasturage and again purchase American grain. Their little farms are efficiently managed and enable the farmer to put at least one son through the state university.

More than half of the American cars sold in Latvia are manufactured in the Copenhagen factory of an American concern. A long list of other American products sold here, ranging from agricultural machinery and trucks to chewing gum and toothpaste, are manufactured in plants which American concerns have built in Canada, Great Britain and Germany.

American Car Costs $2,000.

The plea of these concerns having factories abroad that they cannot supply American made goods to these countries because of high duties is not valid, according to trade observers here. If it were possible to bring American goods into Latvia and put them on display they could be sold. Even though tariffs bring the prices to ridiculous heights people will buy. The cheapest American car costs almost $2,000 in Latvia today but the agent tells me he could sell 300 this year if he could obtain permission to import them. But this would not provide much additional work for Americans for only a few essential parts are manufactured there. The remainder are manufactured and assembling is done in Copenhagen.

Prices of other articles are equally amazing. A 15 cent bottle of catsup costs $1, a stick of chewing gum costs five cents, a cheap electric toaster brings $6. But the Letts will buy. They say there is no other country which can compete with American quality and workmanship. American tobacco is better flavored, cleaned and packed and easier to work. American cotton is preferred to other varieties by local mills. And so it goes with American leather and American cars and tires.

But How to Crash Market.

But there is the problem of crashing the Latvian market.

The American representation in Riga has made futile protests to the Latvian foreign office about discrimination against American goods. The only way to discuss trade questions today is to have something to trade in one hand and a club in the other. Unfortunately America buys little from Latvia. The chief American imports are hides, rags, seeds, canned fish, candies, and the Letts are hoping to send some vodka.

Latvia is remaining on the gold standard and is not in a position to compete with other countries who played "follow the leader" with England.

It would be difficult to negotiate a reciprocal tariff until Latvia finds something to export to the United States. Latvia has large forests and plants, cultivates and harvests them as America does corn. The timber crop matures in 50 years. There is plenty of spruce. America needs cellulose, wood pulp, and paper. Latvia has only two medium sized mills, and this industry could be developed.

Chance for Investment.

This opens an opportunity for an American investment abroad which would help to develop our trade. The erection of a large cellulose and paper making plant here which would export to America would help to open the local market for American goods.

During the next few years some business will also go to those countries making available the best and easiest terms of credit. American banks are in a position to finance such business, and a five or ten year credit would prove a powerful talking point in Latvia and the other Baltic states. Latvia needs railroad equipment badly; she is in the market for road building machinery, and the market for automobiles and auto trucks is large.

Charge British Invasion

SHANGHAI, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Charges that Great Britain is attempting to establish a sphere of influence in west China, especially in Szechwan province and in the upper Yangtze valley, appeared today in the vernacular newspaper Shun Pao.

The accusations were made concurrent with the publication of advices from Yunnanfu saying 2,000 British troops had entered the Panhung district of Yunnan province from Burma, building roads and planning to seize gold mines in Panhung. Panhung comprises a good portion of southwest Yunnan province, adjacent to Burma.

Today's advices said the British had been entering Yunnan since Jan. 1, despite the opposition of the natives.

Officials of the British legation at Peiping denied the charges. They said it was understood a party of civilian geologists was making research studies in eastern Burma close to Yunnan.

HOUSE VOTES 7 MILLION FOR U. S. DIPLOMATS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Elegance will come into its own again among America's diplomats abroad if the house of representatives has its way.

By a vote of 296 to 53, the lower body today approved and sent to the senate a special administration measure authorizing the annual appropriation of $7,000,000 to be used in making up the difference between what the dollar ought to be worth in the pocket of an American diplomat and what it has actually shrunk to at the present time.

Britten Fights in Vain.

It would appear, Chairman Sam Reynolds [Dem., Tenn.] of the foreign affairs committee explained, that foreign service officers abroad have taken a terrific financial setback since the dollar lost much of its potency in comparison with recently appreciated currencies in other countries. Accordingly the administration and particularly the state department—ever watchful for its diplomats—is anxious that congress provide money to bring the salaries of foreign service officers to what they are supposed to be in terms of purchasing power.

The house, as usual, was ready to agree with the President and his executive advisers and gave ready approval to the bill. But only over the protests of a small group of Republicans headed by Congressman Fred A. Britten of Illinois.

Mr. Britten, who proffered amendment after amendment only to see each one voted down, was literally railroaded by the Democratic majority on a parliamentary technicality, and with only the half hearted support of his Republican colleagues was unable to prevent the measure's final passage.

Mr. Britten told the house that the proposed adjustment of diplomatic salaries in accordance with the dollar's purchasing power in various foreign nations would mean an increase of some 50 per cent in the pay of American ambassadors, ministers, consuls, and other officers and employés of the foreign service.

Offers Plan, But It's Rejected.

Moreover, Mr. Britten pointed out, the plan contemplated in the bill fails to take into consideration the fact that before the United States went off gold the dollar abroad was way above its value here. He asked that the adjustment in salaries be based on exchange levels of July 1, 1928 when virtually all the world was on the gold standard, instead of July 1, 1933 as proposed in the bill. But his suggestion was voted down.

Rejected also was his proposal to eliminate that section of the bill exempting all allowances and expenditures to foreign service officers out of the money authorized in the bill from federal income tax.

GERMANY, U. S. KEEP UP WORK ON NEW TRADE PACT

Negotiations Are Still in Preparatory Stage.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—German officials today announced that negotiations with the United States on a new reciprocal trade agreement are still in the preparatory stage. Each country is making known its trade wishes without formulating them definitly. Berlin gives assurance that the main negotiations are being carried on in Washington between Dr. Hans Luther, German ambassador, and President Roosevelt.

The present agreement can be canceled in October, 1935. The Germans declare that the trade balance between the two countries favors America, the total American surplus being placed at 240 million dollars, including Germany's payments on her debts to America.

U. S. Prospects Good.

Prospects for sales of American goods at the Leipzig fair, which starts March 4, are excellent, Herr Stegemann, chief of the fair's press service, declared today. This, he added, goes especially for agricultural machinery.

"The German manufacturers of farming implements," he explained, "plan their own special show for May, but the farmers are interested in new farm equipment now. The farmer feels that his future is safe and that he has brighter prospects than he has had for years. If Americans showed their newest equipment in Leipzig's fair now, they might get the cream of the orders. Their goods would be seen not only by German buyers but by buyers from all parts of the world."

More Buyers to Attend.

Leipzig authorities believe that buyers are coming to the fair in greater numbers than in recent years.

Stegemann declared that no customs duty will be charged on the goods sent to the Leipzig fair unless they are sold to Germans. If the goods remain unsold the German railroads will transport them back to a German port free of charge. Reductions in traveling and freight charges will be granted to foreigners coming to the fair.

To date no German firm has developed the tiny traveling radio sets seen in all stores in America. They would have excellent chances for sale in Germany, but they cannot be imported into Germany for sales purposes. They can, though, be ordered by German customers. Despite the high duty rate they would be bargains for Germans, owing to their price and to the low rate of the dollar.

Quebec Province Defeats Bill for Woman Suffrage

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 22.—The province of Quebec is still determined to keep its women away from the polling booth. A bill to give women power to vote in provincial elections was defeated in the legislature, 62 to 25. Application for the vote is made annually by woman suffrage leaders.

PERSIA EXTENDS TIME FOR MACHINERY BIDS; OPENS DOOR TO U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 22.—The Persian legation today made public that Persia has extended the closing date for bids for equipment for 20 cotton mills one month to March 20, to give American firms an opportunity to bid. Bids have already been received from Great Britain, Germany, Scandinavia, France, and Czechoslovakia. One contract was awarded to a Manchester firm for equipment of a mill at Shahi.

Another reason for the postponement is that by March 20 the government will know exactly what money it has on hand for cash purchases. One of the chief sources of revenue is the 16 per cent royalty on the production of the Anglo-Persian oil company.

Tobacco and match monopoly profits are also free for re-equipment of the country, sugar and tea monopolies having already been ear-marked for railroad construction.

You wouldn't buy a horse and buggy...

THEN WHY USE ANCIENT HEATING METHODS WHEN RATES FOR GAS HEAT ARE SO LOW?

Is YOUR heating unit out of date—like the old-fashioned horse and buggy? Do you still put up with soot, dust, dirty ashes, and back-breaking furnace drudgery?

Why not get rid of all this mess and nuisance! Heat the modern way—with gas. Gas heat is as different as night is from day, from all other forms of heat. You have no furnace worries from one year to the next! Your house stays clean, because gas gives off no soot or dirt. You say goodbye to coal shovels and dirty ash buckets. And every hour, day and night, your house is kept at the correct temperature—automatically.

To prove that every home can afford to heat with gas, we'll install it at our expense ... and remove it at our expense, if you don't like it.

And—you can try gas heat without one cent of investment! We will install a burner in your present furnace or boiler at our own expense. You pay only the rental on the equipment, which amounts to $3 a month in the average home. You try it for a month, two months, a year. And if within the year you find that you are not completely satisfied with gas, we will take it out at our expense and replace your former heating equipment in good workmanlike order. But—if you decide to keep gas heat—as we think you will—the rental you have paid applies on the purchase price of the equipment.

Act now!

Don't delay. It is pure folly not to investigate this liberal offer on gas heat when it brings so many comforts and conveniences. Call your local gas company for full details.

AN ACCURACY RECORD THAT'S HARD TO BEAT

The billing department of the Gas Company, which prepares your monthly gas bill, works constantly toward one objective—the complete elimination of errors from customers' bills.

Since no human being is infallible, that objective may never be completely reached. All that can be done is to guard against every possibility of human error, to be on the alert to discover errors and to eliminate sources of them.

As a result of this policy, the billing department of The Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company has maintained an accuracy record of 99.98 per cent. for the last three years. For three months in 1933, the department achieved the almost impossible record of 99.99 per cent. accuracy.

To state this fact in another way—the chances are five thousand to one that your gas bill is correctly figured.

How any community can cut down the time lost and suffering in "Cold" season

Place no faith in so-called "instant" cold cures. To relieve any cold, try above all to clear the head, dry the secretions, and reduce the fever. This takes more than a "few minutes," and medicine of more than one kind.

You can get the necessary medicines of any druggist, by asking for Pape's Cold Compound which combines them in a pleasant tablet.

To relieve a "new" cold, take three of these little tablets; chew them up, drink a glass of water.

To relieve a more stubborn cold will require a second treatment, and frequently a second day of this treatment, but it's worth the time. Colds that have been driven out of the system are gone.

BELGIUM BURIES ALBERT; CROWNS NEW KING TODAY

One Killed, Many Injured in Crush at Funeral.

BY ANN SOMERS HOUSE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BRUSSELS, Feb. 22.—Mourning Belgium buried King Albert I. today amid scenes of royal splendor and sorrow which lasted for nearly eight hours. Tonight the king was sleeping his last sleep in the royal crypt at Laeken palace beside the two other Belgian monarchs and their kinsmen who have preceded him in death.

Tomorrow, with another grand display of pageantry, Belgium will enthrone Albert's 32 year old son. He will be King Leopold III.

The magnificent ceremonies today were marred by incidents which attained riotous proportions. Hundreds of thousands jammed the route of the three mile procession and fought for vantage points from which to view the colorful spectacle. One man was killed, two women were seriously injured and scores of persons were bruised in the terrific crush which occurred.

Expect Minister to Resign.

As a result of the incredible disorder Minister of Interior Pierlot, who had charge of arrangements, is expected to resign.

In the confusion no member of the Belgian cabinet or parliament was able to reach Laeken for the final ceremony. All were stopped by soldiers.

The funeral started this morning with an impressive military parade. For more than two hours 50,000 Belgian war veterans filed past King Albert's coffin, placed on a gun carriage in front of the Brussels royal palace. Two thousand regimental flags, some torn by many bullets, dipped down as they passed the coffin.

At 10:45 o'clock the gun carriage with the coffin started the last ride to the tomb at Laeken palace. Church bells tolled. Women sank down on their knees praying. Men uncovered their heads.

Then developed the tremendous rush which threatened to end in a disastrous stampede. The crush from the ranks, at places 100 deep, broke at one spot through the dividing fence of soldiers. The gendarmerie on horseback rushed to push back the crowd, throwing men, women, and children into a panic. Many were injured and several were taken away in ambulances. Scores of women fainted.

Spectacular Procession.

But a sight of the funeral procession was worth risking a life for. A splendid military band preceded it on horseback. Heading the foreign military delegations were the picturesque Bersaglieri [Italian] with their legendary cockfeather trimmed hats. They were followed by his Britannic majesty's Dragoon guards—150 automatons moving with slow step—and detachments of soldiers from France in sky blue uniforms.

There was a sudden waft of incense, a view of choir boys in black and white preceding the clergy, a long murmur, then again silence. The king's coffin approached on a gun carriage drawn by six black horses.

Albert Lebrun, the French president, headed the chiefs of states, walking at the right side of King Boris III. of Bulgaria. Both were followed by the prince of Wales and a score of other princes of royal blood from every part of Europe. Among the diplomats of many nations marched Dave H. Morris, United States ambassador.

"She Has Arrived!"

Suddenly, like wildfire, the words spread, "She has arrived!" It was Queen Elizabeth. She sat motionless, a dark figure in the background under the huge red and gold royal baldachino. She had arisen from a sick bed to come to the cathedral.

Tomorrow, after her son Leopold takes the oath as the new king, Elizabeth will cede her place to Princess Astrid of Sweden, her young daughter-in-law.

Now the king has arrived. The church is all hung with black, but is bright with a thousand candles and gleaming with the play of colors from the uniforms of royalty, diplomats and officers and the purple and gold of the clergy, a scene as magnificent as a Rubens painting. The shrill voices of the choir boys rise though the air in solemn mass for the dead and the cardinal in white mitre prays.

Bright trumpets suddenly announced that the king's absolution was fulfilled and the body blessed.

The coffin moved again to the royal crypt.

The brief inhumation service inside the little Laeken church was attended by none but the closest family. After the coffin was placed in the crypt by twelve stalwart, soliders, one young man in khaki walked down to it. Leopold, who will be king tomorrow, stood alone at the side of his dead father, who was king until today.

Chicago's sorrow over the death of Albert, king of the Belgians, was expressed yesterday by the many who attended a silemn requiem mass in Holy Name cathedral at the same time the king's funeral was being held in Brussels.

In the cathedral the Belgian national colors, orange, red, and black, were draped on a bier before the altar, where the mass was sung by the Very Rev. Msgr. Philip E. Mahoney. The Rev. L. P. Hurkmans, Knight of the Order of the Crown of Belgium, pastor of the Belgian St. John Berchmans church, paid tribute to the dead king for his unselfish devotion to his people during the world war, which, the speaker said, brought the country out of the war a greater, wiser nation. Taps were sounded by the Marine post of the American Legion.

Among those in attendance were Admiral Wat T. Cluverius and Maj. Gen. Preston Brown, representing the navy and army. Consuls of foreign nations represented in Chicago were in attendance, as well as civic dignitaries.

DOLLFUSS DEFIES NAZI ULTIMATUM; 'READY TO FIGHT'

Avers Austria Will Keep Its Independence.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, Feb. 22.—Chancellor Dollfuss, relying on the promise of the big European powers that he will be allowed to increase the Austrian army from 30,000 to 60,000, today replied to the Nazi ultimatum issued recently by Theodor Habicht, who is directing Austrian Nazi activities from Germany. Habicht demanded places for the Nazis in the Dollfuss government by Feb. 28, under the menace of an armed Nazi uprising.

"I do not understand Habicht's queer demands altogether," Dollfuss said today. "This I can say. If the Nazis start anything against us after Feb. 28, as Habicht threatened, they will find us well prepared.

"Habicht seems to have his men in Austria well in hand. So have we. We have proved what we can do. We are determined to keep our independence."

Appears Cheered.

The little chancellor spoke with a twinkle in his eye. On Saturday he was pallid and grave.

"We are struggling for a new Austria," he continued. "Our economic situation is improving. There are wounds to be healed. Last week we, as a government, had to be severe. It was our duty to be, but now we are working to establish peace."

In his conversation Dollfuss used the word "we" and "our circle" rather than "my government," implying that he was referring to himself, Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg, leader of the Fascist heimwehr; Vice Chancellor Maj. Emil Fey, and other outstanding Fascist leaders.

He admitted there is a divergence of views between himself and other leaders. Asked about reports of the restoration of Otto Hapsburg as emperor of Austria and Hungary, Dollfuss admitted this solution of central Europe's woes was posed, but he said it has not come before his cabinet.

Declares Against Fascism.

"We want no Fascism here and are not trying to impose it," he said. "We want an authoritarian government expressed through the guild system, which, however, will be based on Pope Pius' encyclical Quadragesimo Anno. This system will not exclude popular control, but it will be without the evils of the political party system."

Dollfuss said he would have the new "transitory" constitution, which would introduce the guild system, ready within the next three weeks. He hedged when asked if it would be submitted to the people for approval.

Dollfuss explained he expects to put a strong system of control on machinery and the introduction of new machinery into factories to save man power.

"We have too much machinery, and social insurance rates should be in direct proportion to its increase," he said.

Sees Difficulties Ahead.

Dollfuss said application of the guild system to agriculture would be easy, but that more difficulties could be expected in applying it to industry.

Austrian housing laws will remain the same as they are, Dollfuss said in reply to questions as to whether Socialist tenants would be thrown out of their apartment houses to make way for the victors in last week's fighting.

Socialist municipal employes, however, will be discharged on a wholesale scale, Dollfuss said. He added that reports that repression of Jews is being planned as the next step in consolidating his government are without foundation.

"Are you sure you are strong enough to carry out your program with the opposition of Fey and Starhemberg?" Dollfuss was asked. "Yes; of that you can be sure," he replied.

Meanwhile ten more Socialist organizations were dissolved today by decree and the ninth Socialist was hanged for participation in the recent revolt.

FORD OPPOSES LIQUOR, BUT HE HAS EXHIBIT AT BEER, WINE SHOW

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Despite Henry Ford's personal disapproval of liquor he is not unaware of the possibilities for his business of the brewing industry, it was observed today at Grand Central Palace, where the first International Beer, Wine and Liquor show is in progress.

Occupying almost an entire side of the main floor of the exposition is a Ford exhibit comprising 13 shiny new model Fords. It is the largest single exhibit in the show from the standpoint of space filled. Many of the cars shown are described in detail in an orange, brown, and black folder entitled "A Complete Line of Trucks and Commercial Cars for the Brewing Industry."

Double Wedding Creates Strange Relationships

Bloomington, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—A double wedding which took place in Jerseyville, Ill., brought about unusual relationships. Mrs. Thelma Weaver, 16, and Franklin McKinney, 22, and Miss Opal Schmidt, 18, and Clyde Isringhausen, 21, were the contracting parties. Miss Weaver is the niece of Miss Schmidt and after the ceremony McKinney was Mrs. Isringhausen's nephew; Mrs. Isringhausen was McKinney's "Aunt Opal." Isringhausen, although younger than McKinney, became McKinney's uncle.

FACA ORDERS A REPORT ON COST OF U. S. LIQUORS

Seeks to Learn Reasons for High Prices.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Following up President Roosevelt's war against high liquor prices, the federal alcohol control administration today ordered distilleries to report the cost of making whisky and gin.

Rectifiers also were called upon to report the cost of making blended whisky, the liquor now most widely sold. The order to submit production costs was sent out over the signature of Harris E. Willingham, assistant director of the FACA.

When the reports of production costs are collected the FACA, it is assumed, will use them as a basis for determining whether the domestic price of liquor is being kept up artificially. An official statement announcing Mr. Willingham's order merely said, however, that the FACA was inquiring into the general price problem.

President Expresses Concern.

President Roosevelt has expressed concern over the continued high price of legal liquor, declaring that it paves the way for continuation of bootlegging. In addition to the present price inquiry Joseph Choate Jr., director of the FACA, is studying, at the President's request, means for increasing the flow of imported whiskies.

Separate forms for the reporting of cost of information were sent to distillers, blenders, and makers of gin. The reports must be returned by March 10 under regulations adopted by the FACA.

Send Out Two Forms.

"One of the forms," said the statement explaining the questionnaire, "with great particularity goes into the details of making straight whisky. The other form, that sent to the rectifiers, will develop accurately the cost of making blended whisky, which, at present, constitutes the great portion of what is being sold to consumers; and also the cost of the manufacture of gin."

Two Charged with Tipsy Driving After Collision

Charles Estbury, 38 years old, 1158 Highland avenue, Oak Park, and Frank J. Sholes, 36 years old, 630 East 79th street, were charged with driving while intoxicated yesterday after the car in which they were riding collided with another automobile at 27th street and Cicero avenue. As neither would admit owning or driving the car the same charge was placed against both the men.

CONDEMNED WITHOUT A HEARING.

The air transport companies whose contracts to carry the mails were rescinded by Postmaster General Farley have thus far been deprived of a hearing. The senate committee has heard former Postmaster General Brown, who signed the contracts for the government, and Postmaster General Farley, who voided them, has stated his position in official documents; but the aviation companies which have been transporting the mails to the general satisfaction and which have invested many millions of dollars in equipment have been denied an opportunity to defend themselves under oath.

They have been given, so far as we know, no hearing by the postoffice department. They have been given no hearing in a court of law or by a congressional committee. The most serious charges have been made, alleging that the contracts were granted collusively and fraudulently, and on the basis of the charges a drastic order which for all practical purposes is a confiscation of property has been issued, and yet no opportunity for defense has been given.

It cannot be alleged that the companies do not want to be heard. Col. Lindbergh requested a hearing in his now famous telegram to the President, but it was not granted. Before that, on Feb. 9, the president of Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., wrote to Mr. Farley requesting a hearing. The letter was written because "this company can no longer ignore the constantly repeated statements in the press that you are about to cancel certain of the air mail contracts." The letter is an ex parte statement, of course, but we do not believe that any fair minded person could read it without saying that the signer of that letter, Mr. Richard W. Robbins, was entitled at least to a hearing, under oath, before the contract of his company was canceled.

Again, on Feb. 14, Mr. Robbins issued a statement, this time in reply to Mr. Farley's allegations in his letter to Senator Black, and again denied the charges made by Mr. Farley as they applied to his company and again requested an opportunity to be heard. He has not yet been heard, but his contract has been canceled.

This steadfast insistence by the government that gross frauds were committed and the government's equally steadfast refusal to let the accused persons confront their accusers must be nearly unprecedented in the history of American government. Under the circumstances the public cannot fail to be suspicious of Mr. Farley and his motives. Certainly the letter and statement of Mr. Robbins place Mr. Farley in an ugly light. It is no longer the air lines which are on the defensive; it is Mr. Farley.

REVIVAL IN THE DAIRY INDUSTRY.

The announcement of a reduction in the price of milk followed the news that some of the principal dairy companies of Chicago are proposing to irradiate milk. The processed milk, it is asserted, will contain substantial amounts of vitamin D, and many physicians will therefore recommend it for its added food value, particularly for growing children.

The industry is now working in the right direction, and this is said without attempting any judgment on the merits of irradiated milk. Instead of trying to control markets, fix prices and restrain competition, the leaders of the industry are now directing their attention where it should have been directed all the time: At improving the quality of their product and getting the price as low as possible. Both means serve the same end of increasing the volume of sales.

In increased volume lies the salvation of the industry in all its branches. It will help the farmer because he gets his highest price for fluid milk and a lower price for butterfat. It will help the dairy companies by increasing sales, even though the profit on each bottle is less. It will help labor by increasing the demand for workmen and, of course, it will be of benefit to the consumer.

The dairy companies obtained immense advantages from the improvement in the quality of milk which took place almost a generation ago when pasteurization was generally instituted. The added confidence which the public had in the product resulted in greatly increased business. Similar results can be expected of any similar improvement. Irradiation is one method. Another might be to increase the cream content. Still another would be to specialize in particular kinds of milk. Dairies might feature Jersey milk, Guernsey milk, Holstein milk, etc., with a view to meeting the tastes of the customers and their dietary requirements. The object of all such improvements would be to increase sales by giving the customers what they want.

The new spirit in the dairy industry may be regarded as the logical consequence of the failure of the government's efforts. As long as the government was offering to maintain an artificially high price and restrict independent competition the dairy companies were disposed to lean on the government. The consumers knocked the government's scheme into a cocked hat, both by patronizing the independents who were selling at a lower price and by reducing purchases from the larger companies. The defeat of the government's scheme forced the dairymen to seek their own salvation and it is encouraging to find them already at work.

GEN. JOHNSON CRACKS DOWN.

Gen. Johnson has come cracking down again upon critics of the New Deal, the cold blooded reactionaries, rodent minded writers, and mercenary assassins, principally of the newspapers. This time the general intended to make it really Olympus in eruption, although it may have been only an ant hill in irritation.

There's always been something in Washington which, to the place holder there, makes lese majesty seem a reasonable and just law. Away from the capital, out in the sticks where the votes are and the hats are broad and soft and not tall and hard, the official will put on democracy, but when he gets back to his job the purple and ermine come down on his shoulders and hide his ears.

The gentlemen of the present administration are not greatly different from the gentlemen of others, except that they have their necks farther out in more directions. Two things can be remembered, in this particular, of the Hoover administration. One was the extreme touchiness of the administrators under criticism and the other was the determination of the Democrats that they were going to get it. It hasn't been forgotten that a number of Washington correspondents lost their jobs because place holders suffered from their gibes, nor is it forgotten that the boys then running the Democratic national party organized what was known as a stink campaign to make everything in the Hoover administration smell bad.

It was also called the smear campaign. Jouett Shouse was elected as executive chairman and Mr. Raskob, with good financial backing, put Charles Michelson in charge of a press bureau which turned its guns on Mr. Hoover and the Republicans in office. There was a daily bombardment and Mr. Hoover, although he did his best to stand up under it, did not receive much public sympathy. He may have merited much more than he got, but in politics before the New Deal a public man was supposed to be able to take it as well as hand it out.

It could also be said for Mr. Hoover that he as President was struggling with the depression and within the range of his vision was doing his best to relieve conditions. The Democratic organization, with partisan aims, set out to destroy him. Mr. Hoover's intent may have been right and his methods ineffective, but nothing in his position or his circumstances protected him.

With the change in administration there have been two changes in the rôle of criticism. One is that it has largely lost its partisan character. It is to be expected that some of this character will be regained as time goes on, but the Republicans have not organized a smear campaign. The other change is that criticism is to be regarded as per se unworthy.

Although the changes in government itself are such as would raise doubts even in an institution for the feeble minded, a statement of these doubts is held to be derogatory to the person expressing them. Although the times have brought out of the cloistered belfries the largest flight of academic bats ever to see the political light of day, and although the rule is to try anything once, comment upon the phenomena, other than thankful and in gratitude, is held to be reprehensible—something proceeding from a mind disordered by greed or dull in stupidity.

Gen. Johnson, of course, welcomes criticism. He says he does, and then reaches for a brick.

Editorial of the Day

[Fremont, Neb., Tribune.]

The President has signed the code of fair competition for the governing of daily newspapers, after some seven months of negotiation that at times approached a stage of heated controversy. The major conflict was waged over the inclusion of a provision specifically stating that, in accepting the code, the newspapers do not "thereby waive any constitutional rights, or consent to the imposition of any requirements that might restrict or interfere with the constitutional guarantee of the freedom of the press."

Mr. Roosevelt's approval of the code includes approval of that clause, thus acceding to the demand of every recognized association of newspaper publishers in the country. He accompanied the approval, however, with a burst of temper that is not characteristic of him and that does him no credit.

Referring to the "free press" clause, the President says: "The recitation of the freedom of the press clause in the code has no more place here than would the recitation of the whole constitution or of the ten commandments. The freedom guaranteed by the constitution is freedom of expression and that will be scrupulously respected—but it is not freedom to work children, or do business in a fire trap or violate the laws against obscenity, libel and lewdness."

This language is unworthy of the President, and, of course, eminently unfair to the American press. No responsible publisher or his representative ever sought the exceptions listed. The laws against obscenity, libel and lewdness are older than the code, and are not changed by it. Any intimation that the insistence by the publishers that the freedom of expression be specifically recognized is inspired by their desire to publish obscene, libelous or lewd matter is not grounded in fact.

The rights that the publishers seek to safeguard are the rights of every American citizen to think and speak as conscience may dictate. These are not privileges, in the American concept. They are sacred properties, and are as vital to the man on the street, the citizen in his home, the clergyman in his pulpit, the orator on any rostrum, as to the editor of a newspaper. If they are assailed or impaired, as they apply to any one of these, they have been in that degree withdrawn from all the others.

Mr. Roosevelt has disclaimed, unquestionably in all sincerity, any intention of restricting any citizen's right of free expression. The incontrovertible fact remains, however, that in the form of the various codes devised under the National Recovery Act the instrumentation has been provided for such restriction. It may never be exercised by the party or persons now in power, but it is nevertheless available to them and to those who must inevitably succeed them.

As much as any man in public life today, Mr. Roosevelt owes his present high place in national affairs to his own free exercise of the right of free expression. He came to that position by virtue of his success as a dissenter and his ability to convince the people of the nation that the party then in power was following an improper course. No avenue of furthering his cause was denied to him, or neglected by him. The criticism of what was then the American government, by him and by those associated with him, was relentless and unrestricted.

Events have brought Mr. Roosevelt now where other citizens may dissent from his policies and beliefs, and they must have the right to do so. He denies intent to restrict that right. He has, however, created in the recovery act and its correlated codes the means by which restriction may be accomplished. This is the thing that has caused the publishers to be filled with fear, not only for themselves or their properties but for the rights of citizens of all degrees.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY is over and it will be less embarrassing for Americans in London. They feel duty bound to wear a little flag on George's birthday and when they are asked by the English why the bunting, of course they have to say: "Well, it's George Washington's birthday." And then the English always ask: "And who was George Washington?" If I ever get rich I'm going to London on Feb. 22 each and every year and doll all up in flags and buntings and little hatchets and everything and promenade up and down Piccadilly and all over the place and whenever they ask me, "And who was George Washington?" I'm going to say: "He's the bird who kicked the pants off the British during the Revolution." But, darn the luck, they probably never heard of the Revolution, either.

AGE'S COMPENSATIONS.

["Auch Ich war in Arkadien geboren."]

Phew!
The milieu
We once knew
Is as gone as Nineveh, Tyre, and the rest;
Who was it said "old age of life is the best"?
I, too, in happier scenes spent my youth,
Where manners and whisky were far from uncouth;
Where the stage was alive that is dead—
Where people read;
Where a party was pleasure . . . not a sodden sortie:
Boy! I should not like to be under forty!

JAMES P. CONWAY'S AID DE CAMP.

THE PRESIDENT is going to take steps to find out why the price of likker is so high. A fellow told me yesterday that he was asked to pay six bucks and a half for a brand of Scotch that he bought last summer in Canada for four dollars. "And I can't afford to pay that extra two fifty," he said plaintively. "I gotta family." "And so you didn't buy it?" says I. "The hell I didn't," sezze; "got a corkscrew?"

ADD SIGNS OF SPRING. In the mail, a dear, lovely little booklet with beautiful pictures of small mouth black bass and lovely ladies in bathing suits. Lovely ladies all with large mouths wide open showing all teeth. "Spend Your Vacation in New Hampshire," says the slogan on the cover of the booklet, "far away from the heat and bustle of the city." The bustle of the city doesn't bother me so much and I can't notice the heat unless I sit on the radiator, but welcome little booklet. You're a harbinger of joy!

WANTED—

A man who finds my eyes are bright
And never wishes they were brown;
Who meets me in the broad daylight
Yet still admires a last year's gown;

Who thinks my figure is divine
And fails to note I'm growing fat;
Who knows these red lips aren't mine—
And simply lets it go at that;

Who speaks with scorn of other girls
Nor ever lauds their curves or skin;
Who calls the day my hair's in curls—
And not the day it should have been.

'Tis not enough that love be blind
Or all-forgiving, loftily,
But rather, one—dear fate, so kind—
Who sees me as I want to be.

JUDY SHEA.

AND NOW AND THEN on the radio yesterday, when we weren't quick enough with that tuning out thingamagig, we heard how much G. Washington is honored because he never told a lie. We certainly admire a man like that; we don't imitate him, but gosh! how we do admire him.

"A NATION'S jest got to be prepared fer war," announced the fat man in the bus in the seat ahead. "Suppose this here country slings me in the army and sends me out to fight without a steel helmet. Along comes a bullet and raps me on top of the bean and there's another dead hero. Now, if I had a steel helmet on I wouldn't have minded that bullet no more'n if it had been a skeeter. See." "But," argued the man with him, "suppose that bullet was coming towards your knees. Have you got to wear a steel helmet on both knees?" "Shuttup," said the fat man; "you don't know nothin' about war."

THE ONLY WAY.

I have done this before;
I can again.
It is the only way
To finish pain:

Discover something new
That will replace
The old and lost, to fill
The empty space,

Perhaps in time—this I
Have seen before—
With newness dulled, it might Enrich me more;

It might grow deeper, closer,
Than the old
And be a splendor for
The heart to hold.

What I have done, I can Again . . . but still
I have not had so great
A void to fill.

SUNSHINE AND RICKETS.

If a child has rickets or has a strong tendency in that direction the parents might consider spending the winter in Puerto Rico. The children's bureau, department of labor, has recently published the results of a comparative study of the prevalence of rickets among children in New Haven and Puerto Rico. The climatic conditions of the latter place are far better than those of the former.

In hours of sunshine Puerto Rico has the advantage in those months when the need is greatest. The average number of hours of sunshine early in January is 6.9 in Puerto Rico, and 4.7 in New Haven, the Caribbean island having 2.2 more of it, or almost 50 per cent. The advantage held by Puerto Rico in six other months is as follows: February, 1.4 hours; March, 1.1 hours; April, 3 hours; October, .7; November, 1.6; December, 1.9. In the five months in which there is an ample supply of sunlight everywhere New Haven has the advantage. The daily average for the year is one-half hour greater in Puerto Rico. This place has 182 more hours of sunshine yearly. In addition the sun in winter in Puerto Rico is more nearly overhead and, in consequence, the sunlight is richer in ultraviolet and generally of a better quality. New Haven has more smoke and dirt in the air.

The winter climate of Puerto Rico is so mild that children are comfortable out of doors. In addition they need wear very little clothing. Puerto Rican children away from the centers of population go in the altogether or at most wear a single garment.

The principal part of the study consisted in physical and X-ray examination of many hundred children to determine whether they had any evidence of rickets. The examiners found some rickets, but not much—far less than prevails in New Haven. There is a belief that this disorder is quite prevalent in the tropical island. A part of the explanation of this opinion the investigators found to be due to an improper translation of a Spanish word. This term is generally translated as rickets, whereas the Spanish word has quite a different meaning. All malnutrition and dropsy in children in the island is called by the Spanish name, which is often erroneously translated.

Some Puerto Rican children are bow-legged and more are knock-kneed. This is often ascribed to rickets. The investigators found this information to be incorrect. They found it to be caused by the position in which the native mother carries her child on her back or the poor muscular development of the young one. X-ray and other examinations showed these bow-legged and knock-kneed children were not rachitic.

The shape of the head has caused some to pronounce certain Puerto Rican children rachitic. The investigators ascribe this to the peculiarities of shape of the native head and not to rickets.

COUGHING.

H. L. writes: Your article on coughing in public has made a most panicky lot of fools. In the first place a person can't prevent coughing at times. Second, if you doctors know anything you know that the throat is already laden with all types of germs and resistance is due to their presence. Third, everybody knows enough to cover the mouth when coughing. The people are leaving their seats when they hear a cough—like ignorant fools—and I blame you for it.

REPLY.

While there is a small element of truth in each of your points, in the main you are wrong in each. First, 90 per cent of the coughs can be suppressed, as every one in a tuberculosis sanitarium knows. The article referred to so stated. It also gave advice as to what to do when the cough was not or could not be suppressed. Second, the nose, throat, and mouth have a limited bacterial flora. There is a large literature on the subject and physicians know the facts. There is one coccus which is sometimes found in tonsil crypts and seems to have the ability to protect against tonsillitis. That is about the only known fact that supports your statement. Otherwise you are wrong and what you write is misleading. Third, I wish you were right. If you were there would be no great reason for being right in your second point. However, I fear you are wrong. I would like to think you are right in saying the people are protecting their neighbors and that I am to blame. If it is true I would like to have some one blame me and prove both the fact and the reason for it.

COOLING COOL HOUSE.

H. J. K. writes: My landlady, on a cold day when the house is cold, throws outside doors open and cools the house down, claiming it is a quick way to warm it up. She has always heard that it heats up faster if the rooms are filled with fresh air from outside. I tell her it is another old time saying without any foundation of fact. Since early morning our thermometer has not got up within four degrees of the point it registered when doors were opened. If I am wrong, why?

REPLY.

Your landlady is right in practice but wrong in theory. The old custom of blowing out the house periodically is a good one. It cleans out the foul air and peps up the people. But it does not make the house heat up faster.

STEAM BATHS MAY HELP.

Mrs. M. M. writes: Are steam baths and massaging beneficial as treatments for a person with arthritis of the hip?

REPLY.

CONTRACT.

Valparaiso, Ind., Feb. 14.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My mother (who is 84 years old and didn't realize what she was doing) bought a farm on a (1) contract. She couldn't pay this fall's taxes and fire insurance, and 45 days later the party (2) foreclosed and she lost the farm. 3. Is there any way in which the contract can be reinstated? 4. If she gives the money for the taxes and insurance to the seller and receives his receipt is that equivalent to a reinstatement? Would it stand in law? She lost $450 by this deal. B. L.

1. and 2. These two words are inconsistent. Foreclosure is appropriate where the purchaser has received his deed. We assume that your mother merely had a contract, so that it was a question of forfeiture of the contract.

3. In general, if a purchaser offers to reinstate the contract within a reasonable time and before rights of third parties have intervened the court will protect his rights.

4. We cannot advise to advantage without knowing more clearly just what has been done. Your letter indicates that you do not understand the nature of the transaction well enough to make it safe to try to handle the transaction without the employment of an attorney.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—The London policeman, who all the world knows by now is "simply wonderful," will, in the near future, become also a perfect gentleman, complete with full evening dress, top hat and all. The future policeman will, in fact, be a clever young gentleman crammed full of the latest crime fighting methods, a graduate fresh from the police college.

The new college at Hendon, a suburb of London, was formerly a country club. It is being redecorated and each man will have a private bedroom with hot and cold water and central heating. The dining room will be distempered buff. All meals will be taken there except tea, which will be served in the common room. There is to be no special mess kit, but at dinner in the evening all members of the college will wear ordinary full evening dress with white tie.

One of the aims of the college is to send men out for duty who are perfectly fitted physically for the rigors of police duties, so there will be plenty of sport. There is a football field, tennis courts, swimming pool, and a gymnasium.

There will also be servants to do odd jobs, such as cleaning buttons and boots. Every six policemen will have one servant allotted to them for this purpose.

Uniform will not be worn outside the college precincts, and most weekend students will be free for leave. Those who remain at the college instead of going out will be asked to attend a simple religious service.

One of the most important things that will be reiterated day in and day out in the classroom is "be courteous to the public."

The accommodation at the college includes classrooms, a lecture hall, and a common room where work can be done in the evening. Then there are several smaller "quiet" rooms and a library complete with all modern works.

The training will be in the most modern methods of crime detection. The students will be taught, as policemen have never been taught before, how to coördinate motor cars, telephone, radio, and other products of science. Methods of fighting crime which have not hitherto been used in police forces in this country will be taught.

As they sit at their desks in the lecture room, the students will be taught how to regulate and organize crime preventing patrols and beats so the criminal will never know where or when the policeman is going to turn up next; how to work a cross-beat so as to make household guarding plans still more difficult to anticipate; how to send plain clothes men on just after patrolling police constable has passed, when the criminal thinks he is safe to start work.

What will happen when this ultra-modern young policeman gets to grips with Britain's present day criminal is difficult to tell. London police headquarters have been deluged with applications for admission to the new police paradise.

A PROGRAM FOR CONSERVATIVES.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—Although I have a completed education in the University of Chicago, an institution noted for some of its "progressive ideas," I feel compelled by conviction to congratulate THE TRIBUNE for its courage in holding to a conservative and discriminating position on many economic issues. The philosophy which points to new markets, initiative and individualism, and human invention as the foundation of a permanent prosperity has continued validity.

The individualism sanctioned by THE TRIBUNE and conservatives has, however, never been wholly tried. Thousands of workers who are used to sharing the profits of industry without risk and without vision tend to lose sight of the function of the capitalist; workers thus concentrated in production rather than in sales and promotion fail to realize that industry itself is based upon human initiative and is not a free gift of nature. Workers thus used to receiving the benefits of established industry take no part in creating new values, nor do they train themselves for initiative and invention.

Because of these misunderstandings, which are often the cause of class warfare, the conservatives who have not been caught in the socialistic hysteria are obligated to develop a program of their own. I suggest as a part of this program the establishment of special institutional provision for the education of consumers. It is a well known principle that consumers get from the industrial set-up the quality and kinds of goods for which they are intelligent enough to ask. Passive buyers are poor citizens of a capitalistic order.

This consumer education might be broadened to include the complete social orientation of individuals in parent education, vocational counseling, sex enlightenment, and so on. A nonapathetic citizenry constantly alert to "social applications of science" need never go beyond the capitalistic order, need never be herded like so many cattle into a "planned society." Reforms of today must be directed at raising the level of public intelligence rather than at hampering the few enterprising industrialists. It is a miracle that, in spite of the subliteracy of the American mind, technical advance has been possible. People will have ultimately, however, that use of the means of production which they come to deserve by their individual enlightenment.

A BABY'S CURLS.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—Today my daughter and I were in a store. We heard a child crying very pitifully, and pleading with its mother to, "please don't let her do it; make her go away." We looked around, and there to our amazement we saw a little girl not more than 3½ or 4 years old getting a permanent wave.

The child's face was red and swollen from weeping, and every time the little thing tried to move her head she gave out a fresh burst of tears. Well, we stood and watched until the wave was completed, and that child was completely exhausted. But the mother just stood by and was determined to finish it, even helping the operator dry the hair, and seemed quite pleased to think her baby was getting a permanent wave.

One of the operators told me to just feel the heat in one of those curlers, and it nearly blistered my finger.

About a dozen women were in the shop at the time and every one was very angry, but only one woman had the brains or the courage to tell that mother what she thought, and believe me she told her plenty.

If any one saw anybody else abusing a dog or a cat they would call the police or start a fight right there. That mother needed a good kick right where it would hurt her to sit down for a while. Such "vanity" I never heard of, and to think she is called "mother." That was cruelty if ever anything was.

BIBLE READING.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—Considerable publicity has been given the so-called "Bible marathon" at Zion City. It may not be amiss to state that the Bible can be read through in a more leisurely fashion in one year's time by reading three chapters on week days and five chapters on Sundays. While there are better methods for thorough Bible study, the writer has found this annual reading of the Bible a most profitable habit over a period of thirty-five years.

THE WRONG NAMES.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—You published a fourteen and a half line article informing your reading public of the invitation extended by the city sealer, Mr. Joe Grein, to six clubwomen to be present in Judge William Helander's court to view the results of Mr. Grein's campaign against the chiseling short weight merchants of our city. I must admit that your reporter did a perfect job as far as advertising the names and also the addresses of these prominent clubwomen, but he failed to advertise even one of the chiseling, racketeering merchants who were fined by the judge, and that is more important to your readers and the public in general than the name of a curious party of clubwomen. Hereafter I hope Mr. Joe Grein, who, I believe, is the right man on the right job, informs some or rather all of these cub reporters who cover his cases to get the names and addresses of these cheap racketeers and publish them as a protection to the people.

PAPERS IN FRENCH SCANDAL STOLEN FROM SLAIN JUDGE

Son Claims They Involved "High Personalities."

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 22. — Today's developments in the Judge Albert Prince murder mystery struck a new note in France—a feeling hitherto supposed to be peculiar to gangster ridden America—that forces of the law are in league with the forces of crime.

In the face of widespread alarm, Minister of Justice Henri Cheron and Minister of Interior Albert Sarraut held a long conference. This evening they called on Premier Gaston Doumergue to decide what measures could be taken to allay the public's suspicions and clear up the cloud which has hung over France for the last six weeks.

At the conclusion of the conference, Sarraut announced that a reward of 100,000 francs [about $6,500] will be paid for information leading to the arrest of the murderers. It was also decided to send the entire personnel of the 11th regional brigade of mobile police to Dijon to aid in solving the mystery.

General Unrest Increases.

Statements made to French reporters at Dijon by Raymond Prince, son of the murdered magistrate, whose body was placed on the railroad tracks on the outskirts of the Burgundian capital Tuesday night, increased the general unrest.

"The Stavisky case is much more important than any one realized," young Prince says his father told him as late as last Monday.

Prince also told reporters that his father had carried with him vital notes for the report he had been ordered to make on the judicial phase of the Stavisky case and that these notes were stolen from a briefcase found beside the murdered man. The Paris Soir further quotes young Prince as saying:

"The report which my father was supposed to hand over to Justice Lescouve yesterday implicated several persons whose names I will reveal shortly.

Calls It Political Crime.

"The crime was committed by no ordinary thug. It was a political crime and the murderers are too high up to be caught. It was perpetrated by men who were sure of what they were doing, sure of themselves and also sure of immunity. Ever since my father started working on the Stavisky affair there has been trouble. He remarked one day that it was odd how many important people invited him to lunch, but he always refused."

Premier Doumergue tonight told the chamber of deputies that the fate of his government hung on a complete solution of this incredible grand guignol [Punch and Judy] drama.

In the meantime a heavy day's work by the police turned out to be fruitful in negative results. Besides proving conclusively that Judge Prince had arrived at Dijon and was now dead, the sleuths tried without much success to launch a new version that there was a woman in the case. A police statement tonight says, "several witnesses"—all of whom are strangely anonymous—"saw Judge Prince met at the Dijon station, not only by a strange man, but also by a woman.

Detective Edmond Pachot, who spent two years writing reports on the late Serge (Handsome Alex) Stavisky's various rackets—reports which were mysteriously sidetracked—added fuel to the flames by an interview which he gave the Parisian afternoon papers. In it he declared he feared for his own life from the same gang which got Judge Prince.

Perhaps the essential point of Pachot's statement was his astonishment over Prince's murder, which he said would not benefit the officials who had protected Stavisky, since their names are known to others than Prince. What Parisian reporters lighted on, however, was the intimation that a sinister international Mafia is at work.

"Crime Stupidly Executed."

"The crime was so stupidly executed," Pachot observed, "that I hesitate to attribute it to accomplices of the superlatively intelligent crook. What strikes me is that by an act of maniacal cruelty and recklessness an attempt is made to terrorize the law. At first glance one suspects the crime to be of anarchist character in defiance of the social order. If there is a connection between the murder of Prince and the $60,000,000 Stavisky bond scandal case, that would prove the existence of a redoubtable Mafia. From a moral point of view the consequences of this would be appalling."

With hardboiled policemen talking this way it is not surprising that editorial comment in the papers smacks of the most lurid type of a mystery novel. The royalist Action Française, which sees the sinister hand of the Surete Generale [secret service] in every unsolved murder—they are still convinced that the Russian fanatic, Paul Gorguloff, who assassinated President Paul Doumer, was an agent of the Surete—for once advises caution. To this newspaper the hand of the Surete Generale seems so obvious in the Prince murder and the crime itself so clumsy that Action regretfully envisages the hypothesis of a frameup on the Surete.

Charge Police Killed Him.

The communist Humanite takes a somewhat similar line.

"It was the police who killed Prince all right," said Humanite. "But what police? The Surete Generale of Paris prefecture? Was it the Free Mason clique in the police or the Fascist clique? One thing is sure. Some one wanted to get Prince out of the way either to shut his mouth or to make the public think some one wanted to shut his mouth or maybe to do both at the same time."

In the Socialist Populaire, Leon Bluem, greatest labor leader in France, revives by innuendo the rumor that Stavisky's suicide was really a murder. Blum declares that this time there is no doubt about the crime.

Then he attempts to establish the plausibility of the latest Stavisky sensation cooked up by the Surete Generale—that Stavisky was an agent of the Nazi espionage system with two beautiful Viennese actresses as accomplices—and attempts to establish a connection between this and the Prince murder.

CHARGES GRAHAM WOOED HER AFTER DEATH OF WIFE

Says He Promised Her Honeymoon Abroad.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

Mrs. Alma Newton Anderson, writer, testified yesterday that Ernest A. Graham, noted Chicago architect, discussed marriage with her after his first wife's death in December, 1923, and proposed a honeymoon in Lucerne, Switzerland. Mrs. Anderson's testimony was given in response to questions by her counsel during one of a series of hearings before Master in Chancery Harry Smitz in his offices at 145 North Clark street.

The hearing before Master Smitz is on a suit in which Mrs. Anderson seeks an injunction to prevent Graham from having the beneficiary of an annuity bond changed. Under the terms of this bond the Canada Life Assurance company is to begin paying Mrs. Anderson $300 a month next May 1. The case was assigned to the master by Superior Judge John P. McGoorty. The hearing will be continued on March 5.

Graham's Counsel Objects.

The question which brought Mrs. Anderson's reply that Graham had continued to woo her after his first wife's death was opposed strongly by Attorney W. C. Graves, counsel for Mr. Graham. His objections were overruled after long arguments.

Mrs. Anderson, who is 47 years old, said she did not learn of the first Mrs. Graham's death until six months after it occurred, and then learned it, not from Mr. Graham, but from a friend.

"Mr. Graham never spoke of marriage to me after he knew that I knew Mrs. Graham was dead," Mrs. Anderson testified. "Formerly he did many times, but afterwards he did not come to see me and I have not seen him since."

"Did you have any conversation regarding marriage with Mr. Graham after December, 1923?" Mrs. Anderson was asked.

"Yes," she replied, "late in the winter or early spring of 1924. He came to see me in my apartment at 64 East 65th street, and spoke of marriage and of the honeymoon in Lucerne we'd looked forward to for many years, and which we'd take whenever possible."

"Only a Scrap of Paper."

Mrs. Anderson said she understood that when she received the annuity bond in question it was a gift from Mr. Graham signifying that he meant to keep what she termed "the gentleman's and lady's agreement by which he'd promised to support me for life." Later, in New York, she said, she was advised it was "only a scrap of paper which he could terminate at will."

DOUMERGUE WINS RIGHT TO RULE AS MONEY DICTATOR

May Balance the French Budget by Decree.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 22.—Renewing the gesture of former Premier Raymond Poincare in 1926, but going much further than the original savior of the franc dared to go, Premier Gaston Doumergue today asked and obtained from the French chamber of deputies full powers to balance the budget by decree.

The vote was 368 to 185. It was really a vote on the gold standard. The majority voted to save the gold standard at any price. The minority voted against a dictatorship.

When the bill has passed the senate, Doumergue will be France's dictator in everything concerning finance. By a simple decree he can cut any appropriation, suppress any part of the administrative machinery, or change any law in order to balance the budget.

Powers Last Until June 30.

His extraordinary powers will last until June 30 and decrees issued by the government between now and then must be ratified by the chamber by Oct. 31.

It is the first time in the history of the Third Republic—with the exception of wartime—the chamber has ever abdicated such a large part of its constitutional powers to one man. The powers granted Poincare, though similar, were much more limited in scope.

Doumergue's demand for an absolutely free hand to balance the budget burst on the chamber like a bombshell. It is understood he let it be known that if he did not get the powers he asked for he would dissolve the chamber and call new elections immediately.

Pay Roll to Be Reduced.

Doumergue's position today is almost identical with that of President Roosevelt when he appeared before congress last spring to demand revolutionary powers to slash government pay rolls and veterans' compensations. Doumergue did not limit himself to pay rolls and war pensions, but these were obviously the principal economies he had in mind.

Two governments fell trying to get the chamber to vote the necessary economies because the organized civil servants and the veterans' lobby had too much political influence. The third government—that of Camille Chautemps—had to content itself with a budget balanced only on paper because of the same pressure on the deputies.

Doumergue relied on his popularity and went over the head of politicians by holding in reserve the threat of putting the issue squarely up to the people.

To what extent Doumergue will use the powers bestowed on him depends on the real amount of the deficit. The government estimates it at a trifle under 600,000,000 francs [about $89,000,000]. This means Doumergue will only have to slice that much off state expenses.

The Socialists, however, estimate the real deficit at 3 billion francs [about $195,000,000]. If this were correct even Doumergue's enormous prestige would hardly suffice to make the country swallow the pill.

It is certain the government will have a tough battle with the veterans, the unionized civil servants, and other vested interests. The strain on the republican régime may prove severe—particularly if it touches the sacrosanct social insurances.

Just before today's vote Doumergue explained that the delay in voting the budget—it should have been voted by Dec. 31—made extraordinary measures necessary if the franc is to be protected.

"The country is waiting for a vote on the budget to know whether it can have confidence in the stability of the franc," he said. "I know there are many who do not favor this stability, but I am not one of them."

Following the debate the chamber rushed through the last articles of the budget, and the whole measure passed by a vote of 469 to 123. It now goes to the senate, where Doumergue has nothing to fear.

GROVER C. BERGDOLL, WAR DRAFT DODGER, DENIES ANY BRIBERY

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 22.—(AP)—In his first public statement since he fled to Germany 14 years ago, Grover C. Bergdoll, notorious draft dodger, says that he "never paid a cent" to effect his escape from an army guard.

"If I were given to bribery," he says, "I could easily have bribed myself into a rocking chair job in the army or navy during the war and would have avoided all the trouble I had. But I was no diplomat."

Bergdoll's statement was in the form of a letter addressed to the Philadelphia Record and published in today's editions of that newspaper. He said it was prompted by an editorial urging a presidential pardon for the fugitive.

Convicted as a technical deserter, Bergdoll was brought from New York to obtain a "pot of gold" which he was supposed to have buried. He stopped at his mother's home in Philadelphia and vanished in a waiting automobile.

In his letter Bergdoll pointed out that a congressional investigation failed to establish any bribery, but one of his prosecutors recently alleged corruption in connection with the escape.

Dating the letter from Weinsberg, Wüurttemberg, where he is living with a German wife and their three children, Bergdoll says:

"I never paid a cent of graft to any one in the world and I never intend to."

FEDERAL TROOPS TAKE OVER REBEL ARGENTINE STATE

MENDOZA, Argentina, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Acting under orders of President Justo, Gen. Juan Ramon Jones with federal troops today began restoring order in San Juan province, following a revolt yesterday which overthrew the provincial government.

Rebels last night burned the parliament building. Order was restored when Gen. Jones took charge. Leaders of the revolt said this meant federal rule, which was their aim.

The number killed in the fighting was placed at 21 and the wounded at the same number. Federico Cantoni, governor of the province, continued missing and it was believed he would remain in hiding until Justo decides whether to restore him or to continue the interventorship under Gen. Jones.

BOY, 6, IS KILLED, 5 OF HIS FAMILY INJURED IN CRASH

Mother Sees Train Smash Auto on Crossing.

Eugene Caswiak, 6 years old, 981 West 35th place, was killed and his father and four brothers were injured yesterday when the automobile in which they were returning from a funeral was struck by a freight train at 55th street and the Belt Line tracks near Cicero avenue.

The father, Frank Caswick, 45 years old, who was driving the car, suffered possible internal injuries, and Gilbert, 3 years old, was in a critical condition with a fractured skull. The other three children, Thomas, 12 years old; Clifford, 11 years old, and Donald, 8 years old, were cut and bruised.

Mother Witnesses Crash.

Mrs. Catherine Caswick, mother of the children, was following her husband's car in another automobile and saw the crash. She and her daughter, Eleanor, 8 months old, had ridden with Caswick until shortly before the accident. Then mother and daughter transferred to the second car, which was heated, in order that the baby might be warm.

The party was returning from the funeral of Caswick's brother-in-law at the Resurrection cemetery, 79th street and Archer avenue, when the accident occurred. Witnesses said that two other cars had raced in front of the freight engine and expressed the belief that Caswick believed that he could beat the train to the crossing. The electric signal on the open crossing was working, witnesses said.

Elderly Woman Killed.

Mrs. Louise Krause, 71 years old, 7232 Lunt avenue, died yesterday soon after the car in which she was riding crashed with another car driven by Jack Major, 17 years old, 755 William street, Forest Park.

According to the Oak Park police, Major suddenly swerved out to make a turn into a gasoline filling station on Harlem aevnue just north of West Division street.

The car in which Mrs. Krause was riding was being driven by her grandson, Alfred Koy, 16 years old, 2616 Rhodes avenue, River Grove. Major, with whom three other young men were riding, was taken to the Oak Park station and turned over to the River Forest police.

Farmer Killed in Crash.

Louis Holmes, 62 years old, a farmer of Thawville, 50 miles south of Kankakee, was killed in a second accident in which a car, bound for another funeral, figured. The truck, driven by Holmes, who had started for his home after delivering a truckload of cattle to the stockyards, was struck by an automobile in which William Elbers, 60 years old, 2060 West 183d street, Homewood, and four others were driving to a funeral.

The accident occurred at route 49 and 183d street, Homewood. Elbers, the members of his party, and Rudolph Warnke of Thawville, who was riding in the truck, escaped with minor injuries. Elbers was held by police who said that he did not stop for the highway.

Year's Toll Reaches 189.

These deaths and four others yesterday brought to 189 the Cook county motor toll for 1934. The other victims:

John Gills, 48 years old, 2968 South Wabash avenue. Died of injuries suffered Wednesday when he was struck by a cab at 25th street and Cottage Grove avenue. Stephen Budovis, 3905 Ellis avenue, the cab driver, was charged with assault with an automobile and released on bond.

Isaac Cohen, 60 years old, 3542 Franklin boulevard. Killed by a truck driven by William Garner, 826 Frederick street, at Division and Sedgwick streets.

Leroy Frandsen, 38 years old, 4632 Wentworth avenue, an automobile mechanic. Died in St. Bernard hospital last night. He was found unconscious at Swan street and Wentworth avenue on Feb. 11 and was believed to have been the victim of a hit and run car.

Thomas Keating, 50 years old, 2517 Haddon avenue. Killed at Skokie boulevard and Willow road, just west of Winnetka, by an automobile driven by G. E. Smalley of Racine, Wis., a lawyer.

Ruth Sharstad, 7 years old, 1226 Chicago avenue, Evanston, was severely injured last night when she was run down near her home by a car driven by William Dixon, Negro, of 1915 Emerson street. She was taken to St. Francis hospital suffering from a skull fracture. Dixon was held.

BONUS RIDER LOSES IN TEST IN SENATE BY VOTE OF 60 TO 14

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—(AP)—An effort to restore to world war veterans all the benefits that were taken from them by the economy law was voted down late today in the senate.

It rejected by 60 to 14 an amendment by Senator Hatfield [Rep., W. Va.], which would have repealed all sections of the economy law that affected veterans. It was estimated that the amendment would have cost 220 to 300 million dollars.

Hatfield offered the proposal as a rider to an administration compromise that Senator Byrnes [Dem., S. C.] had proposed to attach to the independent offices appropriations bill. The Byrnes amendment would restore to the rolls thousands of veterans whose disabilities were presumed to have been of service origin before the economy act and who were taken off compensation by review boards since that act passed last March.

William J. McCarthy, 70, Found Dead in Mundelein

William J. McCarthy, who lived in the Chicago metropolitan area for 60 years, died in his home on Oakdale avenue in Mundelein on his 70th birthday yesterday. His body was found by a friend who visited the home where Mr. McCarthy lived alone. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Loretta Washick, 11 South Austin boulevard, and a son, Edward, who is a student at Marquette university in Milwaukee. Funeral ceremonies will be held on Monday.

POLICEMAN GIVES 1½ PINTS BLOOD TO CAPT. ZIMMER

A pint and a half of blood was given to Capt. Matthew Zimmer in a transfusion in his home at 8132 South Sangamon street early today. Capt. Zimmer, commander of uniformed police, is in a serious condition as the result of being overcome by carbon monoxide fumes from his car Wednesday morning.

The blood was given by Policeman Drew W. Sheehan of the Hyde Park station. Earlier Sheehan and Lieut. Frank J. Malone of the Warren avenue station had been tested for blood transfusions and were found to have blood suitable for the purpose.

Dr. Lawrence Draper, the Zimmer family physician, and Dr. Frederick Tice, heart specialist, who directed the transfusion this morning, said that Capt. Zimmer reacted immediately and favorably. No further transfusion is contemplated until tonight, at which time, if necessary, Lieut. Malone will give the blood.

RADIO SERVICE MEN TO WAR ON INTERFERENCE

The Institute of Radio Service Men, meeting in convention in the Hotel Sherman today, will lay preliminary plans for a national campaign to eliminate radio interference sources all over the country. The plans will be drawn up by subcommittees under the committee on standardization, which will meet on Saturday. The subcommittees will prepare reports on interference and on the causes of "fading" of tone and make recommendations for their removal.

The convention will include an exhibit of radio sending and receiving sets and other apparatus which utilizes radio rays in operation. Among these will be the iconoscope, the latest television development, and an "electric eye," which is operated by the cathode ray. All exhibits will be in the hotel convention hall.

DR. P. AINSLIE, CHURCH UNITY LEADER, IS DEAD

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 23.—(AP)—The Rev. Peter Ainslie, 66 years old, internationally known for his work in the interest of church unity and world friendship through the churches, died early today in a hospital here following two operations since Jan. 7.

From 1910 to 1925 he was president of the Association for the Promotion of Christian Unity and was president of the Christian Unity league in 1927.

Born in Dunnsville, Va., and educated at Transylvania college, Lexington, Ky., Dr. Ainslie had been pastor of the Christian temple here since 1891.

Salesman Is Found Dead from Automobile Fumes

P. Jay Church, 43 years old, 4232 Oakenwald avenue, an automobile salesman, was found dead last night beside an automobile in a garage at the rear of 4324 Greenwood avenue. He had been overcome by carbon monoxide fumes from the automobile engine, which had stopped, apparently after exhausting the gasoline supply. The police learned that the automobile belonged to Nancy Grace Wright of Highland Park, but that Church frequently used it. Church's wife, who lives at 2033 Thornwood avenue, Wilmette, said her husband had been living at the Oakenwald avenue address to be nearer his work.

J. Mahlon Barnes, Noted Socialist Leader, Is Dead

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—(AP)—J. Mahlon Barnes, 68, Labor and Socialist leader and at one time national secretary of the Socialist party, died at his home here today of a paralytic stroke. In 1901 he coöperated with Eugene Debs, Victor Berger and Morris Hilquit in organizing the Socialist party. He was its secretary from 1905 to 1912 and campaign manager in the 1912 presidential election.

Rep. Hooper of Michigan Dies in Capital Office

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Representative Joseph L. Hooper [Rep., Mich.] died suddenly this afternoon after he had collapsed in his office in the house office building. He was 57 years old. He represented the 3d Michigan district and practiced law and was prosecutor of Calhoun county before his election to congress.

Eben B. Clarke, Retired Steel Man, Is Dead at 85

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Eben B. Clarke, 85, prominent retired steel official and clubman of Pittsburgh, Pa., died at his winter home here this morning.

William Shaw-Thomson, Prominent Ad Man, Is Dead

New York, Feb. 22.—(AP)—William Shaw-Thomson, prominent advertising man, died of an acute abdominal illness at his Fifth avenue home tonight at the age of 47. He was a native of England and served as a major in the royal air force in the world war.

Gunmen Rob Drug Store in Loop; Threaten Four

Two armed men took $100 from the cash register of a Walgreen drug store at 41 South State street shortly before midnight last night after threatening Raymond Peterson, 6639 Greenwood avenue, the manager, and three other employés.

5 SCARLET FEVER CASES FOUND IN COUNTY HOSPITAL

Two wards at the county hospital, containing 150 patients, were under quarantine last night as a result of five cases of scarlet fever reported in the institution. Another ward of 110 patients was quarantined for five days, but the ban there was lifted at 5:30 p. m. yesterday. Two nurses, two patients, and a doctor were stricken with the disease.

The first case occurred a week ago when a nurse, Miss Jennie Ray, employed in Ward 30, where there are 100 patients, became ill. Two days later Dr. W. W. King, a staff physician, who attends many of the 110 patients in Ward 34, was stricken. Then Miss Deguid, a nurse sent to the hospital by the CWA and employed in Ward 31, contracted the disease. Later two patients in one of the wards already under quarrantine became affected.

Dr. R. T. Vaughan, night superintendent of the hospital, said it was not unusual for cases of such a disease to occur during the winter months when the institution is filled. The quarantine has been lifted from ward 34 and probably will be lifted from the other two wards about the end of this week.

PLEA FOR HER ILL FATHER HEEDED; BANDITS LEAVE

Miss Ann Ahannos, 7101 South Chicago avenue, pleaded with four young bandits masked in mufflers who invaded her home last night that her sick father, John, would be seriously affected if he were disturbed, and thus succeeded in getting the robbers to leave without any loot. The youths had forced their way into her home when she answered their knock. Exhibiting pistols, they threatened her with death if she made an outcry and ordered her to turn over her money. They were about to search the house after she had told them she had no money when she told them of her father, asleep in another room. The leader of the quartet then ordered the others to drop their robbery plans and all left.

Widow, Overcome by Gas Fumes in Her Home, Dies

Mrs. Gussie Shaket, 48 years old, 1225 South Turner avenue, a widow, died in the county hospital yesterday afternoon a few hours after she was found unconscious in her home by her sisters, Mrs. Marie Winsberg, 1248 South Turner avenue. Physicians at the hospital said that Mrs. Shaket had probably been overcome by coal gas in her home. Police said the flat she occupied was heated by a coal stove.

Former Associate of Bandmaster Sousa Dead

SIR EDW. ELGAR, A NOTED BRITISH COMPOSER, DIES

WORCESTER, England, Feb. 23 [Friday].—(AP)—Sir Edward Elgar, 77 years old, British composer, died at his home early today. He had been ill since an operation in October.

Sir Edward, acknowledged as one of the greatest of all English composers, had the rare experience of being acclaimed a genius during his lifetime.

His three oratorios, "The Dream of Gerontius," "The Apostles," and "The Kingdom," are said to be unique in modern British music and contain many of the composer's English characteristics which made his works appeal to the music lovers of his generation.

Equally as well liked were his other masterpieces, "The Two Symphonies," "The Two Concertos," for violin and cello, and "The Enigma Variations."

Sir Edward was made "Master of the King's Musick," a post corresponding to that of poet laureate in the realm of literature, in 1924, and retained that honor until his death. He was a doctor of music of Yale university and a doctor of laws of the Western University of Pennsylvania.

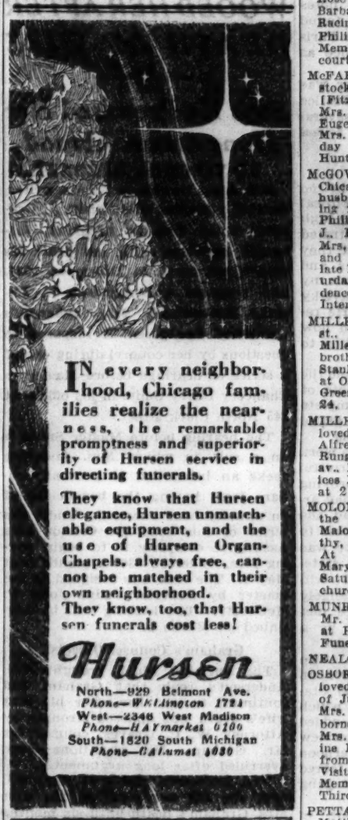
He was made a knight of the British empire in 1904 and received a rarely bestowed decoration, the Order of Merit, in 1911.

FORMER RABBI, DR. H. G. ENELOW, IS BURIED HERE

Funeral services for the Rev. Dr. Hyman Gerson Enelow, rabbi emeritus of Temple Emanu-El of New York City and who, for 22 years, was rabbi of this congregation, were held yesterday in the chapel of the Rosehill cemetery. Dr. Enelow died on Feb. 5, aboard the liner Empress of Australia near Madeira. He was 57 years old.

The services yesterday were attended by 85 persons. Dr. Louis I. Mann of Chicago and Dr. David Philipson of Rockdale Avenue Temple, Cincinnati, conducted the services. Dr. Philipson was Dr.. Enelow's teacher at the Hebrew Union college in Cincinnati.

Dr. Enelow is survived by two brothers, B. F. and Max Enelow of Chicago and a sister, Mrs. Lena Mann of San Diego, Cal.



In every neighborhood, Chicago families realize the nearness, the remarkable promptness and superiority of Hursen service in directing funerals.

They know that Hursen elegance, Hursen unmatchable equipment, and the use of Hursen Organ-Chapels, always free, cannot be matched in their own neighborhood.

They know, too, that Hursen funerals cost less!

LAST NIGHT I listened to CHINA

Are you listening? . . . Do you know that for as little as $10 you may build a short-wave radio set which, every hour of the day and every hour of the night, will bring into your home the programs of the world . . . the opera of La Scala, the music halls of London, a horse race at Melbourne, a concert from Moscow, a saengerbund from Berlin? . . . Do you know that you can hear the police calls of Miami or San Francisco, airplanes telephoning and a thousand and one other varieties of entertainment, education and plain fun? . . . Do you know that these foreign stations announce in English and frame their programs for you in America? Do you know that reception is of high quality?

Well, those are the Facts!

A NEW ERA IN RADIO HAS ARRIVED . . . THE ERA OF UNLIMITED RECEPTION

If you ever built a radio—you will want to build a short-wave set. The Sun will show you how. A child can do it; in fact, there are kits for children.

If you cannot solder two pieces of wire, then there are sets already made for you and The Sun's advertisers will tell you where you may get them.

Of course you want to log the stations of the world—there are hundreds of them—just as in the early days you logged the stations of the United States and got the thrill of a lifetime when you caught Memphis and Los Angeles on the same night.

And because of your wishes, which it knows from the thousands of letters to its Radio Department in the last few months, The Sun will publish . . .

TOMORROW

a page of simple diagrams for the construction of short-wave sets as well as all the news of developments in all-wave sets and in short-wave broadcasting. There will be another page listing in full the hundreds of stations throughout the world which are firing programs at America. And it will tell you how to identify them and log them. Every Saturday thereafter The Sun will continue with pages of diagrams and news.

The Sun now starts to teach many thousands to build the new sets

Have the Saturday Sun mailed to you every week and get, in addition to the Radio Pages, many other special features. The cost is but $1.50 a year.

SUBMIT RELIEF ECONOMY PLANS TO BOARD TODAY

Poor Levies for Counties to Be Considered.

The Illinois Emergency Relief commission will meet in its headquarters at 10 South La Salle street today to consider several proposals for administrative economies designed to keep relief expenditures in the state within the funds available for the current year.

The commission will also consider a plan whereby individual counties throughout the state will be asked to provide a larger share of the funds spent for relief to the idle than they have raised in the past. These additional funds would be raised through township poor relief levies, according to the plan to be presented to the commission. Unless some such method of providing additional funds is approved by the commission, relief authorities says, the funds available will be far below the expenditures.

$30,000,000 Now Available.

The relief authorities have $30,000,000 available for expenses for the rest of the year. This is in the form of $20,000,000 worth of tax anticipation warrants and $10,000,000 in cash. The tax warrants are based on a state-wide property levy to be made this fall unless an alternate proposal for funding the debt in a bond issue, to be amortized from the counties' shares of the state gasoline tax over a period of 20 years, is approved by the voters in a referendum at the November election.

Wilfred S. Reynolds, director of relief for the commission, who will present the plan for raising additional funds in the individual counties, also hopes to get additional funds from the federal relief administration. Howard O. Hunter, field supervisor for the federal relief administration, pointed out last week that the federal government assisted Illinois bountifully last year and does not intend to provide a major portion of the state's relief funds this year.

The need for administrative economies has been brought home to the relief commissioners by the fact that more than $150,000,000 has been spent on relief for the idle in Cook county alone since 1930. Recent analyses of the costs of relief in Cook county have indicated sharply increasing case unit costs, despite a decrease in the number of persons on the relief rolls.

Would Decrease Social Workers.

Two economy proposals will be presented to the commission in its meeting today. One would take 500 social workers and clerical employés off the pay rolls of the county relief administration immediately to bring the ratio of relief cases per worker to 50 to 1. This ratio was established as the commission policy last fall when the families on the relief rolls began to decrease.

The other economy measure would involve a change in the commission's policy, under which the ratio would be altered to include all administrative workers as well as all social workers. This would increase the number of cases for each social worker, and also result in further reductions in the professional staffs. Robert J. Dunham, chairman of the relief commission, is supporting these recommendations, while Mr. Reynolds opposes them.

Executive Salaries Increase.

A study made yesterday of executive salaries paid in Cook county by the relief commission, not including salaries paid in the district relief offices, disclosed that they increased 56.4 per cent during the year ended last Oct. 31, while the number of families on relief decreased 13.5 per cent. This increase in salaries was due to the addition of services designed to increase the efficiency of the relief administration.

A tabulation showing the amount of salaries paid in the executive departments of the relief administration in Cook county, not including salaries in the relief commission headquarters or in the headquarters of the Cook County Bureau of Public Welfare, and the number of families on the relief rolls, follows:

Month—	Relief Cases.	Salaries.
November, 1932	124,830	$25,896
December	136,537	26,669
January, 1933	146,271	26,637

MENDOTA PASTOR WHO SHOT 2 GOES ON PAROLE TODAY

James A. Wilson, 61 years old, former pastor of the Methodist church at Mendota, will be paroled from Joliet penitentiary today, he was informed by prison officials yesterday. He has been serving a sentence of one to fourteen years in prison for shooting Amos Elliott, sexton of his church, and Mrs. Elliott, in an attempt to get a letter which had been written by the minister to a widow who was a member of his church. The shooting occurred in March, 1930. Wilson finished serving the first year of his sentence on last Feb. 9. His parole was approved by the state board of pardons and paroles after he appeared before the members last Feb. 3.

GIRL KIDNAPED 2D TIME FOUND TIED TO A TREE

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 23 [Friday.]—(AP)—Caroline Musante, 14-year-old girl who disappeared yesterday, was found tied to a tree early today. The girl, who was believed to have been kidnaped, was brought to a hospital here.

It was the second time within thirteen months that the girl had been reported kidnaped, and then found bound to a tree not far from her home.

She was found tonight tied hand and foot to a tree within a few hundred yards of the tree to which she had been tied in the previous case.

Hospital authorities would say only that she was "resting comfortably."

The girl was discovered by department of justice agents G. J. Peterson and L. J. Rauber.

Two agents from Washington joined Stafford county authorities in their search for the schoolgirl who disappeared early yesterday. Leo Musante, her father, Stafford county farmer, said he had received a note telling him to place $1,500 at a specified place "or Caroline's head" would be sent to him.

It was in February of last year that Caroline, after an overnight absence, was found tied to a tree in the woods near her home.

A judge termed the affair a hoax.

Dorothy Aldis Adds to Cheer of Childhood

'Hop, Skip and Jump' Has Forty-Six Poems.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

Dorothy Aldis, whose "Here, There and Everywhere" and "Everything and Anything" have made more children happy and have been blessed by more mothers than any poems to come out of Chicago for some time, today offers more glee to the younger and more solace to the older generation in "Hop, Skip and Jump" [Minton-Balch].

DOROTHY ALDIS.

Of the forty-six poems there is none that is longer than a page, none that is beyond youthful memorizing, and they all have the jolly simplicity that makes it easy to learn them "by heart." They have to do with the homely things of a child's everyday life or his special day life . . . like the group called "At the Circus," in which "The Seals" have a new interpretation:

"The seals all flap
Their shining flips
And bounce balls on
Their nosy tips,
And beat a drum,
And catch a bar,
And wriggle with
How pleased they are."

Or the Thanksgiving one about "The Little Girl and the Turkey":

"The little girl said
As she asked for more:
'But what is the turkey
Thankful for?'"

There is something adultly poignant in the implications of

"THE CANDLE COMPLAINS.

"When you're a candle,
You are lit,
Not knowing Why
Or What About:
Then, when you're least
Expecting it,
Without a word,
They blow you out."

Aren't we all such?

And, although a child says it, isn't there more than a child's sadness in—

"NOT ANY MORE"?

"I feel very sorry for
Toys not played with any more—
An engine quiet on a shelf,
A dolly sitting by herself.

"It must be hard to be a ball
Never thrown or bounced at all,
But lonesomer and still less fun
To be a little top unspun."

Dorothy Aldis has four children of her own, though it's hard to believe from her own startling youth. She is in private life Mrs. Graham Aldis.

Front Views and Profiles

By June Provines

MR. STOCK was rehearsing the Chicago Symphony orchestra the other afternoon for this week's concert. The piece was "La Mer," by Debussy. In his accustomed manner he was having the orchestra go over certain passages, then passing over several pages that he knew it played to perfection, to another passage he wanted the orchestra to rehearse. Suddenly he stopped, plucked something from the pages of the music, and demanded of his men:

Jokester—
Pitch—
Wish—
Complaint—
Gag.

"Well, how do you expect me to play this?"

In his hand he held a copy of Ballyhoo that some one had slipped in with the music.

* *

THE discovery of the week is that of a clarinet player. From his studio in Kimball hall he observed that every time the elevated swung around the loop at Van Buren and Wabash it screeched on the same note. By testing with his clarinet he learned that the note was F-sharp.

* *

PHYLLIS BENTLEY, author of "A Modern Tragedy," who has been in Chicago this week, wishes that each day were three days. If that could be arranged she would use one of them to do the book reviewing she does for British publications, the second to write, and the third to have fun. The only trouble with such an arrangement is that probably if each day were three just as many things would pile up to do in each of the three.

* *

WE wrote about the key name in the upper right hand corner of the page in the telephone directory where the various Wrights are listed, being "Wronski" and received the following letter:

"No, I don't particularly care, but you ought not to be so naïve; watch your contributors more closely. The name in the phone book is 'Wronski,' not 'Wrongski.' Which makes you wrongski and your gag not so funnyski.

"OLD SMOOTHIE."

* *

WE have a sneaking suspicion we printed this same gag years ago, but if we can't remember maybe you can't. Anyhow, a friend called up yesterday to say that Henry C. Lytton, veteran State street merchant, who is vacationing at the Arizona Biltmore, wrote that he saw a friend talking to two musicians and said the following day:

"Was that an oboe I saw you with last night?"

To which the friend replied:

"That was no oboe, that vas my fife."

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—President and Mrs. Roosevelt motored to Mount Vernon today to lay a wreath upon the tomb of George Washington. They were accompanied by the President's military and naval aids, Col. Edwin M. Watson and Capt. Walter N. Vernou, and Miss Le Hand and Mrs. Scheider, secretaries of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Dr. and Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler arrived today to be overnight guests of President and Mrs. Roosevelt. A few guests were asked in to dine with them tonight.

The secretary of agriculture and Mrs. Wallace were entertained at dinner tonight by the former American ambassador to Chile and Mrs. William S. Culbertson.

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, sister of former Vice President Curtis, has gone to Coral Gables, Fla., where she is the guest of Mrs. Henry L. Doherty of New York.

Baden-Powell, Father of Boy Scout Movement, Is 77

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

All you girls with sallow or sluggish skins ought to make it a point to skip down to a State street store today or tomorrow to look into the merits of a treatment line they're featuring.

It's a delightfully simple treatment, which is considerable recommendation in itself, and as a daily practice or a quick pickup on those special occasions when you particularly want some glow to your skin and some sparkle to your eyes you'll find it a valuable array of four jars and bottles to have on hand.

There's a cream for cleansing, a stimulating mask, a tissue cream, and a lotion that is scrumptious—slightly pink, delicately fragrant, and altogether exciting in consistency . . . something like a heavenly jelly that didn't quite jell.

The first step on the road to skin refreshening and refining with this treatment is use of a cleansing cream, one of two, depending on your skin. If it's normal, or even oily, you'll choose a light, liquefying cream of which this line is pretty proud; if it's dry you'll prefer their slightly heavier cream, designed especially to cope with the lack of natural oil situation.

The most exciting part of the treatment is its second step, when cleansing is over and done with. The thick, cool mask ointment is patted on, not rubbed in, in a fairly heavy layer that makes a mask when it dries, which is in about ten minutes. The skin isn't drawn too much, but it is tautened and stimulated just enough to make it tingle and glow. When the mask is removed with tepid water the skin is pleasantly stimulated and properly receptive to the tissue cream, which next gets its turn at beautifying. This is molded in generously, then removed to make way for a refreshing "wash" with the appetizing pink lotion. A lot of this soaks into the skin, but the surplus is removed with tissue.

This done, you either tumble into your trundle bed or you step out gayly, looking just as good as your skin feels.

ELEANOR NESBLE.

Stock Offers Eleventh Work by Sowerby

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Leo Sowerby's eleventh work to be placed upon the repertoire of the Chicago Symphony orchestra was played for the first time at Orchestra hall yesterday afternoon and warmly applauded. Not that eleven compositions represent the output of his career to date. They are only a fraction of the total. But eleven to have been played by one orchestra is a fair record for a composer not yet forty years old.

The present work is a Passacaglia, Interlude, and Fugue, three sections making one continuous composition. Mr. Sowerby explains that while he has adhered rather strictly to the classic form, the music itself is unacademic, tending toward the romantic.

The description is accurate, except that it says nothing about the merits of the piece, which are many and marked. It is more than a little complex, but scored with so much skill that thickness and noise have been almost entirely evaded.

The introduction of the fugue, for example, is made light and shimmering through the use of gently played woodwinds. It develops a climax and then dies down into soft tone again. The interlude displays much charm of imagination. Naturally the first part, continuous variations, has to follow the model in all fidelity, but even here there is considerably more than a set of variations for its own sake. It is dignified, stately music, well worth hearing several times.

It was no doubt coincidence, but this work sounded especially eloquent, coming as it did immediately after a speech by Mrs. Arthur Meeker. Speaking as one who had attended the concerts of the orchestra in the Auditorium and who had been one of those who subscribed to build Orchestra hall, she said, "We must not lose one of our most precious possessions. We must not let one of the great orchestras of the world disband."

Figures given out by her were to the effect that $45,544 out of the desired $70,000 have been raised, indicating that the drive is not yet over, though much progress has been made.

Frederick Stock began the program with some of the best light music of the eighteenth century, Bach's Second Concerto, and closed with some of the best of the twentieth, the Polka and Fugue from Weinberger's opera, "Schwanda, the Bagpipe Player." The symphony was Schumann's Fourth, and Debussy's beautiful "La Mer" also took an important place on the program.

The Monte Carlo Ballet Russe said farewell to two crowded audiences yesterday afternoon and evening, a temporary farewell, since the prospect was held out of a return in April. Another ballet was added to the company's brilliant list in the afternoon, "The School of Ballet," from a comedy by Goldoni with music by Boccherini. It was a merrily spun little conceit, full of comic as well as legitimate dancing, not one of the company's greatest works, but unfailingly charming and amusing.

Roy Zobel, tenor, won first place in one of the sectional contests of the Chicagoland Music Festival last summer. He made a debut recital at Kimball hall last night. Both were entirely justified. He has a voice of enviable range, power, and quality; he also has the mental endowment of a musician. The combination will undoubtedly carry him a considerable distance in the field of music, and the fact that he is still young registers as another asset. He has distinct promise and more than a little achievement.

Good Morning!

"Death Takes a Holiday" is a film to be received with thanksgiving—for its technical beauty, the high intelligence of its players, and its message. A strange picture [adapted from the Italian stage play by Alberto Casella] and a strangely comforting one.

For Death, the terrifying, the bewildering, is seen as an entity, in his turn troubled and questioning.

"Why," he wants to know, "are men afraid of me? What so wonderful have they in their lives that they hate to leave?"

Three days on earth as a human, Death takes, to solve the problem. . . .

He finds the group of people among whom he decides to conduct his research, actively occupied with trivialities. Forsaking the beauty of moonlight drenched gardens for smoky rooms and roulette tables. Little, feverish emotions, and great fears, he discovers, but nowhere any compelling happiness that should make mortals dread departure from life as they do. Until——

In a woman's response, her steadfast love, her supreme understanding and confidence, he finds an answer:

There is a dream in men that lifts them out of their petty nothingnesses. A dream—that makes it all worthwhile . . . !

And the woman, faithful to her dream, forsakes all else to follow him. For she has always known that Death would be beautiful and kind and that she would find her true and only happiness in him.

The story has a mysterious, elating quality.

Scenes are laid in and about an Italian country château whither Death, wearing the guise of a certain prince—expected guest of the owner—comes for his "holiday." Only the host is, fearfully, in his confidence. Having commanded and received a promise of secrecy from the latter, Death, as the handsome and cultured foreigner, Prince Sirki, meets and mingles with Duke Lambert's house party. . . .

The women are fascinated by him. The men look at him askance, with a resentful uneasiness for which they cannot account. Only Grazia comprehends, and it is not till the end of his stay that the strange visitor is to realize how completely she does so.

A man leaps from the Eiffel tower and is uninjured. Death feels guilty about neglecting his duties. How unhappy this chap must have been to commit the act, and how cruel the fact that he was foiled in achieving his purpose! Shipwrecks and railroad catastrophes occur, and there are no fatalities. Wars—and the ammunition won't work . . . !

"I have never understood why men go to war," ruminates Death. "It's always something about a flag, isn't it?"

Wizardy of photography [note the scenes where Death is seen AS Death], richness of château interiors, loveliness of scenery, all lend potency to the compelling plot idea with its rarely beautiful traceries of philosophy.

Fredric March's inspirational performance will prevent my thinking of him as Fredric March for a long time to come. The man is completely submerged in, probably, the greatest rôle he has ever played. Evelyn Venable, too, rises to heights as the serene, the mystic Grazia.

Your interest centers in these two. Supporting rôles are intuitively interpreted and direction is perfection. The dialog is downright spellbinding.

"A picture that certainly gets you," I said, as I put on my wraps.

"Yes," the man to whom I spoke answered. "It does . . ." He hesitated a moment. "It's done something for me . . . Made me feel better . . . I lost my father a month ago."

See you tomorrow.

Miss Roosevelt Will Be Bride at Oyster Bay

New York, Feb. 22.—(AP)—For the first time since President Theodore Roosevelt died, his home at Oyster Bay, L. I., will be opened for a large function when Miss Grace Green Roosevelt is married to William McMillan of Baltimore on March 3.

Miss Roosevelt, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, is the first grandchild of the late President to be married.

It was announced that President Franklin D. Roosevelt and his family will come from Washington, Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth will be there with her daughter, Paulina, and other Roosevelts will come from far and wide.

This will be the second wedding ever to take place at Sagamore Hill, the estate where the President's widow now lives. The earlier wedding was that of Edith Roosevelt to Richard Derby. Their daughter, Edith Derby, will be one of the bridesmaids.

The wedding will take place at noon at Christ church in Oyster Bay, with the Rev. George E. Talmage, retired clergyman and a friend of Theodore Roosevelt, officiating. Twining Lynes will come from Groton, Mass., where the Roosevelt boys went to school, to play the organ.

Miss Mary Welldon will be maid of honor, and Alan Rutherfurd Stuyvesant will be best man. The flower girl will be Paulina Longworth.

Bridesmaids are Miss Carolyn Winston of North Carolina, Miss Edith Derby of Oyster Bay, Miss Catherine Noyes of Chicago, Miss Nancy Symington of Baltimore, Miss Leta Morris and Miss Alice Morris of this city, daughters of the American ambassador to Belgium.

Ushers will be Theodore Roosevelt III. and Cornelius Van Schaak Roosevelt, brothers of the bride; Hugh McMillan of Detroit, C. Campbell Patterson of Boston; Francis Williams, C. T. Williams, Harvey Clapp, and Rieman McIntosh, all of Baltimore, and Lewis Rutherford Stuyvesant, Winthrop Rutherfurd, Edward Brewster, and Charles Bookwalter, all of New York.

Following the ceremony, there will be a wedding breakfast at Sagamore Hill.

Persons high in government and society are expected. Among the national figures who have accepted invitations is Alfred E. Smith.

McMillan, an architect, is the son of the late Hugh McMillan of Detroit and Mrs. Walter Dent Wise of Baltimore. He is a big game hunter and expert yachtsman.

Miss Louise Gilman Becomes Bride of Francis S. Hutchins

Mont Clair, N. J., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Miss Louise Frances Gilman, daughter of the Rt. Rev. Alfred A. Gilman, Protestant Episcopal missionary bishop at Wuchang, China, and Mrs. Gilman, was married to Francis Stevenson Hutchins, son of the Rev. William Y. Hutchins, president of Berea college, Berea, Ky., and Mrs. Hutchins, in St. Luke's church here this afternoon. The ceremony was performed by the bridegroom's father and was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kidde, 56 Gates avenue.

The bride was born in Changsha, China. She is a graduate of Mont Clair High school and Wellesley college and also attended Cornell college medical school, where she intends to continue her studies.

Mr. Hutchins, who heads Yale-in-China at Changsha, is a brother of Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago. He was graduated from Oberlin college and took a post-graduate course at Yale, specializing in international relations. After a wedding trip he and his bride will reside in New York until they depart for China.

Engagement Told

Miss Helen Rutherford McCormick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick, whose engagement to H. Warren Buckler Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. H. Warren Buckler of Baltimore, is announced by her parents this morning. Miss McCormick is known to her friends as Patty.

Engagement of Miss Helen R. M'Cormick Told

BY JUDITH CASS.

"MR. AND MRS. ROBERT HALL McCORMICK announce the engagement of their daughter, Helen Rutherford McCormick, to H. Warren Buckler Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. H. Warren Buckler of Baltimore," reads the announcement received from Mrs. McCormick. It wasn't to be released until Sunday, but the news that the announcement was to be made then leaked out yesterday, so the official announcement is being made two days earlier than Mrs. McCormick had intended it to be made.

Mrs. McCormick and her daughter, who always is called Patty, went to New York several days ago, and young Mr. Buckler is joining them there for the week-end. Miss Eleanor McCormick, who has been visiting her fiancé, Sargent Collier, and his mother, Mrs. E. Pomeroy Collier, in Boston, will join her mother and sister in New York in a day or two and the three will return to Chicago in about ten days or two weeks.

Miss Patty McCormick went to the Foxcroft school, just as her sister did, and made her debut in 1931. Mr. Buckler was in the class of '28 at Harvard and later went to the Harvard law school.

Miss Eleanor McCormick's engagement to Mr. Collier was announced just after Christmas, when Mr. Collier and his mother were visiting here, and they plan to be married in June at Bar Harbor, where the McCormicks have a summer place and where the romance started. The McCormick-Buckler romance started there, too, and it is quite probable that both sisters will be married there this summer, although no plans for Patty's wedding have been announced by Mrs. McCormick.

Chicago Girls Will Enjoy Yale Prom.

Many Chicago girls are among the thousands of guests who will be thronging into New Haven today for the Yale junior prom to be held in Woolsey hall tonight. The prom ushers in a three day whirl of continuous activity at the exclusive clubs and fraternity houses on the campus where the fair guests will be put up during their stay.

This year's prom is to be less formal than in past years and there will be no elaborately decorated ballroom and none of the lavishness that characterized proms of several years ago. Before the prom the committee members and their guests will attend the wooden spoon banquet in the Zeta Psi house.

The dancing will start at 10 o'clock and last until 3 at the prom and then the young people will move on to the exclusive Sheffield clubs to dance until dawn and to have breakfast. Keith S. Brown of Wheaton is a member of the prom committee.

Miss Mary Senior, who made her debut last winter and who is at Vassar this year, is one of the week-end guests at Vernon Hall, and Miss Allen Withers, who goes to Sarah Lawrence, is at the St. Anthony club. Miss Nancy Brown also is a St. Anthony guest. Miss Charlotte Bruckner, Miss Marion Calkins, and Miss Taylor Hanniford are visiting at St. Elmo, and Miss Mary Louise Hayes, Miss Elizabeth Gorman, and Miss Janette Lyon are at the Cloister club.

At Franklin Hall is Miss Martha Worcester, and Miss Mary Clokey represents Chicago at the Delta Kappa Epsilon house. Miss Nancy Clapp is

New Topcoats Take Honors in Spring Styles

BY RHEA SEEGER.

They're turning out topcoats for spring that will make any fashion writer stutter for words . . . stunning, swagger, swanky things with all the various sized pockets you have ever dreamed about, notched collars, wide lapels, and a fitted silhouette that is the smoothest thing the spectators will ever thrill to see.

And topcoats are long, and long mean long this time. . . . Most of them completely cover the dress you decide to wear beneath them, and lots of the two piece ensembles of coat and skirt have long coats that hang a full inch below the skirt.

Some wag has designed and sent out into the fashion world a wide lapeled coat of navy blue, liberally accented with white, white under the lapels, white under cuffs that flare out sharply beyond the limits of the cuffs, and buttoned with huge plate size white buttons—whence comes the name "Mickey Mouse coat." It's just as audacious as it sounds and infinitely smart on the right slim, youthful person who can wear these daring creations.

Bold bad checks that formerly went the racy way of the turf have suddenly turned about face and splashed themselves smartly on the fabrics for feminine topcoats. . . . And please don't be afraid of wild and woolly checks or plaids; the wilder, the bigger and bolder you wear them the more fashion conscious and adventurous you will become.

But if you insist upon quietness even though the rest of the world is noisily appareled in large and prominent checked affairs and colorful plaids the new soft woolen diagonals will charm your capricious spirit. These one color soft tweedy effects in pattern only are remarkably soft and supple and easy to wear. . . . They come in intriguing shades of old blue, light blue, soft creamy beige, deep amber, and, of course, all the darker street shades.

THE WILD BIRD

By OWEN JOHNSON

SYNOPSIS.

Barbara Brawne, aged 22, is completely dominated by an adoring, though jealous father, who is against every modern idea and improvement. Lynwood, their home, is in the prim and proper village of Oxbridge, a place of intellectual sanctity. Barbara seems predestined to join the ranks of the village spinsters. Her father scares away any would-be suitors. She contemplates rebellion. Gregory Rance, popular novelist, is visiting her cousin, Laurie Chiswick. They are mutually attracted. Barbara overhears Rance asking Laurie about her. He says she is the sort of girl he'd want to marry. Barbara proposes to Rance. But Rance is divorced and her father hates divorce and uses this as an excuse to oppose their marriage. When Barbara determines to marry Rance regardless, her father has a stroke. Barbara fears he'll kill himself deliberately. She promises him she won't marry Rance without his consent. Gregory goes away and Barbara strives futilely to put him out of her mind. Disbrough, her father's partner, is a frequent visitor at Lynwood.

INSTALLMENT XXXV.

ACCUMULATED FORTUNES.

Twice a year Martin Brawne rendered his accounts to his sisters and his daughter, a ceremonious, formal exposition with the rigidity of a cabinet meeting. During the thirty years of his stewardship other fortunes had swollen over night and melted away. With Martin Brawne there had been no yielding to the expediencies of speculation. His was a 3 per cent mind. Consequently the Brawne estate had rolled up slowly and inexorably, reinvesting each year its accumulating income in mortgages, rents, and government bonds.

The Oxbridge fortunes were, of course, solid fortunes, for the Oxbridgites were investors, not speculators. Bonanza years and mounting stock markets meant nothing to them. Only when values crumbled did they begin to stir and take notice. When values receded and bonds and preferred stocks fell sympathetically, there came an opening of strong boxes. From the Oxbridge station they made quiet, thoughtful trips to New York to consult their financial advisers, an unhurried, unruffled journey in what Ed Chippinway called the Investors' Special. When they returned there had been an exchange of gold bonds for gilt edged securities at bargain prices, to be held for a fifteen or twenty point rise—no longer.

"What good will that do me, father, what good is all that money?"

took place in the musty library. Mr. Brawne, at the big flat topped desk, with both arms planted amid an array of ledgers, had the look of a judge of the criminal courts about to pronounce sentence. The aunts, balanced stiffly on the edges of the high backed chairs, maintained the decorum of a funeral. Disbrough slipped back and forth, carrying to the aunts for their inspection documents which they peered into helplessly, exchanging looks of mystified contentment. Barbara, from her corner, watched him.

"He's almost one of the family," she thought. Had he had the courage to plead her cause, or had he preferred to risk nothing?

"It is thirty years now since I took over the management of the estate," said Martin Brawne in a matter of fact voice. "At that time each share amounted to exactly $612,352.76. Turn to page 12, top. The financial recapitulation for each year begins there. And for convenience sake I have summarized the accounting for each ten years—profits and losses. There have been no losses."

"No losses, Martin?"

"No losses. At the end of the first decade each share had increased to $954,678.31. At the second decade to $1,472,877.69. Today, thirty years afterward, it stands at $2,054,399.24. I congratulate you."

"Two millions!" said the aunts simultaneously, nodding their heads and smiling. ("Just as though some one had presented them with a beautiful bouquet of flowers," thought Barbara.)

Brawne continued recapitulating the list of investments, explaining their character and diversifications; the last operation, when with two hundred thousand cash and the sale of four hundred thousand worth of Liberty bonds he had bought Steel Preferred and Standard Oil of New Jersey at the best price obtainable in years. The aunts continued to smile and nod, vaguely pleased; like two children bewildered by the mechanism of a toy which was being operated for them.

"Now that I have explained everything," he concluded, "you can study the report. Ask me any questions if you don't understand." He closed the ledger before him and shoved it back, took off his glasses, and, wiping them, with satisfaction said sharply, "I hope you are satisfied."

"Satisfied?" Miss Abbie looked at her sister, extending her ear trumpet. "Why I think Martin's wonderful! Don't you, Mattie? All that money—I can't believe it. Can you, Mattie?"

"I'm glad you're satisfied," said Brawne peremptorily. "I am. Now I want to go over Barbara's affairs with her."

Disbrough withdrew. The old ladies rose, still quite bewildered, and then, as though the solemnity of the occasion demanded it, approached their brother and gave him each a formal kiss on the forehead. Mr. Brawne was so surprised at this exhibition of emotion, the first in forty years, that he remained a moment staring at their exit before saying:

"Humph! Well, well, I think I have done pretty well by them, don't you, my dear?"

"Yes," said her lips.

"No, no, nothing of the kind," she was thinking indignantly. "He has taken their youth and returned what? A fortune which they'll never possess, never enjoy or know how to enjoy for that matter! And that is exactly what is going to happen to me!"

"You have a strange look," he said puzzled.

"Have I? I was thinking things."

He looked at her sharply, but he did not pursue the subject.

She came and sat down at the desk opposite him, locking her fingers and staring up at him from under her eyebrows. The look made him uneasy. He began to fidget.

"Your own estate is in good shape. I have been able to secure some guaranteed mortgages at 5 per cent that will increase your income to about $26,400. From now on, my dear, I think, considering what is coming to you, that you should consider and understand each investment as I make it. I want you to be competent, financially competent."

"What is coming to me, father?"

He pursed his lips, caging his fingers, and looked at her tentatively.

"As the heir of your aunts, and from the trust fund I have created for you, you will receive between seven and a half to eight millions."

"Eight millions?" she said and, staring at him, began to laugh.

She leaned forward over the desk.

"What good will all that do me, father? What good is all that money to Aunt Mattie and Aunt Abbie?" she continued in a low voice. "Do you know what I was thinking while I watched them sitting there with their childlike pleasure. They've never had a dollar of it and they never will. The only money you have in the world is the money you enjoy." She leaned forward: "Father, you've got to help me."

"You want to leave me," he said instantly.

"I want you to help me to readjust my life."

Instantly his hands clenched.

"If you are going to reopen——"

"Father, please——"

"Well?"

"Understand me once and for all. I have given up Gregory for your sake. That's ended. I haven't seen or heard from him for months."

Doris Blake Answers

Don't Encourage Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: A man whom I admire turns around or stares when we meet. Don't you think it's obvious he wishes to meet me, and how can I show I would like to meet him?

"PERPLEXED."

Unless you can get some one to introduce you, don't encourage the man's attentions.

Why So Distressed?

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a girl, but another fellow is trying to chisel in. She says she loves me first and him second. What shall I do?

"ANXIOUS."

Don't see what you have to get distressed about, Anxious? Isn't the girl's word sufficient to keep your self-confidence?

Welch-Sargent Nuptials Today.

A late afternoon wedding in Evanston today will unite two of the town's old and prominent families. At 4:30 o'clock in the chapel of the First Methodist Episcopal church Miss Dorothy Louise Welch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Dale Welch, will become the bride of Minier Sargent, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sargent.

Dr. Ernest Fremont Tittle, pastor of the church, will read the service in the presence of more than a hundred relatives and intimate friends. Attending Miss Welch as matron of honor will be Dr. Tittle's daughter-in-law, Mrs. John Meyers Tittle. Miss Adelyn Welch will be her sister's maid of honor. The bridesmaids will be Miss Fredericka Sargent, a sister of the bridegroom who is here from Sarah Lawrence college for the wedding; Miss Jane Black, and Miss Barbara Kaye.

Haskell Sargent will serve his brother as best man and ushering will be John Tittle, Gerald Van Doren, Robert Lindsey Scott Jr., and John Harder of Escanaba, Mich.

After the wedding ceremony there is to be a reception at the home of Miss Welch's parents at 1427 Judson avenue, Evanston. Mr. Sargent and his bride are postponing their wedding trip until summer so they will move into their new apartment at 535 Hinman avenue, Evanston, the beginning of next week.

Young People Enjoy Day of Sail Skating.

A big orange sail that William Goltra took to Wayne yesterday proved to be the source of much of the good time had out there by the crowd of gay young people who elected to spend the holiday winter-sporting. Taking turns holding it, they sailed on skates up and down the frozen river as far as St. Charles, and when Mr. Goltra and his party finally left the river and went to Mrs. Arthur Orr's lovely old house in St. Charles for tea they all decided the sail had made the day. Miss Mimi Orr was their tea hostess. She had joined them at the Dunham Woods Hunt club for luncheon and had enjoyed the afternoon's skating.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker and their son, Arthur Jr., are entertaining at dinner tonight to celebrate the publication today of Dorothy Aldis' new book of children's poems, "Hop, Skip and Jump," and of young Mr. Meeker's new novel, "Vestal Virgin." The party is to be at the Meeker home, 1100 Lake Shore drive, where they usually entertain.

Quite a lot of our social news this morning is concerned with the alumni of various eastern preparatory schools, for this seems to be the season of the year when they all are holding their annual meetings.

Today Headmaster Seaver R. Buck of the Berkshire school at Sheffield, Mass., arrives to spend several days as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Wilson of 1516 State parkway. This morning he is to talk before the Boys' Latin school and this afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Wilson—he is a trustee of the school—are entertaining at tea for him at their home.

Tonight the Chicago alumni, who organized and elected Dexter Fairbank Jr. president of their organization last summer, are giving a dinner at the Ambassador East for Dr. Buck and they also will entertain at dinner for him tomorrow night. Tomorrow afternoon he goes to Winnetka for a tea the Calvin Fentresses—he also is a trustee—are giving at their Green Bay road home, and Sunday he is lunching with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Otis before he takes the train for the east.

Phillips Exeter Head to Speak.

The "boys" who prepared for college at the Phillips Exeter academy will hold their annual dinner next Friday night at the Harvard-Yale-Princeton club and they are inviting parents of boys who now are at the famous old school and of prospective students to be their guests.

Headmaster Lewis Perry, Professor Emeritus James Arthur Tufts, and Director of Admissions George L. Richardson Jr. are coming from Exeter, N. H., to attend the dinner and to talk about the round table method of instruction that now is in use at the school, and that was made possible by the generous gift of Edward S. Harkness, New York philanthropist.

The Phillips academy at Exeter was founded nearly 150 years ago by a brother of the man who had started the Phillips academy at Andover, Mass., just a few years before, and ever since the two schools have been friendly rivals. It was just last week that the Andover alumni heard Headmaster Emeritus Alfred E. Stearns speak on "Common Sense in Education" at a meeting arranged by the Harris school friends at the Casino.

The wives and sweethearts of the young men who are members of the club might just as well be planning now some entertainment for themselves for next Friday night, for that is the night of the club's annual dinner and, of course, all the members will be there. The festivities will start at 5:30 with an exhibition squash match and after it is over, about 6:15, cocktails will be served. Dinner around "sevenish" and Sammy at the piano as long as any one wants accompaniment for his singing will complete the evening's program. Charles Connell, H. E. Walters, and John R. Winterbotham Jr. will be the especial guests.

Evanston League to Give Show.

The Evanston Junior league, which heretofore has limited its dramatic productions to puppet shows, is putting on its first real play for children this afternoon at 3:45 o'clock in the auditorium of the Nichols school. "Raggedy Ann and Andy" is the title of the play, which will be repeated tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Miss Harriet Fenner and Mrs. Harold Yegge have the two leading roles.

The Cordon is giving a tea this afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock for Miss Phyllis Bentley, the young British writer. On Thursday, March 8, at 4:30 o'clock, Miss Anne Larkin will read "Mary of Scotland," by Maxwell Anderson, at the club.

Convention

MISS CLARE E. MERRICK.

The 27th annual convention of the Beta Gamma Upsilon sorority is being held at the Drake hotel today and tomorrow, with Miss Clare E. Merrick, grand president, presiding. The convention will close tomorrow evening with a formal dinner dance in the Gold Coast room.

Taxi Chauffeur Finds Profit in Society News

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

It was in front of the Woman's Athletic club a day recently that one of society's well known matrons met Solomon for the first time. "To the Casino," was the order as she stepped into his cab.

"But, Mrs. Smith, aren't you going to hear Dr. Hans Kohn at the Council on Foreign Relations at the Palmer house this noon?" Solomon volunteered in a gentle manner. "Well, neither is Mrs. Taylor. I just delivered her at the Casino."

Mrs. Smith looked a bit startled, yet relieved. "O, thank you, thank you very much! I thought I must have mistaken the place of meeting. You see I went to the Athletic club to meet Mrs. Taylor. But of course it's the Casino now that I think about it."

For the sixth time in a fortnight Solomon had combined the rôle of social secretary with that of taxi driver. Although Mrs. Smith had never happened to take his cab before (the names of the matrons of our little story are fictitious) Solomon had known Mrs. Smith for many months, the luncheons she most frequently attends, and the friends with whom she attends them.

Similarly he knows the season's debutantes by name, most of their mothers and fathers, and the distinguished visitors who come to town. More than this, he keeps up with all the important social events, luncheons, teas, and dinners day by day . . . the times, places, speakers, and artists. In short, Solomon is one of the "indispensables" of the society world.

Two and a half years ago he was just another taxi driver. Then he began to spend his spare time figuring. Why shouldn't he study his job, work it out scientifically?

The result of his figuring has been ing, an elaborate system of notebooks and files, and a careful identification of prominent persons from debutantes to senators and bank presidents.

The first thing Solomon does every morning is read THE TRIBUNE. Carefully he clips the items that chronicle the day's social events and slips them in the celluloid frame that is fastened to the steering wheel of his cab. He arranges them in proper sequence.

Then, with these as a guide, he plans his day. Having "covered" an event, he checks it off on the newspaper clipping with two circles. One of the circles indicates the total amount of the business received from the event, the other the amount of the tips.

Solomon keeps these slips. Every night he totals his mileage, expenses, and hours of work and compares them with the money he has received, also the tips. These totals he carries forward to the end of each week, each month, and each year to make still further comparisons. Thus he determines the events most profitable to him.

Solomon will explain, for instance, that Symphony concerts are a better money maker than lectures. In the same class with symphonies he lists debut teas and balls and socially important weddings. His file registers the Goodman-Dewey wedding of last Oct. 6 at $4.90, the Crane-Robinson wedding last spring at $2.70, and Miss Edna Doering's debut at $4.70.

One of the biggest events of Solomon's World's Fair summer was the arrival of Gen. Balbo and his air squadron. "That meant $33 in fares," he explains, "and most of the amount came from the Italian families I brought from the west side over to the lake front. It was a great experience."

Solomon has discovered that it is a good idea to keep his cab in evidence, yet never objectionably in the way. He always gives the right of way to private chauffeurs. So he is careful, yet ready with the information he has at hand.

"Sir Thomas Harty is German, isn't he, driver?" insisted a passenger the other day as he drove her from Orchestra hall after the symphony concert. "Yes, I am sure he is," she turned and added to her taxi companion.

"But pardon me, madam. I don't believe so," came Solomon's response. "He is Irish." And with this Solomon produced a clipping to prove his point.

Parisiennes Are Fond of Lame Dinner Jackets

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Dinner jackets for women are a popular Paris style this midwinter. They are made of gold or silver lamé, and are worn with long skirts of black wool or velvet or satin. Marcel Rochas' silver lamé jacket that is cut just like a man's "smoking," or tuxedo, is a sensational success among the gay young things around Paris. You can see it at the top of our sketch. It is worn over a black velvet shirtwaist dress with a four in hand tie of the lamé at the neck. The lamé of which this jacket is made has fine black stripes worked vertically. The front of the jacket and the cuffs on the sleeves are held by links of crystal.

The seated figure in the lower part of the sketch wears a Chanel lamé jacket made of gold lamé with fine lines of black thread running through it like hand stitching. This jacket buttons up to the neck in front on small gold buttons, and instead of a collar is has a small scarf of the lamé, which ties in a bow at the front. The body of the jacket is closely fitted and is just hip length and without belt. The sleeves are long and plain, with small turnback cuffs.

Mrs. Lena K. Stout Bride of C. Herrick Hammond

Announcement is made of the marriage yesterday in the Hilton Memorial chapel of the Chicago Theological seminary of Mrs. Leni K. Stout of Springfield, Ill., and C. Herrick Hammond, supervising state architect. Among the thirty or forty relatives and close friends who witnessed the ceremony were R. S. Hammond, the bridegroom's brother; Richard Stout, the bride's son, who attends school in Springfield, and Miss Marion Hammond, the bridegroom's daughter. Dr. Alfred Lee Wilson of the Kenwood church officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Hammond left shortly after the ceremony for New York to see Miss Hammond off on the Majestic today for England.

Mr. Hammond is widely known as an architect, having been president of the American Institute of Architects. He is a member of the firm of Burnham Brothers & Hammond, Inc.

NOW EATS ANY KIND OF FOOD, AND NO CONSTIPATION

Mr. Durigan Finds Relief in Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

"Am 70 years of age and for 40 of these years there never was a week but what I had to take a pill or some kind of cathartic.

"I took everything but gained only temporary relief. Until last spring my daughter, who is a nurse in a hospital, brought me some Kellogg's ALL-BRAN.

"At the end of the week I knew I had something that was it, and I kept on taking it. I haven't taken a cathartic since. I can eat meat any time, as often as I like, or any other kind of food, and no constipation." Mr. L. M. Durigan, 6811 Buffalo Ave., Jacksonville, Florida.

Laboratory tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to help muscle tone. Also iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Inside the body it forms a soft mass. Gently, it clears out the intestinal wastes.

How much safer than patent medicines. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. With each meal in serious cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

REDUCED DAIRY PRICES HEADLINE FOOD BARGAINS

Lenten Menus Inspiring Varied Purchases.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Milk and fresh eggs, both selling at new low prices for the season today, are the headliner bargains for week-end shoppers in Chicago and suburbs. Milk delivered to the doorstep has been reduced from 10 to 9 cents a quart and from 7 to 6 cents a pint.

In some stores milk is now being sold at the rate of 8 cents a quart and in others 2 quarts are being sold for 17 cents, with no deposit on bottles required. The so called cut rate stores sell the milk for as low as 7½ cents a quart, but require a deposit of 4 cents a bottle.

Egg Prices Lower.

Eggs of fine quality are being offered in many stores for about 2 cents each, while bulk eggs are still lower in price.

To offset these declines, however, prices have advanced somewhat on butter, and pork products have been boosted considerably in cost this week, following a rise in farm prices brought about largely by the federal program of pork purchases to aid farmers and the unemployed. Many of the more popular cuts of pork, such as chops and spareribs, are almost twice the price prevailing mid-January.

February appetites may be whetted, however, by seeking out some of the new and attractive foods coming into the market from the southland, Cuba, Mexico, and South America.

Enter, the Nectarine.

One of the newcomers this week is the nectarine, from Argentina. Fairly liberal shipments of fine new potatoes from the gulf states also are now available. Strawberries of good quality are reasonably priced, reflecting a more abundant crop being harvested from southern berry patches.

Cuban planters are sending in fresh pineapples—the early shipments of a spring harvest that will continue until hot weather here. Some Cuban tomatoes also are to be found here now. From Mexico, Chicago stores are getting fresh peas, although most of the present supplies are from California's Imperial valley.

Lenten menus are inspiring liberal purchases of oysters, fresh and smoked fish, canned salmon, cottage cheese, vegetables and fruits for salads, macaroni, spaghetti, noodles, eggs, eggplant, peppers, mushrooms, tuna fish, and herring. Many stores are featuring one or more of these items at somewhat reduced prices as a consequence.

Aside from the rise in prices of pork cuts shoppers will find lamb cuts, such as chops and leg of lamb, still somewhat higher than a fortnight ago, due largely to reduced number of young lambs on farms this winter as compared with a year ago.

Beef, except for chuck roasts and some types of steaks, is still attractively low priced. Little rise in bacon prices was to be noted in yesterday's market survey. Dressed poultry is enticingly low in price, considering present food trends.

Increased Meat Consumption.

Chicagoans have, as compared with consumers in other cities, made considerable increases in meat purchases in the last year or so, according to a report of meat consumption just issued by the Institute of American Meat Packers. This report shows that more meat was produced and consumed in the United States during 1933 and during January than in any similar period on record.

More than fifteen billion pounds of meat were processed and sold by the packers in this 13 month period. While exports began to pick up in recent weeks, most of this huge volume of meat was bought at very low prices and consumed by Americans. Should present rising prices continue for any length of time, however, it is predicted that people will change from pork to other meats or to other foods which may be used as entrées.

Recipes

DUCHESS SOUP.

4 cups milk
1½ tablespoons grated onion
3 tablespoons melted fat
3 tablespoons flour
¼ cup grated American cheese
2 tablespoons minced parsley
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper.

Blend the melted fat and the flour. Scald the milk with the minced onions and when hot stir gradually into the flour paste. Cook in a double boiler until thickened, then add the cheese, parsley, and seasonings. When the cheese is melted, serve in hot bowls and top with toasted croutons.

FILLING.

2 pounds cottage cheese
2 eggs
1½ cups sugar
½ cup flour
¼ cup melted butter.

Mix ingredients together until smooth. Spread evenly over the dough and bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.] for 1 hour and 15 minutes.

GREEN PEPPERS ENHANCE FLAVOR OF MANY FOODS

Necessary as Onions in the Kitchen.

BY MABEL BRYANT.

Green peppers are as necessary in every well regulated kitchen as onions. A few years ago they were obtainable in northern markets only during the summer season, but now they are available the year around. They are considered very healthful as they contain a high percentage of vitamin A content.

Green peppers enhance the flavor of many foods. Cut up fine, they are excellent when added to soups, stews, stewed canned corn, poultry dressing, salads, stewed tomatoes, and spaghetti. But the prize way of serving this is, we think, stuffed or fried to be served with broiled steak. To fry them simply select large sized peppers, cut them in half lengthwise, remove seeds and white veins and fry gently in half butter and bacon grease.

A Delicious Entree.

Or should you have some cold spaghetti, fill the halves of green peppers with the spaghetti and bake in oven until nicely browned. This is a delicious entrée.

There are many ways of stuffing green peppers. Use rice or ground meat or a combination of them. We think a very appetizing way of dressing up peppers is by using the following recipe:

Into a quart of boiling water put four or six green peppers after having cut off the tops and removing the seeds and white membranes carefully so not to break the peppers. Add pinch of baking soda to water and let simmer for ten minutes. Remove peppers and let them drain, then fill with the stuffing which is made as follows:

Melt in frying pan two tablespoons of butter, add two level tablespoons of flour, stir until smooth, add one cup milk and stir until it boils. Add ½ tablespoon of grated onion, ¼ teaspoon of paprika, one cup of canned corn, and cook until good and hot. Add ½ cup of minced cooked veal, ham, chicken or any other cold meat on hand and enough stale bread crumbs to take up the moisture—about ½ cup. Stuff peppers with this mixture and bake until a golden brown. Peppers set in muffin tins will remain in upright position.

St. Patrick's Day Salad.

With St. Patrick's day just around the corner, it isn't too soon to suggest a shamrock salad which is very attractive to the eye as well as the palate. To make this salad, select nice even formed peppers so as to be sure of uniform scallops when cut. Remove the stem end from two large green peppers; cut each pepper into halves through the center and remove seeds and veins. Cream one tablespoon of butter, beat into it two small cakes of cream cheese, ½ teaspoon salt, one tablespoon cream and one dozen stuffed olives chopped very fine. Use this mixture to fill the peppers. Press the filling in firmly and set aside in the refrigerator. When ready to serve, cut across with a sharp knife to make very thin slices; arrange on tender leaves of lettuce; four slices to a serving. Over all pour prepared French dressing.

"Pimienta," the Spanish name for almost anything pungent and spicy, is applied to black pepper, allspice, and to sweet red pepper. In the latter usage it is more commonly known as pimiento, which is used for stuffing olives, or in making salads and relishes to which it adds a vivid decorative touch. Crabmeat or shrimp cocktails may be dressed up by using pimiento cups or "roscapples" as they are sometimes called. They come in glass jars—five or six to a jar. This method of preparing an appetizer isn't new—nor is it common. You may purchase the flat pimientos that come in tins. But the ones we recommend are a vivid red color and a perfect little cup in shape. Try them when you want to surprise your guests.

TRIBUNE RECIPES

POLISH CHEESE CAKE [KOTOCZ].

1 quart lukewarm milk
1 yeast cake
10 to 11 cups flour
2 cups sugar
3 eggs
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup raisins.

Dissolve the yeast in the lukewarm milk. Add ½ cup sugar and 2 or 3 cups flour, or enough to form a paste. Let stand in a warm place to rise for 1 hour. Add remainder of sugar, salt, raisins, unbeaten eggs, and enough flour to form a stiff dough. Knead, adding flour until the dough does not stick to the hands. Place in a warm place to rise from 3 to 4 hours. Then turn out dough onto a floured board. Divide into two pieces and place them in two well greased and floured deep pans.

BAKED MUSHROOMS.

1 pound fresh mushrooms
1 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
3 tablespoons butter
¼ cup cream.

Clean the mushrooms and place them in a baking dish. Season and dot with butter. Add the cream and bake, covered, till tender in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.] about 30 minutes.

LIVER SOUFFLE.

1-3 cup fat
1-3 cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
6 eggs, separated
1½ cups milk
¾ cup finely ground liver
Pepper to taste.

Make a white sauce from the fat, flour, milk, and seasonings. When thick stir in the beaten egg yolks and the liver. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites and pile into a greased baking dish. Bake in a pan of hot water in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.] about 40 minutes, or until firm. Brown quickly under a flame. Serve immediately with a tomato sauce.

MEASURE FLOUR WITH CARE WHEN MIXING A CAKE

Any homemaker who doubts the importance of accurate measurements should make tests with a three-layer cake. Make one layer with a little less flour than the recipe specifies; make the second layer with the exact amount of flour required; and add a little extra flour for the third layer. Then bake the three layers in the same oven for the same amount of time. The layer with too much flour will crack open and be dry; the one with too little flour will be heavy.

Test measuring utensils to start the campaign against cooking failures. A standard cup holds just one-half pint; the handiest kind has the last graduation, the cupful mark, just level with the lip so that flour may be leveled off without packing it down. The tablespoon is the second important measure. Remember that sixteen standard tablespoons, level, make one standard cupful. Check this with the already-tested measuring cup. Three level teaspoons make one level tablespoon.

How to Measure.

When a recipe calls for a level tablespoon, it means a tablespoon leveled off with a knife or other straight edge. For half a spoonful, divide the leveled-off spoonful lengthwise.

To measure flour accurately, sift it, before measuring directly into the cup. Never shake or pack the flour down or dip the cup into it. Fill the cup lightly by the tablespoon with freshly sifted flour.

LIVER AND SPAGHETTI MAKE A NOURISHING, ECONOMICAL DISH

Liver, spaghetti, tomatoes, onions, and cheese make a cheap and nourishing dish which is equally good when first cooked and when warmed up for a second serving.

Liver and Spaghetti.

½ pound of beef, pork, or calf liver
1 tablespoon fat
½ cup tomato pulp
3 cups water
½ cup uncooked spaghetti
¼ cup chopped onion
½ teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste
2 tablespoons grated cheese

Brown the onion in the fat, add the liver, which has been cut into small cubes, and the seasonings. Cook slowly for ten minutes. Add the tomato pulp and continue to cook slowly for twenty more minutes.

Cook the spaghetti in salted water, drain, and place on a platter. Pour over it the liver mixture, sprinkle with cheese, and serve.

BY MARY MEADE.

It's got to be no strange thing at all to see a lady, who takes her cooking seriously, solicitously taking the temperature of a jelly or a batch of fudge. But it's news to lots of folks that now this same canny cook is also easing thermometers down the throats of her husky roasts and large, buxom birds!

But, so 'tis, and here's why we're glad of it. Science has done a large amount of stepping about kitchens in the last few decades, taking quantities of the grind and the guesswork out of cooking. Stainless steel sinks and cutlery, electrical marvels, enameled surfaces, accurate, tested recipes, they've all been helps in turning meal making into a skill and downright pleasure for the girls who've a mind to make it that. And thermometers have been charter members in this boost for better kitchen management.

For quite some time now thermometers have "talked turkey" to the cook. For baking, automatic thermometer controls not only regulate the temperature of the oven, but sometimes even the time of baking. Less ambitious ones are portable and now turn up in department stores at really nice little figures, bringing old model stoves up to date and making them dependable.

Candies, icings and jellies were the next to hubbub until they won their point with the scientists and had excellent thermometers made to tick the exact instant that the food has bubbled enough to make perfect icing, candy and jelly. Deep frying thermometers have turned one of the chef's pet tricks into something even an amateur, with a good recipe, can manage to perfection.

And now, or at least quite recently, the meat thermometer arrives in the cooking port, promising to be the most useful of all the temperature taking family. Why? Because with other foods there are smoke smells, bubbles, and like tests to tell the temperatures after a fashion. But roast meats go on calmly sitting and suffering, often minutes beyond the desired cooking stage, because somebody is afraid that maybe they're not yet quite done.

Quite a few years ago meat thermometers were figured out for professional testing kitchens and large hotels to help out the meat roasting situation. These folks all liked them so much that they've now been made available to the rest of us, and at reasonable prices, too, at our larger department stores. Instead of meat roasting being guess work, and you know it's always varied with the bone and muscle in the meat, its age and quality, size and shape, it's now done by stabbing a hole with a skewer or ice pick down into the centermost part of the muscle, and into this hole slipping a straight or bent glass thermometer with its point reaching the meat's very center. The roast goes into the oven, at the best temperature to give the most pleasant outside appearance and lose the least of the juices. But whatever the heat the meat thermometer is the gadget that reports just when the roast should come out to be as you desire it, rare, medium, or well done. This really saves whole feet of gas each month, because most of us overcook our roasts, wasting fuel and driving off precious juices.

Most of these meat thermometers are straight, and about six to eight inches long, with a pointed end. A few you'll find which are bent at right angles, making the reading easy, and accommodate themselves to even junior sized ovens. Most of these helpful affairs boast a temperature scale, marked on them in Fahrenheit degrees, and also the words "rare," "medium," and "well done," showing the various zones. As a rule these figures are for beef, since lamb and pork are usually done to a turn and not left rare.

Girls from Several States in Pie Baking Contest

Sample Is Dispatched to the President.

Mary Lenore Spencer, 17 years old, of Iowa City, Ia., yesterday was acclaimed the champion baker of cherry pies in the middlewest. She competed against five other high school girls representing as many middle western states in a contest at the Morrison hotel. The event was sponsored by the national cherry festival committee of Traverse City, Mich.

The runnerup was Helen Bilder of 708 West North avenue, Chicago. Miss Bilder scored 87 points of a possible 100 against the winner's 88. The two were tied in the judging for nearly an hour until one last taste by the judges decided the winner. Third place went to Lawain Churchill of New Era, Mich.

Three Other Contestants.

The other contestants included Lutie Heltman of New Mexico, Mo., Gwen Breckmiller of Porter, Ind., and Mildred Jerns of Bailey's Harbor, Wis. All of the trants were treated last night to a dinner and entertainment at the Terrace Garden in the Morrison. They will leave for their homes this morning.

Among the judges were Mary Meade, cooking editor of THE TRIBUNE, and Mrs. Wilbur E. Fribley, president of the Chicago Housewives' league. Following the selection of the winner a pie baked by her was shipped to President Roosevelt.

The six entrants were selected by their respective states through the cooperation of girls' 4-H clubs. After winning Miss Spencer explained that she had never tasted a cherry pie, much less baked one, until she became interested in 4-H club work a year ago.

Given Same Ingredients.

At the start of the contest each girl was handed the same ingredients of flour, lard, shortening, and cherries and told to go to work. The rules permitted them to bake the pies in any fashion they chose. Afterwards the finished products were laid out on a table and numbered. Then the judges started sampling.

The contest is in its third year and was started to stimulate the consumption of cherries. Interest in the project has trebled each year. The national contest has always been held on Washington's birthday because of the sentiment attached to the story of George Washington and the cherry tree.

Economical tips for week-end food shoppers—a weekly radio feature—will be presented today by Mary Meade over station W-G-N. Tune in at 2 o'clock for Miss Meade's market chat.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Breakfast bacon will be crisp and dry if it is drained on brown paper or a paper napkin for a few minutes after it is fried.

WORTH TRYING

POTATO CHEESE PUFF.
¾ cup milk
¾ pound grated cheese
3 cups hot mashed potatoes
2 eggs
Salt, pepper, and paprika to taste

Heat milk in a double boiler, add cheese and beat until smooth. Then add this to the mashed potatoes. Season the mixture and add the egg yolks, which have been beaten until light. Last of all fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites and pour the mixture into a buttered baking dish. Place in a hot oven and bake until firm and brown.

HEINZ IS THE LARGEST SELLING KETCHUP IN THE WORLD!

On Seeing Red

"There are times," observed our Ketchup chef, surveying the Heinz tomatoes, rotund and ripe, "there are times when it is good for a man to see red.

"Therefore, of these tomatoes, Heinz-born and Heinz-bred, pedigreed and pampered, cultivated and carefully culled—of these shall I make ketchup. It shall be simmered down and yet down to the precious essentials. Spices borne by our trusty couriers from the Orient, these and pure sugar shall be added by way of sweetness and delight.

"This shall be Heinz Ketchup to glorify the food of man. Chops shall be cherished, hash shall be heavenly, omelets a thing divine.

"And men shall see red, bright, heartening, come-hither Heinz Ketchup red. They shall grin hungrily. And they shall rush tableward."

SUCCESS NOTE:
Seeds and plants specially developed by Heinz. Tomatoes ripened under Heinz supervision. Ketchup cooked same day tomatoes are picked. Sealed hot in bottles. Tasted, tested. Then sold by the million to man-wise women. The largest selling ketchup in the world!

We OVEN-BAKE our beans

Because that is the way to make beans tender and mealy and (mmm!) so delicious! That is the way to get the good sauce right into them so that they're flavorful all through. That is the way to make them more digestible so that they render the utmost food value.

We oven-bake them because oven-baking made beans America's first pet dish, and has kept them the national favorite all down the years. So don't buy beans, buy oven-baked beans. Remember—

ADVISES WARM HEALTH LUNCH FOR ALL PUPILS

Purdue Expert Says Plan Is Educational.

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 22.—In order to keep the school child physically fit a hot lunch every day will help materially, says Ruth W. Heath, extension nutritionist of Purdue university. She declares that more and more mothers, as well as teachers and other educators, are realizing the value of a hot lunch and that provisions are being made for the serving of at least one hot food in even the rural one room schools.

She points out that the benefits do not stop when the child's immediate needs are satisfied, for if the lunches are properly planned and served the child learns the principles of good diet and forms good food habits. In addition he often learns to relish foods which he has thought distasteful.

Undernourished children are especially benefitted by the hot lunch. A marked increase in attendance at school as well as stimulated mental vigor results.

Older Pupils Aid.

The school lunch in a number of rural communities is being sponsored by Indiana Home Economics club women and by 4-H club groups of boys and girls. Often times a parent-teachers' organization or some other local group is the sponsor and the supervisor.

In some schools the older children operate the lunchroom as a part of their school work in their foods and nutrition courses. And sometimes the hot lunch service is made to furnish employment by putting it in charge of some capable woman who is out of work. Nowadays federal funds are available for such a program where the need is shown.

The school lunch need not be elaborate, says Miss Heath. Simple, nutritious, easily prepared foods are desirable. A hot soup, cocoa or hot milk to supplement the sandwiches brought from home may be all that should be attempted in schools where there is little equipment.

Advises Extreme Care.

With a home packed school lunch that consists in some cases of nothing more than cold griddle cakes, or cold hard biscuits, or sliced bread spread with lard, it is not hard to imagine how welcome that single [if no more] hot drink or dish must be.

In order to safeguard the health of the children and to prevent the spread of disease, food should be handled under the most careful and sanitary conditions. All dishes, silverware, pots and pans, after they are used, must be washed in a liberal amount of hot soap water and scalded and dried immediately.

Soups—bean, oatmeal and potato, mixed vegetable made with meat stock or milk, or creamed soups; tomato, split pea, cabbage, carrot, spinach, corn, turnip, onion, celery, peanut butter. And other dishes which are almost a meal in themselves—Spanish rice, corn or tomato rabbit, and scalloped salmon.

CURIOUS VALLEY PRODUCES MOST CABBAGE SEED

Most of the cabbage seed produced in this country comes from the Puget Sound region in western Washington. In recent years commercial production of cabbage seed has shifted more and more to the Skagit valley, a relatively small area only a few miles south of the Canadian line, where growers make a business of this specialty.

Lack of rainfall in the growing season is ordinarily considered a serious handicap in farming, but in the Skagit valley it seems to be the secret of success, the factor that gives these growers an advantage over competitors.

Two of the most serious diseases affecting cabbages are known as black leg and black rot. Seed from the Skagit valley has usually been free from infection. J. C. Walker of the United States department of agriculture has discovered that the organisms that cause these diseases are usually carried from infected plants to healthy plants by the splashing of rain, and rarely if ever through the soil or by the wind. The Skagit valley has an adequate supply of moisture, but it rarely rains in the months from May to September when cabbage is maturing. This accounts for the fact that seed produced there is free from these two serious cabbage diseases.

Prices of Bread Boosted by Indianapolis Stores

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Prices of bread were advanced by stores here today. Retail price of 12 ounce loaves was increased to 6 cents and one pound loaves to 8 cents. Rising costs of material and labor were cited. The average price of bread in the United States is 7.9, it was asserted.

Household Hints

If cocoa is substituted for chocolate in a cake recipe, butter should be added to replace the fat in the chocolate. Five tablespoons of cocoa and one-half tablespoon of butter are equal to one ounce of chocolate.

Many cooks prefer brown sugar for dark cakes or for fruit cake.

HERE ARE SOME SUGGESTIONS ON LENTEN DISHES

Creamed Codfish Is One of Them.

CREAMED CODFISH.
1 cup flaked salt codfish
4 tablespoons fat
5 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk

Flake the codfish and soak it in tepid water for about one hour. Prepare a white sauce by melting the fat, add the flour to the fat, and when that has been stirred to a smooth paste add the milk. The mixture should be stirred until it is thick and smooth. Drain the codfish and add it to the white sauce and cook them together in a double boiler until the fish is thoroughly heated.

To be at its best creamed codfish should be served with baked or boiled potatoes and corn bread. A dish of thinly sliced onions served as a relish adds to the flavor of the fish.

A hearty soup, such as this one, may be the main dish for a Lenten luncheon:

SPLIT PEA SOUP.
1 cup dried split peas
2½ cups cold water
2 cups milk
½ onion
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1½ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 inch cube fat salt pork

Pick over the peas and soak them for several hours; drain them and add the cold water, pork, and onion. Simmer for from three to four hours or until the beans are soft; then rub through a sieve. Add the melted butter and mix together with the flour, salt, and pepper. Dilute the mixture with milk, add more if needed.

INTERESTING WAYS TO COOK

VEAL STUFFED ONIONS.
6 large sized Bermuda onions
2/3 cup chopped raw veal
½ cup bread crums
2 tablespoons fat
1 tablespoon minced onion
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 egg
6 thin slices salt pork
1 cup rich meat stock
1 teaspoon beef extract.

Combine the veal, bread crums, two tablespoons of fat, egg, minced onion, and seasoning. Peel the onions and hollow out part of the insides, leaving good, firm walls. Drop into boiling water and cook for five minutes. Drain and stuff with the forcemeat. Now arrange the thin pieces of salt pork on the bottom of a baking dish and place a stuffed onion on each. Pour around this the stock and bake until the onions are tender [about half an hour] in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.].

Transfer the onions to a hot platter, skim off the fat from the broth, and add the beef extract, seasoning, and a little butter. Pour at once over the onions.

SPICED NUTS.
½ cup confectioners' sugar
¼ cup cornstarch
1/3 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons cold water
1 egg white
1½ tablespoons cinnamon
½ teaspoon allspice
1/3 teaspoon nutmeg
1/3 teaspoon ginger
¼ pound nut meats.

Sift the sugar, cornstarch, salt, cinnamon, allspice, nutmeg, and ginger together into a shallow pan. Add cold water to the egg white and beat slightly. Dip the nut meats in the egg white and drop them, one at a time, into the dry mixture, and roll lightly. Keep the nut meats separated. Place the pan containing the dry mixture and the nuts into a slow oven [250 degrees F.] and bake for about one and one-half hours. Remove from the oven and take the nuts from the pan and cool. They will be crisp and spicy.

FROZEN CHEESE SALAD.
2 packages cream cheese
1 cup mayonnaise
1 No. 2 can crushed pineapple
12 ripe olives
1 tablespoon minced pimiento
2-3 cup whipping cream.

Force the cheese through a coarse sieve and combine with the mayonnaise. Whip the cream. Add the remaining ingredients. Freeze in refrigerator tray.

HERE ARE SOME TIPS ON DESSERT FOR CHILDREN

One important difference between correct meals for adults and correct meals for children is in the desserts. Pies, suet puddings, frosted cakes, and other rich dishes which are not harmful for adults if eaten in moderate amounts, are entirely unsuitable for small children. Yet desserts for children can be made both wholesome and attractive, according to the New York State College of Home Economics.

A fruit cup of sliced oranges and other ripe, mild fruits provides a good dessert for a child's meal. Baked fruit or simple fruit desserts made of apples, prunes, or pears are not only wholesome and delicious, but put more fruit into the child's diet.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

To dust sugar on stuffed dates or other dried fruits, shake them in a paper bag containing fine granulated sugar or powdered sugar.

Leland Stanford Awarded Medal of Allied Veterans

Physician Asks Alice Faye to Return Charm

He's Not Doing So Well; Wants Rabbit's Foot.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Before Alice Faye came to the movies a young physician in Chicago gave her a lucky rabbit's foot. She doesn't tell his name. The luckpiece worked splendidly for Alice, whose film career has been progressing at a great rate. This week she got a letter from her doctor friend, who had gone to Berlin to study more medicine. "Please send back my rabbit's foot," he wrote. "I'm not doing so well myself."

Gil Berry, ex-Illinois football captain, gets his third movie rôle commencing Monday at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Asked what the picture was, Berry said, "I was so glad to get the part I forgot to ask."

Albert Kaufmann, film executive just back from South America, says the picture making one of the biggest hits in Venezuela while he was there was C. B. De Mille's "Ten Commandments," filmed silently twelve years ago.

Carole Lombard's purse containing $400 and a diamond ring and her script for "We're Not Dressing" was rescued from the ocean floor off Catalina island by her co-actor, Jay Henry, former college swimmer at University of Pennsylvania, yesterday. Carole dropped her purse and script when she and Ethel Merman were climbing a ship's ladder and her foot slipped. The money and script were as good as new but the purse, which cost $50, was ruined.

Irene Dunne has recovered from a skin infection and her work in "Stingaree" at Radio studio has resumed.

Elissa Landi is a flu victim.

Ginger Rogers' four day walkout from Radio studio netted her a promise of more money if she would only come back. So she is coming back tomorrow from the dude ranch in Arizona where she hung out. Ginger says working in eight consecutive pictures with no rest was too much.

Frank Hawks, aviator, was Will Rogers' ranch guest over last weekend. Hawks is heading for China, where there are no air mail contract troubles.

Boulder dam has served as background for several recent motion pictures. Warner Baxter appeared as a construction engineer there last autumn with Elissa Landi in "I Loved You Wednesday," and had some of his scenes made in a cable car between the cañon walls.

In Tim McCoy's "Storm at Midnight" for Columbia the camera crew, headed by Ray Davidson and the supervisor, spent two days taking shots from a little aerial car, like a handcar in the sky, which was suspended from a cable. The movie company had to get the okay both of the government and the corporation building the dam to make the shots.

Robert Plumpe, brother of the late German director, Frederic Murnau (Friedrich Wilhelm Plumpe), has filed a court petition here to have his name changed to Murnau. Says it's too complicated trying to settle up his brother's estate with the conflict in names.

Nigel Bruce prided himself on having a scrupulously honest servant in his Filipino boy, Steve. One time Bruce asked Steve how he spent his day off. "I play poker," said Steve. "Do you win?" asked his employer. "Sure, I always win." "How do you do that?" "O, I tell the cards from their backs."

With a faraway gleam in his eye that struck his converser as unusual because of the immediate presence of a background of very captivating looking young persons, Earl Carroll, who is current entrepreneur of beauty at Paramount, philosophized thus: "Beauty is hereditary. In fact, it's traditional. I believe that we all like about the same types of beauty. For instance, my experience has been that when a number of men look at a group of girls to judge them for their beauty, if the judges are impartial they generally come to an eventual agreement on one girl as most outstanding."

Regarding the pronouncement by Ireland's censor that movie kisses longer than three seconds are to be barred, Mae West today said "three seconds isn't long enough to let a bad girl do any good and it's not long enough for a good girl to be very bad."

After Mrs. Patrick Campbell spent a week inducing some one at Metro to write in a movie appearance for her white Pekingese Moonbeam so she could call Moonbeam a "professional" dog and thus get the pet around England's strict law against bringing in dogs, the pup refused to behave for his scene in "Lady Mary's Lover" and Mrs. Campbell sadly feared that Moonbeam would have to stay out of England.

A Friend in Need

Matter of Frankness.

"Dear Miss Blake: I don't love my boy friend, but like him. I don't think I should go with him any more. How shall I go about it, as I don't want to hurt him? MARIE."

Be frank about it. Tell him just what your feelings are and suggest that you see each other less often.

Take a Chance.

"Dear Miss Blake: Should I go out with a girl who told me she loved me, but to whom I paid no attention and neglected her for another girl? "W. C."

Take a chance of asking the girl for a date. How else will you find out whether or not she still cares?

Club Round Table.

Webster C. Allee of the University of Chicago will be the principal speaker at the legislative round table the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Organizations will hold this afternoon in the federation clubrooms at 209 South State street. Church Federation Lists Speakers for Pre-Easter Services

The Rev. Dr. Robert Clements, president of the Chicago Church federation, has announced speakers for the pre-Easter and Good Friday services held annually under the joint auspices of the federation and the First Methodist Episcopal church at the Chicago temple. The services, held each noon, will continue through two weeks except Saturdays and Sundays, beginning March 19.

Bishop Ernest Lynn Waldorf, of the Chicago area of the Methodist Episcopal church, will open the series. The Rev. Dr. Harold L. Bowman, pastor of the First Presbyterian church; the Rev. Dr. Edwin Moll, Luther Memorial church; President Albert W. Palmer of Chicago Theological seminary, and Dr. D. W. Kurtz, president of Bethany Biblical seminary, will be other speakers of the first week.

The Rev. Dr. John Thompson of the Chicago temple will open the second week. He will be followed by Dr. Douglas Horton, United Church of Hyde Park; Dr. Charles W. Gilkey of the University of Chicago, and Dr. Albert Buckner Coe of Oak Park. Good Friday services will be led by President Clements.

Dr. Jean Oliver to Give Lecture in Hektoen Series

Dr. Jean R. Oliver, professor of pathology at Long Island College of Medicine, Brooklyn, will lecture at the Chicago Woman's club this evening upon "The Problems of Architectonics in Terminal Bright's Disease." The lecture will be the tenth Ludvig Hektoen lecture of the Frank Billings foundation before the Institute of Medicine of Chicago. The lecture will begin at 8 p. m.

Coronet Braid Is Solution of Coiffure Worry

Artificial Pieces Cheer the Bobbed Heads.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

The coronet braid popularity is a boom for the hairdresser, as well as an eternally carming style. Certainly, too, as braids are obtainable today, they solve beautifully the long vs. short hair argument. There jes' ain't any argument.

Anyway, if you're looking for a new note in coiffures, there's the coronet, and the fact that you don't have to wait until your hair grows braid length is cheering. You can have your coronet twined in a loose plait or a tight one. In the latter event you may even appear Grecian with three braids arranged across the top of the head.

Another nice thing about the coronet is the fact that it can be worn with hair of any length, very short, short, middling. It can be tucked away easily at the ends in your back curls, or cuddled in behind the knot worn on the neck. It can be worn effectively with bangs, with parts, side and middle, and with the hair brushed austerely back. Only the latter really does call for a great deal of chic. You can get braids with clusters of curls on each end, these end curls dressed in plump little puffs.

I saw a stunning deb, the other night, with hair drawn back from the forehead but on a slight pompadour rise toward the crown. A coronet braid of her own blue black haired hue was worn. The back cut of the hair was shortish, but not boyish at all. Her ears showed fully, tiny ears they were. Very tall, slight, young, and beautifully gowned, she was the most aristocratic looking picture I've seen in many a day. The same head dressing might be all amiss on a blonde, unless she were that rare statuesque blonde creature best represented by the one time famous Ziegfeld ornament, Dolores. Blondes ordinarily require a little fluffiness about the face, although it is no arbitrary rule, since I recall a charming, blonde dear with one of these coronets worn with perfectly straight arrangement of her own hair. There is a note of intrigue with this sort of coiffure which can't be said for some of the hair ornaments seen this season. The observer is intrigued into knowing if it is the girl's own hair. And, as some of the braids are presented, so well matched to natural colors of hair, it is often extremely difficult to decide whether it is real or artificial hair used.

They tell me that there is some sale of platinum and black hair mixed together in these extra braids. But that, we would say, would be for the girl who goes in for ebony finger nails and other things not recommended to the great majority.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

Mr. Sims is universally acclaimed the greatest living contract and auction player. He was captain of the renowned "Four Horsemen" team of four and has won twenty national championships since 1924. These articles are based on the Sims system, which includes the one-over-one principle which the Sims group of players was the first to employ and develop.

THE OPENING BID.

I HAVE already dealt with the opening of the bidding with one of a suit in the first or second position.

Today I wish to discuss the opening bid in third hand position.

The Primary Trick Requirements Are Reduced.

P. HAL SIMS.

Contrary to other systems that come to my attention, instead of requiring additional values to open third hand, the Sims system allows for lighter primary trick requirements in order to open the bidding in this position.

Bearing in mind the very powerful holdings needed to open the bidding first or second hand with a defensive type of hand, this letup is readily understood. There is always the possibility that your partner has passed a maximum borderline type of hand. For instance, he may have held the following:

Spades—K Q 10 x Diamonds—x
Hearts—x x x Clubs—A Q x x x

This is a pass in the first or second position, but for third hand is a sound opening bid of 1 Club.

Or, Dealer may have passed a maximum defensive type of hand, such as

Spades—x x x Diamonds—A K x x
Hearts—A x x Clubs—x x x

First or second hand this is a pass. Third hand it becomes a 1 Diamond bid.

Or, with the aggressive type of hand, the following hand is a pass in the first or second positions, but becomes a bid third hand.

Spades—K Q 9 x x x Diamonds—A x x x
Hearts—x x Clubs—x

There are three good reasons for a different policy in this position, which are as follows:

1. Your partner may have made a "maximum pass."

2. There is little chance in your partner jumping you to an unmakable contract through giving you credit for excess values.

3. You are assured of a favorable opening lead if your opponents play the hand.

With the defensive type of hand, the three primary tricks are still needed, but no secondary values are necessary.

With the borderline hand two and a half primary tricks are needed.

With the aggressive hand, two tricks are all that are necessary.

The fact that one opponent has already passed reduces the fear of a big hand being on your right.

It is, therefore, necessary to deduce from your own holdings the likelihood of fourth hand having the preponderance of outstanding primary tricks.

TRY TO LOOK AHEAD.

Two main results may develop if you bid. Consider their probabilities:

1. Will the opening of a weak hand locate your high cards so that the opponents will bid a game that they would not bid otherwise?

2. Will the opponents place high cards in your hand, which are actually held by your partner, if they play the hand?

These are two very necessary considerations. In further explanation:

1. Many contracts are made through the knowledge that to have made a bid the hand must contain certain cards, as the following example:

Spades—K x x Diamonds—A x x x
Hearts—Q x x Clubs—A Q x

Here is a hand that contains three primary tricks and should be bid 1 No Trump. With any one high card removed from this hand, nothing can be considered but to pass. There is plenty of defense against an adverse bid, but by my bid, the opponents could place every honor that I hold.

2. On the other hand, should I hold as follows:

Spades—A Q J x Diamonds—x x
Hearts—K Q 10 x Clubs—x x x

I would bid 1 Spade. Any missing honors in Diamonds or Clubs would be placed in my hand and the finesse against these honors would, therefore, be taken the wrong way.

Give Children the Freedom of the House

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

It is a long time since we have had a letter on this subject:

"Dear Mrs. Bevans: I read your articles every Sunday and am writing to ask you to help me with my two problems.

"My baby is 16 months old. When he was small he played in his room by himself all day. But when he began to crawl he went through all the rooms and wanted my attention all the time. He won't play with his toys at all. We thought when he walked he would play more by himself, but now that he does he follows me and pulls on me to take him. It is almost impossible for me to do any work. And even when I sit in a chair he's there to be taken up.

"My second problem is obedience. He seems to find delight in disobeying me. I know he understands me when I tell him not to do something, for he does it the second time, looking at me sideways while doing it. I want to teach him to obey me without physical punishment.

"Any booklets or information you could give me to help me in these problems would be greatly appreciated."

The answer follows:

My Dear Mrs. ———: I have your letter about your baby and let me tell you that it is perfectly natural that he should not want to be alone or want to play in his room all by himself. He has gotten to the age where he is sociable, where he needs talk and companionship, where he needs his questions answered, his achievements shared and where he feels himself a big fellow ready to go forth and see the world—which at this age is his home.

Give him more freedom and more companionship and you will find that he will not be so demanding and clutch at you every time you sit down. All this is necessary not only for his happiness, but for his development as a human being.

I am sure that the booklets I am enclosing will help you as they were written especially for the mothers of young children. They are "OBEDIENCE," "PATIENCE," booklets, and the leaflet, "DON'T TOUCH."

Happy Is Wife Who Scrubs While Smiling

Accept Inevitable Tasks with Good Nature.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

If you want to be a Happy Wife, be a Happy Wife.

This is the formula offered by "A Happy Wife," who grows weary hearing women complain of their mates, while there's never a happy expression permitted on their own fair brows.

A good formula, don't you think? Doing your job and liking it as wife? Worth trying, what?

Our really Happy Wife says that, after all, it is making her husband happy that is going to illumine the wife's own state of heart, not, as many women do, sitting around bored waiting for hubby to do something extra for them. And not, as so many women do, making a painful, arduous task out of any household duty that has to be performed.

You can make play of work, our Happy Wife testifies. True enough, she says, some of our household duties are monotonous, and some of them are often distasteful. But they have to be done. And, since they have to be done, why not train oneself to like them? Or, if not liking, at least do no grumbling. Never mind, if it is only your own happiness you're working for. There's a better guarantee for it in an amiable attitude toward duties than in grumbling.

Women [the complaining kind], says our adviser, stand over the sink and wash the dishes with a perpetual frown on their faces. That only makes the dishwashing harder. When they sweep, or run the vacuum over the floor, they feel bitterly sorry for themselves. Well, that doesn't help the floor, the wife, or the husband, but the cleaning has to be done. These women make beds thinking that, if they had a better husband, they wouldn't have to be doing such work. And they dust with their hearts in the soul of their shoes. Every household duty takes on the appearance of an insult perpetrated by husband. You'd think these women would realize that they were not cut out for vamps or spoiled wives. If they were that kind, they'd be out gathering the spoils. So, why go on with the silly dreaming of which they'd have no active part if a tempter did come along with offers.

It's a grumbling of the heart that's the disease, our Happy Wife says, and a disease that can only be cured by forcing a smile over the dishpan, broom, or dust rag. But, oh, how easy it makes the work when you can approach the household duties that way, and with a song in your heart that you're far removed from a breadline.

Rockford College to Mark 87th Anniversary Sunday

Rockford college, one of the oldest colleges for women in the central west, will celebrate the 87th anniversary of its founding on Sunday. Walter R. Agard, formerly of Amherst college, now professor of Greek at the University of Wisconsin, will deliver the annual Charter day address in the college chapel. The Socratic society, honorary scholastic organization, will announce the names of seniors chosen to permanent membership, one year members, and the freshmen honor roll.

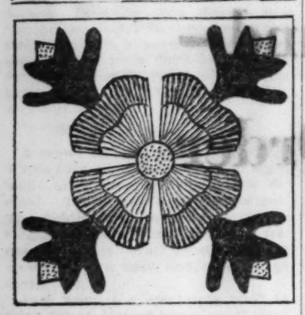
A Quilt of Many Names, and One for the Thrifty



Prairie Rose.

BY NANCY CABOT.

By error the quilt design which appeared in this department yesterday was incorrectly identified.

Wreath.

"Prairie Rose," shown here in the large illustration, is known in northern New England, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, and the far west by different names in each state and region.

The small illustration is the simple applique "wreath" block created in 1840. It is only a "middle aged" quilt, as compared with the more ancient "Prairie Rose." The "Wreath" design is an excellent "economy block," It is only a "middle aged" quilt, as compared with the more ancient "Prairie Rose." The "Wreath" design is an excellent "economy block," since a thrifty quilter may use scraps remaining from previous quilting bees for the flowers.

Events on the Stage

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

"Ten Thirty Sharp," a play by Peter J. Koessler of Chicago, was presented in the Chicago Woman's Club theater last night by a cast assembled from various groups of north side amateurs. It tells a back-stage story: Rehearsals, author's agony, star's temperament, and a scrubwoman's success as a pinch hitting actress. The latter had been a professional before she took to the scrubbing pail, and thus is qualified for the rôle of rescuer.

The civil war play which has resulted from the collaboration between Sinclair Lewis, novelist, and Lloyd Lewis, Chicago dramatic critic, has been withdrawn from this season's production schedule, but is promised for next fall. "Brother Burdette" is its title.

The fifth annual Chicago tournament of religious drama, in which scores of Protestant church groups will participate, is scheduled to begin March 5. After regional preliminaries on the south, west and north sides, the winning plays will be presented in programs at the Chicago Woman's Club theater March 23 and 24.

Guthrie McClintic's next production will be "Yellow Jack," a drama by Sidney Howard based on the data contained in one of the chapters of Paul De Kruif's "Microbe Hunters." It deals with the late Dr. Walter Reed's researches into the transmission of yellow fever—a heroic episode in the romance of bacteriological science.

The cast for this play will consist of Katherine Wilson, John Miltern, Robert Keith, Eduardo Ciannelli, Geoffrey Kerr, Whitford Kane, Richie Ling, and Millard Mitchell. Its première will take place in the Martin Beck theater, New York, next Thursday night.

The Theater Guild's production of "The School for Husbands," a lyric comedy based on Molière's "Ecole des Maris," will end its tour in Washington tomorrow night. This eliminates another booking of the American Theater society's Chicago season.

A special matinée performance for the benefit of the Actors' Fund of America will be given by Joe Cook and his "Hold Your Horses" company in the Grand Opera house Thursday, March 1. This official charity of the theatrical profession is now heavily burdened by extra expenses, and its weekly relief expenditures average between $3,500 and $4,000 a week.

"The Mad Lover," depicting episodes in the life of Lord Byron, will end its engagement at the Punch and Judy theater tomorrow night.

The State-Lake, vaudeville and cinema theater, will call Friday the first day in its week, starting today. Heretofore its bills have been opening on Sundays. This change in schedule conforms to procedure at the Palace and Chicago theaters.

Rolls and Coffee

It's perfectly disgusting to be envious of those disgustingly perfect things only scads of money can buy. But here's one solace. Everyone can have the very best of coffee. Did you know that? Hills Bros. Coffee is made of the very finest green coffees obtainable, roasted to perfection by an exclusive process. Yet here's the welcome news about this notable coffee. Its rich flavor is so much more abundant, actually, the cost per cup is no more (in many cases, even less) than "bargain counter" coffees. After all, you don't drink coffee by the pound—you drink it by the cup. Order Hills Bros. Coffee today.

SOUTH SIDERS FIGHT GOLDEN GLOVES FINALS TONIGHT

37 TEAMS SET FOR TOURNEY OF CHAMPIONS

White City Boxers Flash Power.

What's On Tonight

FOLLOWING are the facts about the final round of the south section Golden Gloves tournament at White City tonight:

Place—White City, 63d street and South Park avenue.

Time—First bouts in one ring at 7:30 p. m.

Boxers—Open and Novice boxers report for examinations between 4 and 6 p. m.

Pairings—By lot at 6 p. m.

Number of bouts—39.

OTHER EVENTS.

Milwaukee finals.

BY FRENCH LANE.

The zero hour has arrived for the boys in Chicagoland who are fighting on toward the Golden Gloves in THE TRIBUNE'S Tournament of Champions.

Thirty-seven teams have been selected and their members honed to the sharpness of a razor's edge for the greatest of all fistic carnivals which opens at the Chicago Stadium on Monday night.

The other teams will be selected tonight in the last of the long series of sectional meets, Chicago's south side team and the walloping band of Wisconsin athletes which will represent the Milwaukee bureau of THE TRIBUNE.

Predict Strong Teams.

These teams to be picked tonight promise to be among the strongest in the Tournament of Champions. The south siders in two nights of battling at White City have displayed a boxing and punching skill that few teams ever assembled in Chicago have been able to boast. The Milwaukee team is reported to be the best ever mustered there also.

Fifty boys remain in the running for the south side sectional championships this morning. They were the survivors of an enormous neighborhood field of more than 300 amateur boxers. Both the open division and the novice class title contenders from the south side appeared to be more scientific and more powerful than the rank and file of the glove pushers who have sought the titles in the other sectional meets.

Keep Crowd on Edge.

A crowd of 2,500 which packed the White City arena looked on last night while more than 100 bouts were decided. There wasn't an idle instant. The fighting was in progress in two rings. Knockouts came along so frequently it was hardly possible for the crowd to lean back and take things easy.

Just when the spectators tried to relax for an instant along would come a knockout to bring them up on the back of their chairs cheering.

A south side youngster who caught the fancy of the big gathering was Gaston Van, who represented Trafton's gymnasium. Early in the evening he knocked out Peter McConville of the Stalker's Eagles A. C. in the first round.

Shortly before midnight he came back for another skirmish with Leo Maska. He knocked out Maska in the second round. Van is fighting in the 118 pound novice class and he seems to be on his way to a championship.

Caserio Has Easy Time.

In the open division six lads won the plaudits of the crowd. They were Fred Caserio, Jerry Mulcahy, Russel Hagstrom, Albert Soukop, Barney Ryan, and Chester Levere.

Caserio didn't even fight to become a hero. He has won Golden Gloves titles on two occasions. He was paired with Jackie Johnson from the Savoy Athletic club last night. Jackie took one look at Caserio as they reported for action and said: "I don't

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The Blackhawks and the New York Americans, two troupes of young men who have designs upon places in the Stanley cup playoffs, played a National Hocky league game at Chicago Stadium last night, but could come to no more decisive conclusion than a scoreless tie.

It was a hocky game, and just that. There were oodles of fancy skating, competent goal tending by both doormen, a satisfactory touch of bumping, but nary a goal, a lack which caused the 7,500 present to set up a loud and futile clamor in the closing minutes.

Hawks Gain on Detroit.

Probably the most interesting item and one which at least contented the Hawks and gave great pleasure to the Americans, was the scoreboard in the organ loft giving the results of other games. This revealed, first of all, that the Rangers had beaten Detroit, thereby moving themselves into a second place tie with the Hawks in the American division but hauling Detroit, the leader, down to within one game above the Hawks and the Rangers.

Meanwhile Ottawa was handing Boston another beating, thereby practically assuring the Hawks of a place in the playoffs. The Americans almost paused to cheer when they saw that the Maroons had beaten the Canadiens, moving the Americans into a third place tie with the Frenchmen in the Canadian division and giving them an even chance to reach the playoffs, which are restricted to the first three teams in each division.

Give Goalies a Hand!

If anybody deserves any special mention for last night's performance it should be the goalies. Chuck Gardiner demonstrated why he has just about wrapped up the Vezina trophy for goal minding, but it was Roy Worters, a bored little man who plays with his head up after the manner of George Hainesworth of Toronto, who kept the Hawk wings away from the American cage with a great exhibition.

The first five minutes of the opening period were distinguished by energy, if not excitement. A poke checking duel kept the puck traveling from one blue line to another, but in no profitable direction beyond either.

Coulter's Thrust Fails.

Coulter burst out of a cluster of marauding New Yorkers, who had been conducting a bit of a raid on Gardiner and had only Dutton and Brydge to beat. He stormed through them, but they hurried his pass back to Thompson, who had followed him down the ice. A minute later, March was penalized for jostling Gracie along the boards, and the Americans returned to the business of irritating Gardiner.

The opening portion of the second period revealed quite plainly why the Americans are better than the Americans of yore, for they controled the puck much of the time and actually

FIRST GROUP OF WHITE SOX OFF FOR COAST CAMP

Grabiner Takes 3 Rookies to Pasadena.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Three White Sox athletes, bound for the rigors of spring training, answered Vice President Harry Grabiner's call of the roll last night a few minutes before the California bound Golden State Limited pulled out of the La Salle street station.

The select gathering, under Grabiner's direction, will reach camp at Pasadena, Cal., next Sunday, where they will be greeted by Manager Lew Fonseca, who has plans for putting them to work in a big way the following day. Also as greeters when the trio from Chicago arrives will be ten other athletes who will journey direct from their homes to the camp site.

The delegation from here was made up of Catcher John Pasek, ex Tiger; John Huck, a local pitching product, and Outfielder Milton Bocek, another local. John Pomorski, a pitcher purchased from Montreal, was scheduled to accompany this group, but it was discovered yesterday that he had gone through Chicago several days ago.

Wants Line on Rookies.

This collection will receive Fonseca's undivided attention for the week prior to the arrival of the main squad. All of them, barring three catchers, are fellows Fonseca wants to get a definit line on before the camp landscape becomes cluttered up with veterans whose capabilities are well known. Three old timers—Simmons, Haas, and Dykes—are already at Pasadena and probably will work out with the freshmen.

The early early squad will be made up of Pitchers Phil Gallivan, Paul Gregory, John Huck, Dale Mills, Otho Nitcholas, John Pomorski, Lee Stine, Leslie Tietje; Catchers John Pasek, Mervin Shea, Morgan Snyder, and Outfielder Milton Bocek. The Sox' first exhibition is scheduled for March 11 against the Los Angeles club, and as the rookie pitchers will be employed almost exclusively in this three game series, the young men will have to make haste in their conditioning.

Seven More Sign Up.

In the rush of last minute business yesterday Vice President Grabiner discovered seven signed contracts, receipt of which hadn't been announced. Those who joined the ranks of satisfied employes were Pitchers Stine, Tietje, Wyatt, Gallivan, Gregory and Heving, and Outfielder Bocek.

Only two or three fellows remain to be heard from, but, according to Grabiner, they have made no complaints about terms, so are expected to ride into camp accompanied by their signed documents.

The Sox main squad will depart from Chicago next Wednesday evening, and the following night a large portion of the Cubs will assemble for the start to their spring base at Catalina island, Cal.

HOPPE DEFEATS BOZEMAN; TITLE MATCH TONIGHT

New York, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Willie Hoppe of New York defeated J. N. Bozeman, of Vallejo, Cal., 50 to 42, in the world's three cushion billiard tournament tonight. The game closed the regular schedule of both players and left them in a tie for fourth place with seven victories and four defeats. They will play off the tie Saturday.

The regular tourney schedule closes tomorrow night, when Walter Cochran of San Francisco, the defending champion, meets Johnny Layton, Secaucus, N. J., veteran who has captured the title four times in his career, in the decisive match.

Cochran and Layton now are tied for first place with eight victories and two defeats, and the championship will go to the winner of tomorrow night's match. The loser automatically will drop into a tie with Allen Hall of Chicago for second place, necessitating a playoff.

Hoppe led Bozeman all the way tonight, gaining an 8 to 1 lead at the end of the first ten innings and leading by ten points, 31 to 21, after 30 frames.

Talking It Over

BY ARCH WARD.

WILLIAM A. DYCHE, for 30 years business manager of Northwestern university, and after whom Dyche stadium is named, won his N in baseball. . . . He was third baseman and center fielder on the 1879 and 1880 teams. . . . Francis Schmidt, football coach at Texas Christian, may be a dark horse in the Ohio State situation. . . . Bill Gelwick, tennis coach at Illinois, sighs when he reads in the Tokio newspapers that Jiro Yamagishi, formerly a student and freshman tennis player at Urbana, is ranked No. 2 in singles and No. 1 in doubles and is a prospect for the Japanese Davis cup team. . . . Miss Margare Donahue, secretary of the Cubs, is recovering from an illness in a Milwaukee sanitarium. . . .

MARGARET DONAHUE.

Al Wesson of the University of Southern California registers the following complaint: "In your column, printed today in the Los Angeles Times, you say 'The coach of the ice hocky team at Southern California is Arnold Eddy, and he can't skate a stroke.' . . . Not long ago such a statement would have been true, but it is now resented by Mr. Eddy as gross slander. He now can skate clear out to the middle of the floor. . . . Of coure, he still carries a hocky stick to hook on to a player, light, referee, or other convenient object when he feels his equilibrium departing, but the point is he can skate several strokes, often consecutively."

This protest is most distressing, since it is the first mistake we ever have made. . . . Our apologies to Mr. Eddy, whose team, by the way, is headed for its fourth straight championship. . . . They shouldn't be playing ice hocky in California anyway. . . . The rest of the world is under the impression a native Californian doesn't know what ice looks like, except in highballs. . . . The Rev. Owen A. McGrath, who is conducting a mission at Old St. Mary's church, south of the loop, was quarter back on the Dartmouth football team and catcher on the baseball club in 1902 and 1903. . . . He turned down a contract with the Washington Senators to become a Paulist priest. . . .

Bill Flora, now Dr. Flora, always will remember his first assignment as a Michigan football player. . . . He was on the bench that Indian summer afternoon when Red Grange galloped through the Michigan team for five touchdowns. . . . George Little, then coach of the Wolverines, turned around and said: "Get in there, Flora, and stop that fellow." . . . Flora stopped him, because Grange had done his playing for the day. . . . But he was a regular after that. . . . When you go to the races in Chicago this season don't be surprised if you see your favorite nag wearing specs. . . . Dr. Ernest E. Emons, noted veterinarian, is at Hialeah Park experimenting in an effort to determine if it will be practical to equip with spectacles horses which have poor vision.

Times have changed. . . . Several years ago Ted McGrew, now a National league umpire, and Red Held were bounced out of their jobs as Coast league officials because they worked at the Tia Juana track in the off season. . . . The vice president and general manager of the new Santa Anita track is none other than Dr. Charles H. Strub, for many years president of the San Francisco Seals. . . . Elno Hayskar, who won his freshman numerals at half back on the Northwestern squad last fall, is a son of Oscar Hayskar, Finnish vice consul in Chicago. . . . The United States Golf association is now accepting subscriptions from member clubs to retain the Midwest Turf Garden, greens research laboratory, on the Lake Forest course of Albert D. Lasker. . . . Ralph Metcalfe never has been able to equal the 40 yard gymnasium record at Marquette of 4.4 held by Johnny Sisk, Chicago Bears' half back. . . . Metcalfe has run it in 4.3 elsewhere. . . .

Ten Years Ago Today—The twenty-fourth annual American Bowling congress opened at the 132d armory. . . . Purdue took the lead in the Big Ten basketball race by defeating Michigan, 24 to 20. . . . The Chicago Maroons defeated Indiana, 26 to 25, and held second place. . . . Charles D. Gorman won the international ice skate title at Lake Placid. . . . William C. Prout, president of the A. A. U., headed the committee to select the American Olympic track and field team. . . . Seth's Memory paid 143 to 1 in the sixth race at Tia Juana. . . . Students and alumni of Iowa presented Coach Howard Jones with a silver loving cup. . . .

Ohio State Answers Purdue Alumni with More Questions

Columbus, O., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Dr. George W. Rightmire, president of Ohio State university, today adopted the questionnaire, first introduced by his accusers, in replying to charges of the Purdue Alumni association of Indianapolis that Ohio State was using "unfair and unsportsmanlike" tactics in bidding for the services of Noble Kizer of Purdue as football coach.

"I asked them if they had talked to Noble Kizer, if they had talked to the president of Purdue and why they assumed our procedure in approaching Kizer was not correct," Dr. Rightmire said.

The Indianapolis alumni wrote Dr. Rightmire yesterday, calling attention to reports current for several days that Kizer would become Ohio State's next football coach to succeed Sam Willaman. They asked for a "prompt, frank, public statement" of Ohio State's attitude toward proselyting of athletic coaches.

No Further Comment.

Dr. Rightmire's reply and a statement from Clarence Laylin, chairman of a committee appointed to assist Athletic Director L. W. St. John in the selection of a coach, were the first public confirmations of the Kizer reports.

Rightmire refused to comment further, but Laylin revealed that St. John did approach Kizer and the latter expressed interest, agreeing to meet St. John for a conference.

Laylin said St. John proposed consulting the president of Purdue first, but he quoted Kizer as saying he would prefer the negotiations to be carried on between himself and Ohio State officials. Kizer was invited to come to Columbus to confer with St. John and other members of the committee this week. Kizer has not been here, according to Laylin.

St. John returned today from Chicago, where he saw Kizer. "He's definitly out," St. John said, refusing to comment further on the subject. "As far as we know here at the university," he added, "Kizer will be coaching at Purdue next fall."

St. John likewise refused to name who would be the next in his series of interviews to find a successor for Willaman. He did admit that several other men were under consideration, some of whom had not been named.

Later in the day St. John announced that Kizer would participate in a summer school for football.

KIZER DEFENDS OHIO

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Noble Kizer is staying at Purdue.

The Boilermaker athletic director and head football coach, who returned today after an address before a Purdue alumni gathering in Chicago yesterday, spiked the rumor that he was to accept the head coaching position at Ohio State university by saying: "I am entirely satisfied here at Purdue and I have definitely decided against making any move."

Asked to comment on criticism aimed at Ohio State for its tactics in approaching him, he said: "The criticism of Ohio State, while undoubtedly well meant, was unjustified. Ohio State's actions were entirely legitimate, and the approaches to me were made through the regular official university channels."

CARNERA SHOWS FLAWS IN DRILL AT MIAMI BEACH

Workout for Loughran Fails to Impress Fans.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Miami, Fla., Feb. 22.—Primo Carnera displayed his pugilistic wares this afternoon at Carter's pier before a Washington's birthday crowd of 1,500 persons, the largest crowd which has seen the Italian in training thus far. For the privilege, if it be a privilege, spectators paid 50 cents each.

Carter's pier was a promotion started by the late Tex Rickard. It is called the million dollar pier because since the depression nothing is worth what it cost, but big amounts still sound well.

Active But Not Impressive.

Carnera gave the crowd an active exhibition although it was not at all impressive. Two new sparring partners, Lou Carpenter and Popper Stopper, appeared against him, but half of his six rounds of boxing was with Johnny Milner, who showed up some of the weaknesses which followers of Tommy Loughran expect to decide the battle between their choice and Carnera Wednesday night.

Pa Stribling, father of the late Will Stribling, who won and lost a decision abroad to Carnera, both on fouls, was present. Pa picked Carnera, saying "He's too big. He'll win."

In the buildup for this championship battle, Carnera has been appearing almost nightly at the three dog tracks, the Jai Alai Fronton and the swimming exhibit. The purpose, of course, is to stir the populace from fairly well concealed apathy. Apparently this effort is succeeding. However, the climax comes tomorrow when Carnera is guest speaker at the Miami Kiwanis club.

Gump to Go On.

From West Palm Beach, word was telephoned to fight headquarters here that Tommy Loughran worked six rounds against three sparring partners and looked great. Sidney Smith, creator of Andy Gump, was not one of the three. On Tuesday, Sid took on Tommy for two rounds in an exhibition bout and pulled his punches, so as not to hurt Loughran before his big title chance. Likewise it was announced there will be no hiatus in Andy Gump production as a result of the fracas.

Loughran will engage his Sunday workout here in the Madison Square Garden arena in order that Miami visitors may see his condition. His advertised appearance last Sunday was prevented by rain.

STENGEL COMES TO TERMS WITH DODGER OFFICIAL

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Charles D. [Casey] Stengel, erstwhile Kansas City steamfitter and once the home run hitting hero of a world series, slipped into New York today from his winter quarters at Glendale, Cal. It was reported he had a mutually satisfactory conference with President Steven McKeever of the Brooklyn Dodgers, at which he accepted the club's managerial reins as Max Carey's successor.

For publicity reasons the Brooklyn club officials would not commit themselves on any point in connection with the shift in pilots, not even to the extent of admitting that Stengel had arrived in New York. But tomorrow things will be different.

In the hotel suite of the club's ailing business manager, Bobby Quinn, ex-business agent of the Red Sox, and, earlier, of the Browns, Casey will be unveiled, will answer questions—all except Bill Terry's pertinent one as to whether the Dodgers still are in the National league—and announce that he will have unlimited authority, with no interference in running the team in 1934.

Contract terms, including a stipend figure well in advance of the $6,000 Stengel received as head Brooklyn coach under Carey last year, are said to have been agreed upon in the meeting with McKeever today.

Savell, Yale Swimmer, Sets World's Breast Stroke Mark

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 23.—(AP)—A new world's record for the 100 meter breast stroke was set today by Walter Savell, Yale swimmer, as the Yale varsity swamped the boys' club of New York, 50 to 21, in a dual meet. Savell swam the 100 meters in 1 minute 13 2-5 seconds to break the record of 1 minute 14 seconds held by J. Cartonnet of France.

Eli Title Hopes Dashed as Princeton Beats Yale, 36-26

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Princeton blasted Yale hopes for an eastern intercollegiate basketball title tonight by winning, 36 to 26. It was Yale's fourth consecutive defeat since its fatal slump started.

RANGERS SMASH 13 GAME STREAK OF WINGS, 3 TO 1

12,000 See Early Attack Beat Detroit.

New York, Feb. 22.—(AP)—The New York Rangers made an abrupt end to Detroit's streak of thirteen National Hocky league games without a defeat tonight by turning back the American division leaders, 3 to 1, before a crowd of 12,000. The victory left the Rangers only three points behind the Red Wings.

The Rangers jumped into a 2 to 0 lead early in the opening period. The Red Wings played a great game the rest of the way, and in the third period banged 19 shots at Goalie Andy Aitkenhead.

Frank Boucher scored the first goal. Cecil Dillon poked in the second after Vic Ripley had opened the way. Murray Murdoch climaxed a five man attack late in the second period by getting the third Ranger counter.

MISS VAN WIE BEATS BRITON IN FLORIDA GOLF

Ormond Beach, Fla., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Virginia Van Wie of Chicago, holder of the national women's championship, eliminated Kathleen Garnham of London, England, in the second round of the South Atlantic golf championship tournament, 4 and 2, today.

Other winners today were Lucille Robinson, Des Moines, Ia.; Marian Miley, Lexington, Ky., and Mrs. O. S. Hill, Kansas City, Mo. Miss Robinson defeated Mrs. H. C. Kerston, Richmond, Va., 2 and 1; Miss Miley won from Mrs. C. R. Harbaugh, Cleveland, O., 3 and 2, and Mrs. Hill triumphed over Mary Rogers, Jacksonville, Fla., on the last hole.

TRUANT IOWA FRESHMEN NOW STUDIO PLAYERS

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Duane Swanson and Bud Froning, University of Iowa freshmen basketball players who caused a proselyting investigation when they hitch hiked their way to Los Angeles to enter the University of Southern California, now are playing studio basketball.

The youths obtained jobs as property men at a movie studio and joined the studio basketball team, Froning playing forward and Swanson guard.

Babe Ruth Advances in Florida Golf Tourney

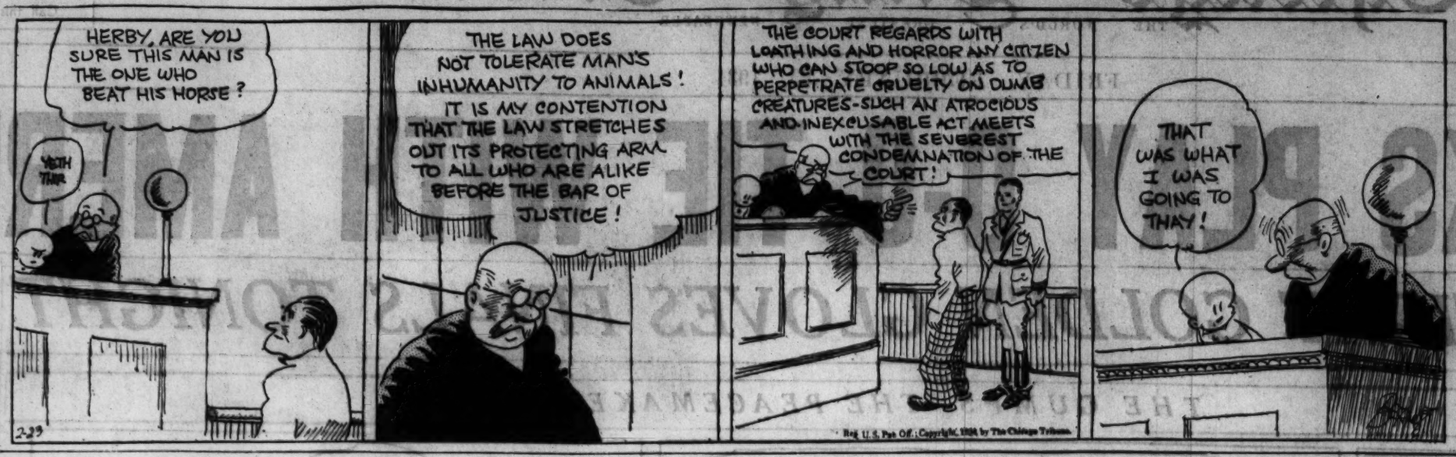
SMITTY—YOU TELL HIM!



Blackhawks and Americans Play 0-0 Tie

outdid the Hawks when it came to skating and stick handling.

Coo's Just Misses.

They were not forgetting the value of shooting, either, and the Burke-Conn-Klein line once came at Gardiner with such a vengeance that they sprawled him on the puck and kept digging for it until Conacher ended it by seating himself on Chuck's shoulders.

In the latter half of the period the jostling and rugged checking became highly evident, but without a penalty being called. Jackson, Gracie and Martin gave Gardiner a bit of worry, causing him to drop on the puck again. Coulter and Cook dashed through the American defense, with Cook making a hard shot from ten feet out, which brought Worters skidding out of his cage for a grand stop.

Try Long Shots.

The first ten minutes of the third period resolved themselves into the most wide open part of the game with both teams throwing accuracy in shooting to the winds, and confining themselves for the most part to long shots. The most dangerous of these grew out of a combination rush by Jenkins and Cook, with Worters being lucky to halt shots by both of them.

The Hawks sent Gottselig, Couture, and McFadyen out for the overtime, while Jackson, Martin, and Gracie took a turn for the Americans. The Hawks took the offensive the greater part of the time, with McFadyen running interference for Gottselig, but they couldn't make an impression on Worters. Whenever they became especially abusive the New York defense men promptly dispatched the puck down the ice and out of danger.

John McGraw Winning Fight with Disease

New Rochelle, N. Y., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—John J. McGraw was pronounced out of danger by physicians today. The former manager of the New York Giants, who entered the New Rochelle hospital last Friday, apparently is winning his fight against uremic poisoning.

McGraw began to show improvement several days ago and Dr. L. B. Chapman announced today that no further bulletins would be issued for the press. However, he said information on the condition of McGraw will be available daily.

"The press will be informed if there is a serious change in Mr. McGraw's condition," Dr. Chapman said.

Dr. Chapman early this afternoon issued the following bulletin: "Temperature variations are apparently due to complicating pyelitis [inflamation of the kidneys]. Mr. McGraw's temperature rose slightly overnight to 103.8 this morning."

PITTSBURGH TO OPPOSE CHICAGO LACROSSE TEAM

The Pittsburgh Yellowjackets, winners of the first half of the National Lacrosse league season, will meet the Chicago Sox at the Dexter pavilion, 42d and Halsted streets, Sunday night starting at 8:30 o'clock.

The visiting team is composed almost entirely of French-Canadians from the Montreal district. La France, who plays rover, is one of the league's stars. It was his play that contributed largely to the defeat of the Sox in their drive for first place during the first half of the season.

East vs. West Polo Series Is Planned

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Another east-west polo match is planned for this year, according to information issued today by the United States Polo association. Officials of that organization announced that a special meeting of the executive committee would be called shortly to start definite arrangements for resumption of the series which started last year at Chicago.

There has been widespread demand for another series this year, but international obligations stood in the way until this week, when a cablegram from Louis E. Stoddard, chairman of the association, who is in England, made it apparent that the English were not coming over this year. This left the way clear for an east-west match, inasmuch as Argentina had previously sent word that no team could visit the United States before next season.

Favor Another Match.

The delegates to the annual meeting of the association in January went on record as favoring another east-west match and the executive committee is empowered to handle the details. The probable course will be to have the east send a challenge to the west. The west, as the winning team the last time, might have the right to name the place of play. It is known the east wishes to play the series at Meadowbrook in September. It is possible that the west may request a neutral meeting place such as Chicago.

The west's victory last summer, two matches to one, gave polo its greatest stimulation in years. In addition it marked the ascendency of such western aces as Elmer J. Boeseke Jr. and Cecil Smith, the former Texas cowboy, both of whom were elevated last month to the 10 goal handicap level with Tommy Hitchcock Jr.

Several Players Hurt.

Hitchcock, although he played through the series as the East's leader, developed concussion of the brain as the aftermath of several bad spills and played no further polo last season. Smith and Boeseke also were injured in the intersectional battle and the latter recently emerged from a Texas-California series at Los Angeles with a fractured arm. Herbert W. [Rube] Williams, who broke a leg in the Chicago melee, is back in the game again.

The West, with Smith, Boseke,

EDGAR SHERIDAN, FORMER SPORTS EDITOR, IS DEAD

Veteran Newspaper Man Taken by Heart Attack.

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Edgar S. Sheridan, veteran member of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE news staff, died suddenly at a hotel here today from a heart attack. He was 70 years old.

Sheridan came here three days ago to spend a week's vacation with two nephews, Lauren E. Sheridan and Richard Sheridan, both of McRae, Ark. Apparently in good health, he suffered an attack of indigestion yesterday and this was followed by heart complications which caused his death, according to Dr. F. J. Scully, the attending physician.

Burial at Rossville.

Sheridan was not married. In addition to the two nephews at McRae, he is survived by another nephew, Dr. Joyce Sheridan of Philadelphia, and a niece, Mrs. Lamar Warrick of Evanston, Ill.

Formerly the sports editor of THE TRIBUNE, he had served in more recent years on the telegraph desk. Sheridan was a native of Rossville, Ind. The body will be sent there tomorrow night for burial.

SPORTSMEN MISS HIM

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Eddie Sheridan, sports editor of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE from 1898 to 1908, was a paradox among sporting writers, respected alike by sports and sportsmen [differentiating between the two classes] for his sterling honesty and devotion to principles.

Sherry, as he was more intimately known to his office associates and close friends, came of old Methodist stock, his father having been a circuit riding minister. Though far from being a black sheep, nevertheless he liked sport and believed its integrity could be maintained if men of high type worked to that purpose.

Diffident and Retiring.

At a time when sports editors usually associated with pugilists, wrestlers, and professionals, acted as stakeholders, referees, and often even as managers and promoters, Sheridan who was naturally diffident and retiring, avoided these close contacts because he did not like the characters most prominent in those fields. Nevertheless, he always gave a fair break to participants in sports of which he did not at heart approve.

If he suspected a match was not on the up and up, that fraud or deception was being practiced, he withheld publicity. At all times, however, he was willing to listen to the stories and pleas of those affected. Thus it happened that Sherry, unapproachable on any basis except merit of the entertainment offered, was respected by sports.

Sportsmen Liked Him.

Sportsmen approved him because he was an ardent supporter of baseball, college sports, golf, and billiards. Before embarking permanently in newspaper work he was secretary of the St. Louis Brotherhood Baseball club. He played a fair amateur game of three cushions and it was his principal recreation outside of office hours until golf became popular.

Now there was another sport of which the late Mr. Sheridan was exceedingly fond. That was horse racing. Not a heavy better, he still derived keen pleasure from having a small wager down. His judgment was sound in thoroughbred values. Several times he declined executive positions with Chicago race tracks. This refusal was based on two reasons, his love of newspaper work and his family connections, some of whom did not approve of horse racing and betting.

A Graduate of De Pauw.

Thus some of the best informed turf comment in Chicago did not bear the byline of E. S. Sheridan. Instead it was "Merrill's comment" and only members of the staff knew the identity of Merrill.

Sheridan was graduated from De Pauw college where he was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity. He filled several newspaper positions in other cities and his temporary baseball rôle in St. Louis before becoming sports editor of the old Chicago Record. From there he came to THE TRIBUNE.

On this newspaper he first saw the merit in Hugh E. Keough's weekly gossip column published under the name of Hek, and suggested that it be made a daily feature. That was the start, in 1905, of the present In the Wake of the News, since conducted by the late Ring Lardner and this writer. It also was during Sheridan's tenure that Walter Eckersall, greatest of all Maroon football players, was graduated from the University of Chicago. Sheridan added him to the staff as football expert, a position which Eckie held until his death.

Takes Job in West.

Sheridan retired as sports editor in 1908 to build up his health, which had suffered from meticulous attention to detail. He later was head of the school of journalism at the University of Washington in Seattle, a position from which he resigned during internal strife there because he felt a principle was involved. Later he was head of the Associated Press bureau in Denver, returning to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE telegraph desk several years ago. While his health has not been of the best for several years, he gave the same painstaking and conscientous effort to his work as in his younger years.

Sheridan was a member of St. Cecelia Masonic lodge. His brother, Wilbur F. Sheridan, was well known as the secretary of the Epworth league of the Methodist church.

In the opinion of this writer, Sherry was a lovable fellow. He was hard to know but devoted and steadfast when once he was convinced any one was on the level. There was no limit to his loyalty to such friends. I'm sorry we must lose such a character as Eddie Sheridan from the newspaper field. We could not have too many of his kind.

In the Wake of the News

SETTLING DOWN.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., Feb. 22.—Friend Arch: Well, Arch, I've settled down to the hard work you expect me to perform. While that does not prevent going to the beach, golf links or tracks, both horse and dog, still you can see there's plenty to do in keeping you informed of all that is going on and the many people down here whom you know.

First, about this Carnera-Loughran fight next week. I haven't been sending much about it yet because it was postponed. As a matter of fact, there did not seem to be much excitement about it. Now visitors are beginning to talk again. I mean people not ordinarily interested in pugilism and not sporting people. The latter accept it as something to be held, but they know it is not a "natural," as we use the word, and only hope it will prove good enough not to give boxing another setback.

I rather think the bout will draw pretty well, considering the times and the seeming inequality of the contestants. By pretty well, I mean a $75,000 to $100,000 gate. Nor will any one be much surprised if the take runs under that amount.

The bout will be classed as amusement. Amusement here in the sporting line, except horse racing, depends more on novelty than on competitive merit. I can't think of anywhere else where donkey races at a dog track, monkeys as jockeys on dogs, ostrich races, horned toad derbies and such stunts would do much good for themselves. Pleasure seekers seem to like them and accept them on the basis on which they are promoted.

I've bumped into more Chicagoans since last writing you. Tom Coyne, broker, and his wife, of Kenilworth, have an apartment about a block from ours. Mrs. W. R. English and her daughter of Winnetka drove down with Mrs. Boyd, [Shorty] Anderson of Kenilworth, and Mrs. Joe Markley of Winnetka, as passengers. I think you played golf once with Joe Markley. We were in the same class out at Skokie. That was class D. There wasn't any class E.

Our class handicap allowances were 25 to 30 strokes. Joe won the cup for our class because he seldom took more than four putts on any green. Joe was associated with Dawes brothers, Booth Fisheries, Murray Body and a lot of other corporations. He was a class D golfer but a class A fellow.

Didn't intend to digress like that, for what I started to say was these particular visitors are living on a boat in the river called the Floating Palace which doesn't float but is equipped as a hotel, with a capacity of 150 guests. It's all right, too, but anyway it was the only place in town not filled when they arrived. That's what I started to tell you. This boat, which once was a floating gambling place off the coast, according to reports, is anchored here. Two years ago it was opened as a hotel but was not a financial success. Last year it was dark. Now it's prosperous and filled. That just shows how many more people are down here this winter.

Also met Charlie Wright, the coal man. Asked him how he could get away from the coal business in winter and he said he came down to make up his income tax, which is as good an excuse as any. I didn't say "I didn't know people had incomes any more," which ought to earn me a seat on the Hero's Bench. Herman Fischer of the Chicago playground system also was in at Brownie's, our leading restaurant, one day. He asked about the Golden Gloves and said he'd be back in time to help out as an official on the later bouts.

Another lady here from our section is Mrs. Ed Whiteman of Evanston. Everybody calls her "Kimmy," but I don't know her husband, so I don't call her Kimmy. She's at the pool nearly every day, so perhaps we'll be well enough acquainted yet. She has a small son with her, so if I make a fuss over the kid perhaps I can call her Kimmy, too.

I know you'll be glad to hear that I haven't spent much money lately that I'll have to charge to you. I did attend the Horned Toad Derby of which I'll write you another time. It set me back 85 cents. I'd have gone anyway, so I hardly know whether or not to charge the 85 cents on my expense account. What do you think?

Another thing: You said to get a story on the University of Miami football team. Well, spring practice doesn't start until about April 1. You see Coach McCann has a position at Hialeah, and all the football players work at the three dog tracks so they can't have practice until the dog tracks close. Otherwise they wouldn't have any time to study.

The boys get $5 a night for leading the dogs to the post and then stopping them after the race. It's an imposing sight to see these strong, husky, wholesome looking fellows lead the greyhounds, straining at their leashes, to the box from which they are started. It is supposed to develop character and manhood in the football players, while the racing improves the breed of greyhounds, so a dual purpose is served—really a triple purpose, for that $5 a night comes in mighty handy in helping pay one's educational expenses these days.

So I'm rather puzzled to know what to do about the football story. It seems most too long to stay until April 1 just for one story, but we can talk about that later. Regards.

HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

Fire Fighter to Fight with Fists Tonight

The South Side Golden Gloves fans expect plenty of fireworks tonight at White City when John Lamby of the Chicago fire department fights Art Oliver, Negro from Trafton's gym, in one of the two heavyweight qualifying bouts.

Oliver, winner of the heavyweight title in the Illinois Athletic club tournament, took part in the 1932 and 1933 Golden Gloves trials at White City. He is a receiving clerk at De Met's restaurant, 5 West Randolph street.

⊷

The other heavyweight final at White City pairs Albert Derwich, unattached, and Thomas Kenneally, C. Y. O. Kenneally, football player on the St. Philip High school team, weighs 200 pounds and is a brother of Phil Kenneally, C. Y. O. lightweight champion.

⊷

A flyweight contest in the open class will be between Eugene Spencer, South Chicago Y. M. C. A., and Edward Miller of the Savoy Athletic club. A bantamweight qualifying encounter matches Dave Schimmel, Jewish Organized Youth, with Joseph Lynn, C. Y. O.

⊷

Hal Pearl, whose tunes on the big pipe organ in the White City arena stirred the fighters on to greater deeds, almost fell out of the musician's pagoda when Pedro Baleva, the Filipino lad who serves him his coffee every day, knocked out Williard Lucas with one punch in the first round.

⊷

Pete Wistort, South Chicago heavyweight who boxes as a professional, seconded his kid brother, Alex Wistort, of St. Patrick parish of South Chicago, to victory over Carl Preissler, German-American Boxing club.

⊷

Slinging beef around the Levi Packing company plant at 39th street and Emerald avenue was the exercise Paddy Carroll, open welterweight candidate, obtained for his match against Edward B. Walton, Savoy Athletic club. It was sufficient. Paddy trimmed his Negro opponent in three rounds. Carroll, who fought in the 1932 Golden Gloves meet, has been boxing five years.

⊷

Patrick Kenneally Jr., a third son of the senior Kenneally, made short work of his light-heavyweight foe. He stopped Ray Fredericks of the Kewanee Athletic club, in the first round.

⊷

SHIELDS LOSES IN NEW YORK INDOOR TENNIS DOUBLES

No. 1 Player, Miss Hirsh, Beaten, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Frank Shields, New York, and Lester Stoefen, Los Angeles, first and third ranking amateur players of the country, made entrances into the National indoor tennis championships at the Seventh Regiment armory today. Before the day was over both had made their exits.

Paired with Miss Millicent Hirsh, New York, National girls' indoor title holder, Shields went down in defeat in the second round of the mixed doubles championship. Stoefen, who arrived yesterday from California, was eliminated with Miss Jane Sharp, also from Los Angeles, in the semi-finals.

Miss Florence Le Boutillier, Westbury, L. I., and Berkeley Bell, former intercollegiate title holder from Texas, accounted for the defeat of Miss Hirsh and Shields at 3-6, 6-3, 6-4. Miss Sharp and Stoefen were put out by Miss Norma Taubele, young New York stylist, and Frank Bowden, former Columbia university captain.

In a match lasting nearly two hours, Miss Taubele and Bowden, after losing an almost interminable second set of thirty-two games, came back in the third set to overcome a deficit of 1-3 and win the match at 6-3, 15-17, 6-4.

So Caserio probably will qualify for the Tournament of Champions after one skirmish in the middleweight division this evening.

Mulcahy Shows Class.

Jerry Mulcahy whipped Windell White of the Savoy Athletic club and turned up as the winner in a very impressive way. Jerry is a featherweight and only a mighty man will beat him.

Russell Hagstrom, a middleweight, appeared a champion when he whipped Seth Ranson after three rounds of hard fighting. Hagstrom stands six feet two inches and has scored seven knockouts in his last eleven fights.

MICHIGAN STATE, MARQUETTE TO MEET TONIGHT

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The Michigan State college basketball team will play its third game in four days when it meets Marquette university here tomorrow.

Heavies End Sectional Play with 11 Games

Heavyweight basketball teams in the Chicago Public High School league will end their sectional schedules this afternoon. Eleven games will be played. The champions and runners-up in each of the four sections will compete in the quarter-final round of play next week.

⊷

Waukegan, which has lost only two games this season, will play at Quincy, Ill., tomorrow night. The squad, coached by Ralph Brown, will end its schedule against La Salle-Peru on March 2. It will compete in the district tournament for the state championship at Waukegan. Waukegan dropped its only games to Thornton, state champion, and Joliet.

⊷

Capt. Fred Dovicki, captain of the Central Y. M. C. A. Day school heavyweight quintet, will lead the squad against Luther today. Capt. Dovicki has scored 320 points in Central's 19 games this season for a new individual scoring record in the City Private School league. Victory against Luther today will give Central the championship.

⊷

Chicago Latin and North Shore lightweight basketball teams divided two games at Chicago Latin's gymnasium yesterday. The Chicago Latin heavyweights won, 26 to 7, and the North Shore ponies triumphed, 26 to 17.

⊷

Catholic High will seek its tenth straight heavyweight victory in the east division of the Chicago Catholic High School league when it plays De Paul at Joliet Sunday.

⊷

Everett Stops Edgren in 6th Round at Miami

Miami, Fla., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Buck Everett of Gary, Ind., won a technical knockout tonight over Cowboy Frankie Edgren of Cheyenne, Wyo., when their scheduled ten round heavyweight bout was stopped at the end of the sixth on the advice of a physician. Everett opened cuts over both of Edgren's eyes.

WALLACE CITES 10 PACKERS FOR FIXING PRICES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace today opened a new war on the country's major meat packing companies, charging them with price collusion and attempted monopoly of the retail field in a large southern sales area.

SEC. WALLACE. [Assoc. Press Photo.]

Invoking the obscure federal packers and stock yards act, the secretary cited ten large packing concerns on March 24 to file formal answers. On April 9, he announced, they will be accorded a public hearing at Jackson, Miss.

The packers involved in the government action are Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Wilson & Co., Morris & Co., an Armour subsidiary; the St. Louis Independent Packing company, a Swift subsidiary; Abraham Brothers Packing company; the Cudahy Packing company; Jacob Dold Packing company; John Morrell & Co., and the Memphis Packing corporation.

Charges Exchange of Prices.

In general, the charges preferred by Mr. Wallace are that these ten companies furnished to each other "information on prices at which they would sell meats and meat food products.

"This practice," it was said, "was for the purpose of enabling the respondents to give unreasonable preferences and advantages to certain purchasers of meats and meat products; to give preferences to certain localities; to discriminate unjustly between certain persons; to force competitors out of business and to manipulate prices and apportion sales in commerce."

Seth Thomas, department of agriculture solicitor, who conducted the investigation which led to the department's action and who will prosecute the charges brought by the government, declared today that action against the ten packers might have been taken under the federal anti-trust laws as well as under the packers and stockyards act. The latter statute was chosen, he indicated, because the department of agriculture is the prosecuting agency under it, whereas the department of justice has jurisdiction over cases brought under the anti-trust laws.

The monopolistic practices alleged to have been engaged in by the packers involved in today's proceeding extend back as far as 1927.

Perils Marketing Agreement.

Secretary Wallace explained that the action announced today does not interfere with the proposed marketing agreement for the packing industry which after months of futile negotiations has recently appeared on the verge of approval. That the department's allegations will affect the attitude of the packers, however, seemed probable and indications were that the entire marketing agreement program will be scrapped.

Under the terms of the marketing pact, Mr. Wallace declared, the packers would be exempted from certain provisions of the federal anti-trust statutes. But he denied that a price fixing agreement similar to the one charged by the department in its citation would be possible under such an agreement. While retail prices could be "stabilized" at a given level under the proposed pact, he explained, such fixed prices would be applicable generally for the packing industry and not confined to a given group in a localized area.

SWIFT DENIES CHARGES.

A denial of the charges made public in Washington was issued last night by Swift & Co. in a statement of Harold H. Swift, vice president:

"Swift & Co. denies the charges in the complaint and is confident that there has been no violation of the law."

Henry Veeder, general counsel for Swift & Co., said:

"Swift & Co. has not been violating the antitrust laws in the south or anywhere else. We try to live up to the laws. We do live up to them.

"This is entirely news to me. We have had absolutely no warning of any such suits and there has been not even a cautionary letter from the secretary about whatever he considers illegal in our activities.

"I cannot imagine what is wrong."

Thomas E. Wilson, president of Wilson & Co., said he believed "that the complaint will not be justified when the facts are known, and I am sure that the companies named will gladly coöperate with him [Secretary Wallace] in developing the facts. As a matter of fact, if they had had an opportunity, they would have done so without a complaint and the resulting publicity, which is damaging to the industry."

Hiram Walker Defers Action on Dividend, Conserves Cash

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Dividend action on the common stock of Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts, Ltd., was deferred, it was announced today by the directors. The usual quarterly preferred dividend was declared payable March 15 to shareholders of Feb. 28. The announcement said that while the earnings of the company would permit a payment on the common cash requirements to finance erection of the Peoria, Ill., plant and additional business now being done in the United States, made it advisable to defer action.

Hogs Advance Despite Lack of Federal Buying

The hog market yesterday staged a mild rally without the aid of federal buying orders, and closed with part of Wednesday's losses recovered. Packers have not bought hogs for the Federal Surplus Relief corporation since Tuesday afternoon.

Medium and heavy butcher hogs moved up 5 to 10 cents on packer buying, while light weights, which have been getting government support until this week, continued rather slow but generally steady with the average of Wednesday. Top sales at $4.60 were in line with the high mark of the preceding session, while the general average at $4.45 showed 5 cents advance. The average price of hogs is only 10 cents under the three year high mark for February which was established last Tuesday.

Cattle Market Active.

The cattle market turned active yesterday following the sluggish midweek session, and prices were strong to 25 cents higher. Plain quality light steers showed the least improvement, while many of the better grades were up 15 to 25 cents for the day.

However, the recovery did not replace all of the declines recorded earlier in the week and most classes closed lower than a week ago. Choice 1,043 pound yearlings sold at $7.35, the told, equaling the highest price paid for full carloads of steers since Feb. 5.

Distillers Buy Cattle.

An interesting feature of the cattle trade this week is the buying of feeding stock for the Kentucky distilleries. More than 10 carloads of feeders carrying a little flesh sold for this account during the week. The cattle bought by the distilleries are fed mash for several months, producing a good grade of beef.

Many of the feeders going into Kentucky are costing $4 to $4.50. Some yearling feeding cattle here yesterday cost $5.15 and the top in this branch is quoted at $6.25. Prices paid for feeding cattle are 10 cents higher than a week ago and 75 cents to $1 higher than a month ago.

Lamb prices advanced 15 to 25 cents after a steady opening yesterday. Top grades of wooled lambs sold freely at $9.75, while prime 98 pound averages reached $9.65 and 97 pound yearling sheep brought $8.75. Old mutton ewes were sold at $5.25 and under, or in line with the midweek quotations.

BUSINESS MAY GET MORE VOICE AS U. S. ADVISER

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Secretary Roper is endeavoring to give American business a semi-official voice in advising the government on economic problems through his business advisory and planning council.

It is composed of 56 persons. The secretary plans to enlarge and strengthen it so that it will have a quasi-official status almost continuously available to the administration for advice.

The plans depend on the concurrence of the President, but the secretary has announced that the council will meet in Washington March 8 and will be received by the President.

The business council was conceived as a more active body than it has been. The creation of NRA led the council to believe it should await developments before proceeding more actively.

GENERAL MOTORS REPORTED LIKELY TO CHANGE SETUP

Cleveland, O., Feb. 22.—(AP)—The Cleveland News today says that General Motors is planning "a reshaping of its inner structure."

The newspaper says that General Motors "is to become a pure holding company—holding the stocks of five major operating companies" and credits the statement to reports from New York banking circles.

The reports indicate, the paper says, that Chevrolet-Oldsmobile, Cadillac-La Salle, Buick-Pontiac, Fisher Body, and Frigidaire will be the five operating units of General Motors. General Motors would retain all the stock of the operating divisions under the plan, the paper says, but there would be operating autonomy in each.

MARKETS, BANKS REOPEN TODAY

The principal American security and commodity markets which were closed yesterday for Washington's birthday will resume normal business this morning. Some of the foreign markets abbreviated their trading periods yesterday in honor of King Albert of Belgium. They also will resume the normal hours today.

DOLLAR VALUE SHOWS SLIGHT CHANGE IN FOREIGN MARKETS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 22.—Trading in foreign exchange was suspended here today and advices from foreign markets showed little change in the ratios at which the principal currencies closed last night.

In London the dollar was easy in the early trading, with sterling advancing to $5.09¼, but later relapsing to close at $5.08, practically unchanged for the day. In Paris the dollar was worth 15.27 francs. Translated into United States funds, the franc was worth 6.55 cents, unchanged for the day and representing an indicated gold worth of 59.81 cents for the dollar.

Meanwhile American gold buying in the London free market continued, with purchases estimated at $2,289,375. The price was 4 pence lower at 136 shillings 1 pence a fine ounce, equivalent to $34.61.

The Bank of England and the Bank of France issued their weekly statements today. The English bank's reserve increased £8,966,000, while the gold holdings of the French institution fell $23,344,000.

GERMANY OWNS 70 PCT. OF BANKS, SAYS SCHACHT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, revealed in the course of a speech today that 70 per cent of the capital of German banks is owned by the state. This refers, he said, to all banks of which the capital is 10,000,000 marks or about $4,000,000 at the present exchange rate.

Dr. Schacht vehemently derided rumors that Germany is planning devaluation of the mark. These rumors are so strong they have resulted in recent weeks in selling of bonds and heavy buying of goods and stocks as "hedges."

"This government will embark upon no financial experiments," he said in an address to 60 bank executives whom he advised to get the Nazi spirit or lose their jobs.

Dr. Schacht said devaluation is unthinkable, explaining that Germany plans to meet the competition of low value currency countries through the method of scrips and "additional trade agreements."

Wheat Prices Rise ½ to 5/8c at Winnipeg

WINNIPEG, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Wheat futures advanced ½ to ⅝ cent here today due largely to strength at Liverpool. Trading was quiet at the rise, however. May wheat closed at 67⅜ cents and July at 68¼ cents.

Prices held near the best levels most of the day as offerings were extremely light. Small buying orders were sufficient to keep the market firm.

A fair amount of buying was noted at the opening due to covering against export sales and by shorts in general. July delivery came in for more attention.

There was buying of wheat by seaboard interests, 100,000 bushels being sold at Vancouver.

Liverpool closed ¼ to ⅝d higher, although private cables said there was liberal liquidation of March contracts.

Winnipeg and Liverpool prices follow:

ILLINOIS CENTRAL LINE REPORTS INCREASE IN INCOME FOR JANUARY

The Illinois Central system yesterday reported that its net operating income for January was $883,070, compared with $610,309 in January, 1933, an increase of $272,761. Gross operating revenues for January stood at $6,990,050, compared with $6,643,381 in January, 1933.

The Pere Marquette's January net operating income was $207,912, contrasting with deficit of $37,515 in January, 1933. Surplus after charges last month amounted to $2,330 against deficit of $229,004 a year ago.

J. W. Davis, president of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, told stockholders the line's January net loss was about $330,000. Gross was running 21 per cent ahead of 1933 during the first fifteen days of last month, he said, but was then affected by a strike.

MORGAN NAMED IN SURPRISE QUIZ OF N. Y. TRACTION

[Copyright: 1934: By the Associated Press.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—(AP)—A surprise investigation of the interborough Rapid Transit receivership of New York, inspired by charges of collusion among big bankers, will be started tomorrow by the special senate committee appointed to study federal court receivership proceedings.

Without preliminary fanfare, or public notice, the committee headed by Senator Ashurst [Dem., Ariz.] has subpenaed Charles Franklin, attorney for the Manhattan railway, to appear for questioning about the receivership.

Hundreds of millions of dollars are involved in the receivership of the transportation company, and charges submitted to the committee involve many big names.

Charges before the committee are that the receivership was of a "collusive nature"; that officers of the company have been retained by the receivers at "fabulous salaries."

It also has been charged that there was a "community of interest" between J. P. Morgan & Co., bankers for the Interborough, and Hayden-Stone and Albert H. Wiggin, bankers for the Brooklyn, Manhattan transit.

NEW LONG TERM FEDERAL BOND ISSUE FORECAST

Policy Change Seen in Bill Offering.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Secretary Morgenthau is turning the government's financial course toward long term borrowing, with a bond issue likely during March. This path was marked in the latest offering of $75,000,000 six month bills, dated Feb. 28.

Treasury bill sales are a weekly routine, new bills being sold to raise cash to meet maturing issues. But the importance of this announcement is that, for the first time in many months, the new offering is smaller in amount than the maturity.

The Feb. 28 maturity is $100,000,000. In almost every recent case the treasury has borrowed more than the amount of bills falling due, thereby adding to its working cash balance.

Signs Point to Conversion.

The decision to pay part of the Feb. 28 maturity out of cash already on hand was believed to indicate Morgenthau's determination to convert some of the government's big short term indebtedness into long term paper. To do so will lessen the government's frequent trips to the money market and probably encourage, some officials believe, the flow of money into industrial channels.

The treasury has a billion and a quarter dollars in three and six month bills outstanding. Converting some of this into long term obligations was a course recommended by Earle Bailie, recent financial assistant to Morgenthau, who helped map this year's ten billion dollar borrowing program.

Morgenthau was pleased with bank response to last week's four hundred million dollar sale of three year notes, the longest term issue offered the public since gold buying began last October. Then, a day or so later, the advisory council of the federal reserve system expressed satisfaction at the trend toward longer term financing and urged a bond issue.

"Bonds" Run Five Years or More.

The treasury uses the word "bond" to describe obligations of five years or longer.

The government's next large maturity is March 15. On that day $460,000,000 is due. It was thought likely Morgenthau may employ a bond issue to raise cash for this maturity and also add to the treasury's cash balance.

This balance, while at a record figure of $5,000,000,000, includes $2,300,000,000 of gold profit, which the treasury has said it does not intend to use for current expenses. This leaves only $2,200,000,000 for every day needs, a sum small in comparison with projected spending of nearly 7 billion dollars between now and June 30.

In April a billion of fourth Liberty bonds falls due. A March bond issue would enable the treasury to offer fourth Liberty holders a second opportunity to exchange their maturing bonds for new bonds. This offer was extended once before, in October, when $1,875,000,000 of fourth Liberties were called, but only about $900,000,000 were so exchanged.

Canada Plans Central Bank to Hold Gold

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 22.—Canada's new central bank legislation, introduced in the commons today by Finance Minister Edgar N. Rhodes provides for the establishment of "The Bank of Canada" with constitution and powers following precisely the lines of the MacMillan commission banking report.

Capital stock is to be of five million dollars, owned by the public, with ownership limitation of fifty shares of $100 par, and only British subjects may be share holders. Chartered banks or their nominees are specifically barred from Bank of Canada ownership. Cumulative divends not exceeding 6 per cent may be paid on this stock.

Seven to Operate Bank.

The bank is to be managed by a board of directors composed of governor, deputy governor, and seven directors appointed in the first instance by the government and subsequently by shareholders.

The new Bank of Canada is to be given sole right of note issue, the rights of chartered banks in this respect to be abridged from year to year. The chartered banks also are to surrender to the central institution all gold which they own and hold in Canada and any profits resulting from sale or revaluation of such gold shall be paid to the government. Likewise every person owning gold in Canada must transfer such gold to the Bank of Canada.

Would Have Branches.

The head office of the new Central bank is to be at Ottawa, with branches at strategic points across Canada.

Decennial bank act changes simultaneously introduced extend charters of existing commercial banks for ten years. The main change involves limitation to 7 per cent of interest rate chargeable by such banks with penalty provision for infraction.

GENERAL FOODS EARNINGS RISE TO $2.10 A SHARE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 22.—The preliminary annual statement of the General Foods corporation for 1933, made public today by C. M. Chester, president, showed net earnings of approximately $11,000,000, equivalent to $2.10 a share on 5,251,468 shares of no par value common stock. This compares with net earnings of $10,343,882 for 1932, equivalent to $1.97 a share on 5,251,501 shares of stock.

Mr. Chester said the company last year paid out $9,452,669 in dividends, or most of the earnings for the period, while in 1932, dividends were $13,167,787, or more than the company's earnings.

GOLD DUST NET RISES SLIGHTLY TO $1.30 A SHARE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 22.—Gold Dust corporation and subsidiaries today reported a net profit after all charges of $2,666,029, equal to $1.30 on the common stock, against last year's net of $2,513,549, or $1.22 a share.

George K. Marrow, chairman of the board, brought out the point that in order to coöperate with the policy of the New York Stock exchange attention was called to this item on the balance sheet: "Stocks of other companies at cost, exchange memberships, mortgages, long term notes and accounts receivable arising from assets, $5,305,954."

REPORT OF BIG STOCK SLUSH FUND IS DENIED

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock exchange, today told the house interstate commerce committee that the Fletcher-Rayburn bill for federal regulation of stock exchanges was so drastic it would be "detrimental to the entire investing public."

RICHARD WHITNEY

At the end of a day of alternating argument and conciliation climaxed by a sharp denial of a rumor that his organization had sent a two million dollar slush fund to Washington to beat the bill, he produced a substitute bill, much milder than the one under consideration.

Fletcher Feels "Triumphant."

The mere offering of this substitute caused Senator Fletcher [Dem., Fla.] to call his investigations a "triumph" and moved Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the senate committee, to exult: "It is certainly a victory for us when the stock exchange, for the first time in its history, presents a regulatory bill."

But the real excitement was on the house side, when Chairman Rayburn reported that each member of his committee had just received a wire from one Gene McCann [later identified by Whitney as the New York trader who is now suing the exchange for 60 millions] charging that the exchange had sent two million dollars to Washington in an effort to defeat the legislation.

For the first and only time during the day Mr. Whitney's voice lost its silky quality as he shouted:

"There isn't a word of truth in that story."

Representative Cooper Is "Mad."

Representative John G. Cooper [Rep., Ohio] also was "mad," but for another reason. He felt that when the newspapers carried the story of the McCann telegram the public "might get to thinking that some of us would take some of that money." So he wanted Chairman Rayburn to "fetch this fellow down here." Chairman Rayburn said he "didn't want him around."

In spite of Mr. Whitney's denial, Attorney Pecora, over on the senate side, has called George V. Harris, chairman of the exchange's publicity committee, to come down tomorrow to be questioned on what Senator Fletcher denounces as "a national propaganda campaign" against the bill.

Mr. Whitney is so fearful of the bill that he said he wouldn't think of serving as a governor of the exchange were it in operation. And he doubts if any of his colleagues would be willing to assume that responsibility, when "if we ever used our discretionary

J. I. CASE 1933 LOSSES ARE CUT TO $2,093,502

Reports Farm Situation Unfavorable.

As a result of the adverse conditions affecting agriculture, operations of the J. I. Case company, manufacturer of farm equipment, in 1933 resulted in a loss of $2,093,502, according to the annual report of Leon R. Clausen, president. The company operated at a loss of $2,611,081 in 1932.

"The company's business is largely dependent upon the farmers' purchases and such purchases depend upon conditions in agriculture," Mr. Clausen explained. "These conditions were unfavorable in 1933 and the year has consequently been very unsatisfactory for the company.

Lists Adverse Factors.

"Sales were adversely affected by: "A—The crop failures in extensive wheat areas of the United States and Canada.

"B—The acute banking situation which resulted in the declaration of bank holidays in various states, followed by the closing of all banks in the United States in the early part of the year. Deposits were tied up and in many localities bank credit was not available to the farmer. In all other sections extreme caution marked the granting of credits.

"C—The generally unfavorable agricultural and economic conditions throughout the world."

Sales Show Slight Gain.

Sales showed a slight improvement over the preceding year, Mr. Clausen said, and collections improved during the summer months due to the improvement in farm prices.

The 1933 loss was charged to earned surplus which as of Dec. 31, 1933, stood at $3,981,613 after payment of $407,300 preferred dividends.

The balance sheet showed current assets of $25,547,563 compared, with $32,521,685 at the end of 1932. Cash at the end of 1933 was $2,239,204, compared with $720,830 at the end of 1932. Customers' notes receivable were $17,248,424 and accounts receivable due from dealers were $653,326. After deducting $3,950,000 reserve for losses and collection expenses, receivables stood at $13,951,751 at the end of 1933. Current liabilities at the end of 1933 were $936,805, compared with $867,461 at the end of 1932. Mr. Clausen said the company closed 1933 without debt for borrowed money.

National Steel.

Investors' Guide: Please give what information you can on National Steel 5s, due in 1956. Give me the rating.—P. H. H.

Answer: National Steel corporation is the only major integrated steel manufacturer that has operated at a profit consistently for the last five years. Relatively heavy dependence on tin plate, the most profitable division of the industry, low manufacturing costs, and proximity to Detroit, automobile manufacturing center, were the major factors in maintaining operations at a satisfactory rate.

Despite labor troubles in the final quarter of 1933 the company covered its fixed charges 1½ times. Charges were earned 2.64 times for the full 1933 year, against 1.85 times in 1932.

At the close of 1932 cash assets of $6,215,000, compared with total current liabilities of $3,446,000.

The sinking fund requirement for the $38,000,000 first 5s, due 1956, provides for retirement of $1,000,000 of bonds a year. The bonds are secured by pledge of first mortgage bonds and stocks of subsidiaries.

Creditable record of earnings, strong current position and strong lien position entitle the bonds to a reasonably sound rating.

Viking Pump.

Investors' Guide: Please inform me as to the financial standing of Viking Pump.—S. N. J.

Answer: Viking Pump company manufactures "Viking" rotary pumps, used for handling gritless liquids. They are sold at prices ranging from $3 to several hundred dollars. The pumps find their greatest application in the oil industry, which constitutes the company's largest market. They are also used in the handling of other liquids.

Operations were profitable in each of the last seven years. In 1933 net profit was $122,000, which was 1.75 times preferred dividend requirements and equal to 49 cents per common share. Net profit in 1932 was $86,000, which was 1.16 times preferred dividend requirements and equal to 11 cents per common share. Net income in 1930 was $348,000, against $280,000 for the nine months to Dec. 31, 1929.

The company finished 1933 with current assets, including cash assets of $341,000, of $699,000 and current liabilities of $40,000. Total assets aggregated $1,500,000.

Capitalization consists of 30,373 shares of $2.40 dividend, cumulative no par preferred and 100,000 shares of no par common. There is no funded debt. Dividends have been paid regularly on the preferred, but nothing has ever been paid on the common.

The New York Central Railroad Company

Albany, N. Y., February 23, 1934.

To the Stockholders:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that a Special Meeting of the Stockholders of The New York Central Railroad Company has been called by the Board of Directors to be held at the principal office of the Company in the Union Depot in the City of Albany, New York, on Tuesday, the 24th day of April, 1934, at 12 o'clock noon, for the purposes of:

1. Approving, authorizing and consenting to: (a) changing the 7,000,000 authorized shares of capital stock of the Company, issued and unissued, into the same number of shares without par value; (b) the substitution, share for share, of 4,992,597-40/100 of such shares without par value for the present issued shares; (c) increasing the number of the authorized shares of capital stock of the Company from 7,000,000 to 10,000,000 shares, all without par value; (d) the issue, from time to time of the resulting unissued 5,007,402-60/100 of such shares without par value in such amounts, on such terms and for such considerations as shall be fixed by the Board of Directors, and empowering said Board, from time to time, to fix such amounts, terms and considerations; (e) fixing the stated capital and amount of capital stock of the Company upon and after the proposed change of the stock to shares without par value; (f) amendment of the Company's charter to effect such changes and provisions; (g) an increase of $59,911,100.00 in the indebtedness of the Company by the issue of that amount of bonds; and (h) the pledge of collateral to secure such bonds.

2. Empowering said Board to make any or all of said bonds convertible into capital shares of the Company existing such times, at such price or prices and on such terms as may be approved at said meeting or as may be fixed by said Board; making provision for reservation and issue of stock for conversion of such convertible bonds; and authorizing said Board to provide for the sale, pledge or other disposition of such of the convertible bonds as may not be purchased through the exercise of stockholders' preemptive rights (or the stock into which such bonds would be convertible) and of stock reserved for conversion of convertible bonds but not required therefor.

3. Approving, ratifying and consenting to action taken, or to be taken, by said Board in adopting resolutions providing for (a) the issue of $59,911,100.00 of the Company's 10-Year 5% Bonds to be secured by pledge of collateral as provided in said resolutions, to be convertible into the proposed no-par-value shares of the Company's capital stock at the conversion price of $40 per share for the first 3 years and $50 per share for the next 7 years and to be offered, for subscription, to the stockholders of record at 3 o'clock P.M. on March 5, 1934, (b) underwriting arrangements in connection with such offering, and (c) incidental matters.

4. Authorizing the execution of such papers and the doing of such other things as may be necessary or convenient incident to the foregoing.

Stockholders of record at 3 o'clock P.M. on March 16, 1934, will be entitled to vote at said meeting, subject to statutory requirements.

By order of the Board of Directors.

E. F. STEPHENSON, Secretary.

REPORT OF STOCK EXCHANGE LOBBY FUND IS DENIED

Whitney Proposes New Plan for Control.

Under the title of "constructive suggestions," Mr. Whitney, just before adjournment, offered his substitute plan. It calls for the creation of a stock exchange coördinating authority, consisting of seven members, chosen as follows: 2 appointed by the President; 2 cabinet members [the secretary of the treasury and the secretary of commerce would be his choice]; 1 appointed by the open market committee of the federal reserve system; and 2 representing stock exchanges [1 to be designated by the New York stock exchange, the other to be elected by the other exchanges].

This committee, under the plan, would be given plenary power to control margins and to enforce rules preventing unfair trade practices and "unduly" stimulated speculation.

Gives View On Control.

Without specifying precisely what these rules might be, he said he was pretty sure they would include the fixing of requirements for listing of securities and the control of pools and syndicates.

His thesis, earlier, had been that the stock exchange has been putting its house in order, year by year, and has found its "questionnaire" system extremely satisfactory.

This prompted several committee members, simultaneously, to query: "What about the pool in whisky stocks?"

"Our questionnaires," he replied, "revealed no evidence of a pool in the alcohol stocks. As a matter of fact, it wasn't until the senate investigating committee received a tip from some one that they knew anything about it, either."

Admits Pool Existent.

"Then, there was a pool?" persisted the congressman.

"Yes," said Mr. Whitney, "but it it engaged in by outsiders; not by any member of our exchange."

He further argued that the flurry in alcohol stocks in the spring of 1933 was due to a "craze of speculation over the entire country. The stocks went because the public insisted on taking them."

"Yes, but there was a lot of window dressing," insisted Representative Clarence Lea, [Dem., Cal.].

Mr. Whitney was sure the window dressing had not been excessive.

"But truly I do not know how anybody can stop the excessive fluctuations of the market," he declared. "That lies entirely with the people."

Wants No More Booms.

He feels that excessive fluctuation is bad from every point of view, and hopes to heaven we'll never have another 1929 boom, with its resultant depression; but admits "absolutely the inability of any one to control or influence the minds of men who make up supply and demand."

Specifically he centered much of his opposition to the bill on the minimum margin requirements, which, he declared, are too rigid for such a flexible situation, which are "utterly unworkable," and which would be "detrimental to the public." Its operation would, he believes, force the liquidation of many securities, both by brokers and banks, at a time "when no market capable of absorbing such liquidations may exist."

Today's session ended the senate banking and currency committee's investigation into pools on the New York Stock exchange. Hearings on the Fletcher-Rayburn stock exchange bill will begin at 10 o'clock Monday morning.
